FARMERS' REVOLT CUTS CITY'S MILK SUPPLY BY HALF

BOTH SIDES DETERMINED

Up-State Producers Say They Will Bring In Enough Milk for Babies and Hospitals.

CRY TO ATTORNEY GENERAL

President of Sheffield Co. Charges Farmers Have Combined in Restraint of Trade.

The first day of an actual test of strength between New York's milk producers and milk distributors resulted in such a great curtailment of milk shipments to this city last night that the distributors estimated that today they would be able to deliver only 50 to 65 per cent. of the city's normal milk supply. A large part of that, it was said, would be milk several days old that had been held in reserve for the tie-up. The day also started what may become a legal battle to destroy the farmers' new Dairymen's League.

Tomorrow, it was estimated, the deliveries would fall down to 30 to 40 per cent. of normal, and by Thursday the city may receive less than 15 per cent. of its normal supply of 2,400,000 quarts daily.

Shipments Cut 90 Per Cent.

Dispatches to THE NEW YORK TIMES from the principal milk producing counties of the State showed last night that the effort of the Dairymen's League to cut off New York City's milk supply had been largely successful. From some counties it was reported that no milk at all had been shipped to the city, while from other counties it was estimated not more than 10 per cent. had gone forward. In only one or two counties were anything like the normal shipments made. Eighty per cent. of the city's milk supply comes from New York State dairymen.

Reports from Broome County said that the last car of milk had been shipped to New York City from that source until a settlement was made; Tompkins County sent a similar report; Delaware County reported only a negligible amount going forward after yesterday morning; Chenango County reported the shipment of two cars of milk instead of the normal hundred or more cars; it was said in Oswego County that more than 75 per cent. of the supply had been cut off. Sussex County, N. J., made 10 per cent. of normal shipments; Putnam farmers said not one quart went from there yesterday, and Dutchess County shipped forty cans of milk instead of several thousand. From Albany County it was reported that a large part of the normal supply was shipped yesterday.

It was impossible to obtain from the freight departments of the railroads that night the number of quarts of milk which arrived in the city yesterday. At the freight yards of the Erie Railroad it was said no shortage in the milk shipments had been noticed up to a late hour. On the New York Central, which has an order for 400 gallons a day, no shortage in the usual supply was noticed last night. At the Lackawanna freight yards in Hoboken no record is kept of the amount of milk received during the night and morning, but no shortage was noticed. At the New York, Ontario & Western yards in Weehawken it was said that there was an excess in the usual supply of milk passing through the yards Saturday night and yesterday morning, but that last night there was a marked falling off in the quantity.

Both Sides Determined.

The factions were more determined than ever to stand their ground yesterday. The contracts of the distributing corporations with New York and New Jersey farmers ended yesterday morning, and the 17,000 members of the Dairymen's League of Farmers were determined not to renew the old individual contracts, while the officials of the distributing corporations flatly refused to have any dealings with the league as a body and devoted the day to efforts to procure milk from distant States.

The distributors yesterday afternoon commenced efforts to have the State Attorney General break the farmers' league on the ground that it is a combination in restraint of trade. A dispatch to THE TIMES from Albany last night stated that Attorney General Woodbury would give the matter his immediate investigation.

The supply was practically normal yesterday, but that was because the milk shipped to the city Saturday night and Sunday morning for Sunday morning distribution was Friday's and Saturday's milk, supplied by the farmers under the old contracts.

Commissioner John J. Dillon, representing the Dairymen's League, said that the league itself would begin making deliveries in the city early this week and would be able to deliver 7,000 forty-quart cans, or 280,000 quarts of milk, a day. This represents about 10 per cent. of the city's normal daily consumption of milk.

From some of the rural communities that ordinarily send large quantities of milk to this city not a drop of milk was shipped yesterday for this morning's distribution. In a number of cases violence was reported in the vicinity

TRAIN STRIKES CAR; 14 KILLED; 25 HURT

Detroit Street Car Crowded With Theatregoers, Hit by Switch Engine's Trailers.

Detroit, Oct. 1.—Fourteen persons were killed and more than twenty-five injured, several probably fatally, late tonight when a switch engine pushing two freight cars crashed into a crowded street car at Forest Avenue and Dequinder Street on the east side.

There were more than ninety persons in the street car, many of them returning from the theatres.

The street car was struck almost in the centre, the impact pushing it from the tracks and sliding it alongside of the freight cars.

Panic-stricken passengers began jumping from both the front and rear doors and climbing through windows. Most of the victims were killed by jumping from the car and falling under the wheels of the still moving freight cars.

53 INJURED IN CHURCH AS FLOOR COLLAPSES

At Corner Stone Laying in Johnson City, N. Y.—250 Plunge Into Basement.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Fifty-three persons were injured this afternoon when the floor of the First Presbyterian Church of Johnson City, a suburb of this place, collapsed at the services being held in connection with the laying of the cornerstone. Seven of this number are seriously hurt, but it is believed all will recover.

Two hundred and fifty persons were hurled into the basement eighteen feet below when the floor gave way and it was nearly a half hour before all had been removed. The speakers were in their chairs and the band was playing the opening number when the accident happened. There was no warning, the slender timbers supporting the floor giving way almost in an instant. Twelve doctors and three ambulances cared for the injured.

FOUR VESSELS SUNK, TWO NORWEGIANS

British Schooners William George and Pearl of Truro, and Manuel and Rolf Jarl Destroyed.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The British schooners William George, 151 tons, and Pearl of Truro, 144 tons, and the Norwegian schooner Manuel of Tonsberg have been sunk.

The Norwegian steamer Rolf Jarl, 1,265 tons, has been torpedoed, according to a Reuter dispatch from Trondhjem. The crew was saved.

GERMANY WILL SUPPLY COAL TO SWITZERLAND

Free Exchange of Surplus Products by the Trade Agreement Newly Signed.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Tre trade agreement reacred between Germany and Switzerland, according to a Berlin telegram rereived at Amsterdam, says a Reuter dispatch, stipulates that each country's own products and goods, so far as they are not necessary for home consumption, may be exchanged. Germany is said to have pledged supplies of 253,000 tons of coal a month as well as quantities of iron and steel which Switzerland wants to meet her own needs. Both parties have agreed to a speedy settlement of the question of export permits.

Regarding German goods stored in Switzerland, for which no export permit can be granted at present, the Swiss Government has agreed to refrain from seizure or destruction and has promised to release thm aftr th cssation of hostilities.

Requets for the exportation of war materials manufactured in Switzerland from raw material obtained in Germany will be submitted to the examination of a special Swiss Export Committee. The agreement, the dispatch says, will expire at the end of April, 1917.

ALBERT BALLIN DENIES SEEKING HASTY PEACE

Says He and Other Shipping Men Want Only Lasting and Honorable Terms for Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 1.—The Berlin papers publish a letter by Albert Ballin of the Hamburg-American Line to Dr. Stresemann, a member of the Reichstag, in which he makes clear his attitude toward certain rumors insinuating undue influence by German shipping interests upon the conduct of the war. Herr Ballin says:

"I always thought the world had room enough for ourselves and England, also for America, and a few other powers besides. Still, I believe this insane war might have been avoided if the English statesmen had acted wisely. Contrary interests necessarily lead to war if the leading men become subservient to them instead of making themselves masters of them, like Bismarck did.

"Now that war has come, rumor imputes to me the idea that by yielding and abstaining from victory we might achieve that for which we worked during the last peaceful years. That is a most absurd idea which ought not to be imputed to one who for a whole lifetime has fought an economical war against England, wresting from her one intrenchment after another. In Hamburg everybody, and I in particular, desires that England may as soon as possible be compelled to make a peace which must be honorable and just to us, and which will secure to us as sure a political freedom as we enjoyed in the days of Bismarck. By what means this end may be gained neither I nor any other private person can possibly claim exclusive judgment. That must remain any denial is superfluous men, of whom, thank God, Hindenburg and Ludendorff are two. If, however, the slanderers go as far as Herr Junius Alter, who intimates that the intentions of responsible men are impeded by the private interests of the Hamburg-American Line, I think

"The damage to which the measure in question might subject shipping interests would be more than covered by the war expenses of only three days. However, even though our losses may never be restituted, there is no German shipowner of so mean a mind as not gladly to sacrifice even much more if our great aim might thus be aided."

CAR STRIKE MOBS FIGHT THE POLICE IN WESTCHESTER

CLUBS PLIED, BRICKS FLY

MAHON FAILS TO ARRIVE

Sympathy Strike Continues to Wane in City—Suburbs May Repeal Strikebreaker Laws.

Angered by riotous interference with attempts to run trolley cars on the Westchester subsidiary lines of the Third Avenue Railway Company yesterday, Mayor Fiske of Mount Vernon determined to call a special meeting of the Board of Aldermen today to repeal the law which prevents the use of strikebreakers on the cars. The Mayor said he thought the Aldermen would uphold him.

At the same time the Mayor, who, after arming himself, had led the police in a day-long fight with strikers, declared his purpose to protect transit operation, even if he had to demand the militia.

The Anti-strikebreakers law was passed while the Yonkers strike of 1913 was on, and has effectually prevented any attempts to break the present strike because it forbids employment on cars of crews who have not had fifteen days' experience on them under competent instructors.

The Third Avenue Company has been the most liberal user of strikebreakers on its New York City cars. Its President, Frederick W. Whitridge, had refused for several weeks to attempt operation in Westchester, largely because he hoped complete dearth of trolley service would force the repeal of the ordinance. It is understood he will use the same methods to restore service in Westchester as he did in New York if the law is rescinded.

Franchises Require Operation.

Efforts of the company to run a few cars over its lines north of the Bronx today were due to franchise provisions requiring them to maintain a certain degree of service. In Yonkers, as in Mount Vernon and Pelham, an attempt to run but eight cars in all, taxed the police forces to the utmost and ended only after clubs had been swung, motor cycles had been ridden head-on into crowds, and rolling stock had been badly damaged.

The Yonkers Railroad Company tried to run two cars from its barns in that city to the Van Cortlandt Park terminus of the Broadway subway. The motormen and conductors of both cars were beaten severely by mobs of strikers and sympathizers, who gathered in large numbers. Bricks and stones smashed every window in both cars shortly after they had left the shelter of the barns. Strikers swarmed aboard them and forced the motormen to halt, and the few policemen on hand, finding themselves powerless, had to call for assistance.

The entire police force of 200 men came on the run, but so bitter were the crowds about the cars that the men in uniform had to charge them repeatedly, swinging their clubs hard, before they cleared the streets.

One of the cars finally reached its destination after some twenty of its molestors had been locked up. The other was reversed, and put on all speed back to the barn.

Fridiger Pleads for Order.

In Pelham, the Westchester Electric Railroad Company, another Third Avenue subsidiary, tried to run a single car. Strikers attacked it, smashing all the windows and plugging up switches so it couldn't turn corners. It was soon housed.

In Mount Vernon the disorder was widespread and intermittent throughout the day. Louis Fridiger, counsel for the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, pleaded with the strikers to desist from violence, telling them they were merely hurting their own cause, but the men refused to take his advice.

Mayor Fiske patrolled the Mount Vernon lines with Michael Silverstein, Chief of Police, in an automobile. The situation became so threatening for a time that the Mayor contemplated calling out the Fire Department, as well as every policeman in the city. Strikers from New Rochelle joined with those living in Mount Vernon in hampering the movement of the trolleys.

The crowd formed a solid square across the tracks in Third Street and refused to let a car pass until motor cycle patrolmen had ridden through them. A few moments later Arthur Patterson, conductor on a Fifth Avenue line car, was struck on the head with a stone.

Mahon Fails to Arrive.

With the failure of William Mahon, President of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America to return from Europe yesterday, all prospect of the transit strike being called off disappeared. Labor leaders met each of the three incoming steamers yesterday, and were apparently much at sea as to when Mr. Mahon might be expected.

William B. Fitzgerald, General Organizer of the Amalgamated, who has persisted in declaring the strikers were winning, is known to be determined to

Fourth Zeppelin Is Brought Down in Another Raid Upon London

Thousands of Residents of British Capital Cheer the Downfall in Flames of One of Several Airships Which Approached the Capital.

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 2, 12:45 A. M.—Another Zeppelin raid against London and the east coast of England is in progress. One airship was brought down in flames north of London.

Advices from the suburbs give graphic accounts of the manner in which the Zeppelin (the fourth to be brought down on English soil) fell a victim to the anti-aircraft defenses.

The spectacle of the descending, blazing mass was witnessed by thousands of Londoners, who showed their satisfaction by loud cheering.

The Zeppelin began to fall slowly, and then dropped very fast, the blaze lighting up the countryside for many miles like day.

An official statement issued shortly after midnight reads:

"A number of hostile airships crossed the east coast between 9 o'clock and midnight. A few bombs were dropped near the coast, but no damage is yet reported.

"The raid is still in progress, and some airships are in the vicinity of London, where some guns have been in action.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 2.—A writer in a morning newspaper, telling of the winging of the Zeppelin, says:

"It was about 11:30 when searchlights first began to stab the sky and a humming in the air indicated the presence of a Zeppelin in this district. At about quarter to 12 heavy firing was heard.

"The Zeppelin was then seen, looking like a silver pencil, and very high up. The guns continued to fire at it, but soon afterward it disappeared. Five minutes later guns began firing again, and some shells burst very close to their objective.

"Then a red spot glowed in the sky just as on the previous occasion a week ago. The light traveled from point to point along the back of the Zeppelin, which flared up and, dropping into a perpendicular position began its descent. It seemed at first to drop rather slowly. Immediately it disappeared the sky was lit up.

Another writer says sparks and flames a thousand feet high illuminated the entire district with a red glare.

Another correspondent states that the descent of the burning raider was swift, the whole incident being over in about fifteen seconds.

A farmer, in whose field the raider came down, gave the following account of its destruction:

"It was nearly midnight when I first heard the guns. I warned my wife and we got up. I went out in front of the house and there I saw a Zeppelin almost above us.

"It seemed as if it might fall at any moment on the house. I took my children to safety. A second or two later the great thing began to fall. It was one mass of flames. It actually fell in a field behind my farmyard and quite close to a haystack. So far as I know it has not done any damage, but it is possible some of my cows may have been killed."

Sees More Peril for Zeppelins.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 1.—The military critic of the Frankfurter Zeitung says conditions for Zeppelin attacks on England are much more difficult than a year ago. The British, he says, have had time to carry their defense measures to the highest perfection.

Four Zeppelin raids on London and the east coast have been carried out in the past month, the more recent attacks being made by airships of the newer and bigger type. On Sept. 2 one Zeppelin was struck while flying over the London district and fell in flames.

Two Zeppelins were destroyed in the raid of Sept. 23. On that occasion the raiders killed thirty-eight and wounded 125 persons. The following night, in another raid, in which the airships apparently escaped without damage, they killed thirty-six persons and wounded twenty-seven.

In the raid of Sept. 2 only two persons suffered death and thirteen were injured.

SENATOR CLARKE OF ARKANSAS DIES

HIS STRIKING PUBLIC CAREER

Often Went Outside Party Lines to Favor or Oppose Measures—Held Other Offices.

Special to The New York Times.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 1.—United States Senator James P. Clarke died at his home here at 1 o'clock this afternoon. He was taken ill suddenly with acute indigestion in his office Wednesday afternoon, and Saturday was stricken with paralysis, since when he had been unconscious. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. Joseph W. House, Jr., and Mrs. Robert Williams, and one son, James P. Clarke.

Associate Justice W. F. Kirby, who opposed him in the primaries two years ago, will likely be appointed to succeed him, as the Associate Justice and Governor Hays are close political friends.

A meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee will be called at once to name a candidate as his permanent successor, who must be elected in November. The nomination must be made at once as, under the law, the date for certifying all nominations in this State expires on Saturday next.

Senator Clarke's action when the eight-hour railroad bill was passed brought him into great prominence. He was in the chair, and was one of the two Democratic Senators to refuse to sign it. When it was presented to him for his signature, he appointed Senator Hughes of New Jersey as acting President pro tempore, and Senator Hughes signed it as the presiding officer of the Senate.

Senator Clarke's stand against the eight-hour bill was typical of an independence that characterized his attitude during all the thirteen years of his Senatorial career. Many times he was the leader in opposition to measures proposed by his party. The climax of his independence was reached when he led the Democratic objectors against the Ship Purchase bill. His action gave new life to the Republican filibuster, and made the passage of the bill impossible. During the last session, when the bill was reintroduced, with the Government ownership and operation features to which he objected revised and modified, he gave to it his support.

Again during the last session, Senator Clarke surprised his colleagues when he proposed the amendment to the Philippine bill which would have given absolute independence to the islands at the end of four years. The Administration indorsed his amendment and it was adopted by the Senate, the House, however, refusing to accept it.

A Native of Mississippi.

Senator Clarke's second appointment as President pro tempore of the Senate last December, came after a contest in the Democratic caucus. Part of the opposition to him was based on his refusal to conform to the policy of the Administration during the previous session. His opponents objected to him personally, declaring he was arbitrary and dictatorial, and another element of the opposition was created due to that place in the last Congress for the purpose of aiding him in his race for re-election to the Senate. His action on the Ship Purchase bill was also held against him. However, on Dec. 8, 1915, the final ballot showed 28 votes for Senator Clarke and 23 for Senator Pomerene of Ohio.

He was born in Yazoo, Miss., and was a son of the late Walter Clarke and Mrs. Ellen White Clarke. After receiving his early education in the public schools and academies of his native State, Senator Clarke attended the University of Virginia, from which he was graduated in 1878, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. During the same year he was admitted to the bar and went to

STEAM SUBDUES FIRE IN THE PHILADELPHIA

UNDER CONTROL IN AN HOUR

Forty Irish Girls Had Quarters Directly Above Blaze, but Knew Nothing of It.

The American liner Philadelphia arrived from Liverpool yesterday with thin wisps of steam coming out of No. 7 batch—the only indication of a fire which was discovered in the hold on Thursday afternoon, when the ship was about 800 miles out, and of which not more than half a dozen of the ship's 646 passengers knew anything until they disembarked.

When smoke was discovered coming from the hold, which was full of woolen goods, steam was turned on immediately, and the fire was under control within an hour. Captain Candy, however, ordered that the hold be kept full of steam and a watch kept over it, and these precautions will be continued until the men on the pier are ready to unload the cargo, although it is practically certain that the fire was out long before the vessel arrived.

The fire was under the "T" section of the steerage, immediately below the immigrant dining room, but so unobtrusively did the crew go about the work of extinguishing it that the forty Irish girls who occupied the sleeping quarters directly over the blaze knew nothing about it. One of the few cabin passengers aware of it was Professor Joseph Byrne of Fordham University, a specialist in nervous disorders, who was told by one of the officers shortly before dinner on Thursday night. He kept the information to himself. At dinner, he said, he noticed that the stewards looked pallid, frequently dropped plates, and talked to each other now and then in nervous whispers. Professor Byrne spent the night on deck, and said that most of the stewards did likewise, because the saloons and cabins were uncomfortably warm.

Captain Candy said that the fire might have started from spontaneous combustion in a bale of cloth, and other officers suggested that it might have been caused by the carelessness of longshoremen in Liverpool in throwing a lighted cigarette into the hold.

The New York, which sailed on Saturday for Liverpool, had a fire in one of her forward coal bunkers on the preceding eastward voyage which gave some trouble before it was subdued. Captain Roberts and his officers said they believed that this fire was caused by spontaneous combustion in damp coal and was not of incendiary origin.

TWO DIE IN BROOKLYN FIRE.

Aged Women's Bodies Found in Home Where They Perished.

Policeman Edward Delaney discovered fire on the second floor of a three-story frame house at 491 Bergen Street, Brooklyn, near Sixth Avenue, shortly after 11 o'clock last night. After turning in an alarm Delaney ran through the building and found that most of the tenants were out, but on the top floor he found Patrick Shay, who lived alone, lying on the floor in a stupor. Delaney carried him downstairs through the smoke, and a surgeon from the Holy Family Hospital resuscitated him.

All the other apartments were emptied except the top floor back, which was occupied by two elderly spinsters, Miss Sarah Veeder and Miss Caroline Cutherbeck, aged 70 and 68, respectively. Fireman Quigley found them seated in the smoke-filled dining room, their heads on the backs of their chairs, as if the smoke had found them asleep. He tried to carry them out, but was himself overcome on the stairs and was senseless when other firemen rescued him. Quigley was revived with ease, but Miss Veeder and Miss Cutherbeck were both dead. The fire, which had started in a hallway on the second floor, was extinguished with about $1,000 worth of damage.

BRITISH SWEEP ON TOWARD BAPAUME, TAKING TRENCHES ON 3,000-YARD FRONT; RUSSIANS RESUME DRIVE AT LEMBERG

Teutons Took 3,000 Rumanians at Hermannstadt, And Also Captured a Huge Amount of Booty There

BERLIN, Oct. 1, (via London.)—More than 3,000 prisoners have been taken by the Germans in the battle near Hermannstadt, Transylvania, where the First Rumanian Army was defeated and dispersed. Thirteen guns and a large quantity of war supplies also have been captured. Rumanian attacks have been repulsed. The following is the official account of operations in the Transylvania theatre:

On the eastern front Rumanian attacks in Maros Valley were repulsed. In Georgen Valley and further south our vanguards partly evaded the enemy's thrust. The booty taken by German troops in the fighting south of Henndorf has been increased by eight cannon. Northwest of Fogaras the enemy has ceased to attack.

As a result of the battle of Hermannstadt more than 3,000 prisoners and 13 guns were brought in up to yesterday. One hangar, 2 aeroplanes, 10 locomotives, 300 railroad cars laden with munitions, more than 200 munition wagons, more than 200 loaded baggage wagons, 70 transport wagons, and one hospital train also have been taken. Further material is being brought in gradually from the woods. Rothenthurm Pass is filled with vehicles blown to pieces by our fire.

South of the pass strong Rumanian attacks, directed against the height west of Caineni, were repulsed. In the Hatzegar Mountains the enemy made a fruitless attack west of Strell Sztrigy Valley.

An Austro-Hungarian Danube flotilla forced an entry into the harbor of Corabia, destroyed nine vessels and captured seven partly laden ships.

VIENNA, Oct. 1, (via London.)—The victory gained over the Rumanians in the Hermannstadt region of Transylvania by General von Falkenhayn's army was complete, and the Rumanian Army was dispersed, the War Office announced today.

The report says:

Near Hermannstadt German and Austro-Hungarian forces under command of General von Falkenhayn gained a complete victory. Four days ago, by a wide encircling movement, a column of Bavarian troops blocked the road through Rothenthurm Pass, in the enemy's rear. All the enemy's attempts to reopen the road were fruitless.

Simultaneously Austro-Hungarian and German troops from the west, north, and south advanced against the Rumanian divisions operating south of Hermannstadt. The enemy fought desperately in the battle, which was of the most sanguinary character. Deprived of any practicable roads, the remnants of the Rumanian troops fled into the Fogaras Mountains. The number of prisoners taken is increasing hourly, while the amount of booty is enormous, as the enemy had to abandon a wagon park which he did not have time to destroy.

An offensive resumed on Sept. 28 by the Rumanians against the Transylvanian eastern front was not able to alter the result of this battle, although north of Fogaras and near Szekely Udvarhely and Oderhellen our advanced troops had to retire on the main forces. On the other hand, the Germans in a counterattack south of Hendorf captured eleven Rumanian officers, 591 men, and three machine guns.

BRITISH SMASH BULGARIAN LINE

SERBS CONTINUE GAINS

All of Kaimakcalan Is Now Held After Rout of Defenders and Capture of a Battery.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Following a terrific bombardment of the Bulgar positions on the Struma south of Orljak, British troops broke the enemy line, taking two fortified villages at the point of the bayonet and capturing also several hundred prisoners.

On the left bank of the Struma the British, after strong artillery preparation, captured by a brilliant assault two fortified villages near the Seres Road. Several hundred prisoners, including 200 unwounded, fell into their hands.

Patrol encounters occurred at the foot of Mount Beles. From Lake Doiran to the Vardar the cannonading was intermittent.

In the region of Kaimakcalan the Serbians attacked the heights, which were strongly held by the Bulgarians. Gallantly our allies mastered the resistance of the enemy, who was forced to abandon the position, leaving numerous dead. The Serbians captured a Bulgarian battery.

The British official report is more chary of details. It reads:

Doiran Front: Our artillery has been active.

After stubborn fighting and heavy artillery preparation our gains were extended during the evening. Six counterattacks were successfully broken up during the day. A hundred prisoners already have been passed back.

The fighting continues.

The Serbians on Saturday gained an important success at Kaimakcalan, says a Reuter dispatch from Saloniki. After violent artillery preparation, causing frightful havoc in the ranks of the Bulgarians, the Serbian infantry executed a brilliant attack, capturing all the remaining points on this position.

The ground was covered with dead Bulgarians, and the Bulgarian survivors fled panic-stricken. The Serbians captured a complete battery of mountain guns and recaptured a gun and three bomb-throwers abandoned during a recent Bulgarian counterattack, besides taking a quantity of war material and machine guns.

The Serbian advance continues, the dispatch adds.

SOFIA, Sept. 30, (via London, Oct. 2.)—The official communication from General Headquarters issued today reads:

On the front east and west of Florina the situation is unchanged. At some points there has been weak artillery fire. On the heights of Kaimakcalan there has been vigorous artillery firing. Astride the Moglena Valley artillery activity has been weak. On both sides of the Vardar

NEW STRUGGLE BEGUN IN GALICIA

ROUND UP 4,000 PRISONERS

Berlin Admits Foe Has Gained a Foothold in the Austro-German Positions.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 1.—The Russian drive at Lemberg was renewed yesterday. After a period of comparative inactivity the Russians inaugurated strong offensive movements north and south of the Galician capital. According to today's War Office report, material successes have been won. It is said Austro-German positions were penetrated and that more than 4,000 prisoners were taken. The Teutonic forces are offering bitter resistance. The announcement follows:

In the region south of Riga a German aeroplane, hit by our artillery, fell into the enemy line.

In the neighborhood of the Brody-Krasne railroad line (Krasne is thirty miles northeast of Lemberg) and to the south thereof fighting is taking place, our troops forcing their way forward. The enemy is offering stubborn resistance. We captured 50 officers and 1,928 men.

Fighting is proceeding in our favor south of Brzezany, (fifty miles southeast of Lemberg,) on the river Tseniurka, and in the region of the heights on the right bank of the Ziota Lipa. Here we captured part of the enemy position by assault, taking during this operation 112 officers and 2,268 men. We also captured several machine guns. Enemy counterattacks during the night were frustrated by our fire.

In the same region an aerial encounter with a German Albatross took place. The gallant Staff Cavalry Captain Tchirkoff attacked the enemy aeroplane and forced it to descend abruptly in the German lines.

The struggle along the entire southwestern front continues with undiminished intensity, but without salient episodes or changes in the general situation.

The Germans are piling up reserves in the neighborhood of Vladimir-Volynski, where they are trying desperately to wrest the initiative from General Brussiloff's armies, but according to the accounts of observers, despite the considerable concentration of forces, the Germans are no longer able to spare enough men to deliver the old time smashing blows, which by sheer numbers of shells and men drove at all costs through the opposing lines.

There has also been renewed activity near Halicz, which still appears to rest securely in Austro-German hands.

The town is, however, under the fire of Russian guns. Here, as further north, the Germans are struggling to launch a successful offensive, which thus far has always been defeated in its preliminary stages by a Russian counterattack.

BERLIN, Oct. 1, (via London.)—The Russians have assumed the offensive once more, striking out with great force above and below Lemberg. Southeast of the Galician capital they gained a foothold in the Austro-German positions, the War Office announced today. An

They Push Forward North of Rancourt and Southeast of Morval.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—British troops in the centre along the Somme line have made an advance on a 3,000-yard front from east of Eaucourt l'Abbaye to the Albert-Bapaume Road, according to the official statement from headquarters, issued late tonight.

Eaucourt l'Abbaye itself is reported to be in the hands of the British. The operations were aided by the armored "tanks," the official report saying that they did "valuable work."

General Sir Douglas Haig also announces that since Sept. 18 the British have captured twenty-four field guns, three field howitzers, and three heavy howitzers. The total number of prisoners taken by the British in this area since July 1, the beginning of the offensive, is 26,735.

The British afternoon report says Haig's troops have captured almost all of Schwaben redoubt, where the Germans have clung tenaciously to their positions.

The bulletin of the French War Office issued this evening says that French troops have captured some elements of trenches to the north of Rancourt and southeast of Morval on the Somme front. General Foch is also endeavoring to press forward along the banks of the Somme southeast of Clary.

The text of tonight's report from British Headquarters follows:

Sunday afternoon, south of the Ancre, our centre attacked and captured the whole of its objective on a front of 3,000 yards, from a point east of Eaucourt l'Abbaye to the Albert-Bapaume road, northeast of Destemont Farm. The village of Eaucourt l'Abbaye is reported to be in our hands.

Further east we pushed our outposts well beyond the original front line. More than 300 prisoners have already been taken, and our casualties up to the present are small.

In this action the new armored cars have done valuable work in clearing the enemy trenches behind the infantry advance.

The village of Transloy (north of Morval) was effectively bombarded by our artillery and an ammunition dump blown up.

On Saturday two aeroplanes were successfully bombed by our aeroplanes and at least one machine was destroyed. In the fighting over this front four enemy machines were brought down. One of our machines is missing.

Enemy troops and transports were repeatedly attacked from the air with machine gun fire, and in one instance several hundred infantry were dispersed.

Since Sept. 18 we have taken between the Ancre and the Somme 24 field guns, 3 field howitzers, and 3 heavy howitzers.

From July 1 to Sept. 30 in the same area we made prisoner 583 officers and 26,147 other ranks.

The British afternoon report follows:

During the night some progress was made between Flers and Le Sars. There was heavy shelling in that neighborhood, and also around Gueudecourt.

In the Thiepval area the enemy was driven out of ground he held near the Staff Redoubt. We increased our gains at Schwaben Redoubt, only a minute portion whereof remains untaken.

Sixteen raids were carried out successfully last night on our front between Ypres and Neuve Chapelle. A numbr of prisoners were taken and much loss was inflicted on the enemy.

A captured German army order, dated Sept. 21, emphasizes the importance at that time of the position at Les Boeufs as "the last protection of the artillery, which must in no circumstances be lost." We captured this position a few days afterward.

Germans Attack in Champagne.

The French night communiqué reads:

On the Somme front we carried out during the day some small operations which enabled us to capture trench elements north of Rancourt and southeast of Morval.

There was reciprocal shelling at different points along the front, especially violent south of the Somme.

In Champagne, in the region south of the Butte de Mesnil, the enemy attempted two sudden attacks after lively bombardments. Our curtain fires immediately checked one attempt, and the other, east of Tahure, also failed.

Everywhere else there was the usual cannonade.

Aviation.—A captive balloon was

The French afternoon communique follows:

On the Somme front there was considerable artillery activity. We made some progress during the night by hand grenade fighting to the southeast of Norval and along the Somme to the southeast of Cléry.

Elsewhere on the front there was intermittent cannonading.

Attacks Repulsed, Says Berlin.

BERLIN, Oct. 1, (via London.)—The British and French renewed their attacks on the Somme front yesterday, and desperate hand-to-hand fighting resulted. The official report of today says the assaults were repulsed. The announcement follows:

Against the front of Duke Albrecht of Württemberg and also against the Flanders and Artois front of Prince Rupprecht's army the British developed particularly lively patrol activity.

On the battlefront north of the Somme the artillery fighting attained great violence in the afternoon. Near and east of Thiepval strong British attacks again developed. As on previous days, they were repulsed by the troops of Generals von Stein and Six on Armin after desperate hand-to-hand fighting.

From Rancourt and the west thereof French regiments made fruitless attacks against our positions. Local attacks from Courcelette, Morval, and northwest of Halles (one and a quarter miles northwest of Péronne) broke down under our curtain of fire.

AUSTRIANS PUT TO FLIGHT.

ROME, Oct. 1.—The Italian War Office issued this statement today:

In the Travenanzes Valley of the Upper Boite Italian Alpine troops attacked and drove out enemy detachments which had intrenched themselves on the southeastern slopes of Monte Lagazuoi and of Pizzo di Fanis. In his flight the enemy left a large amount of war material and some prisoners in our hands.

On the Jilian front there were only intermittent artillery actions.

Enemy batteries bombarded Merna and Vertoiba. A few shells also fell on Gorizia.

VIENNA, Oct. 1, (via London.)—This report of the progress of the Italian campaign was given out today:

Hostile artillery and bomb-throwers were more active on the Carso Plateau.

Seven more Italians who were still alive, including a cadet, were rescued on Monte Cimone.

$10,000 THAT ALLIES WIN.

Havana Newspaper Offers Wager on the Result of the War.

La Lucha of Havana, a leading newspaper of Cuba, announces through its correspondent here that it is willing to wager $10,000 that the Allies will win the war.

La Lucha will accept a wager from any part of the world, its offer remaining open until Oct. 7.

quiet has prevailed except south of Doiran, where a minor artillery action has been in progress.

On the Struma front there has been little artillery activity. At the Kofreva Bridge one of our patrols destroyed an English patrol of five men.

BERLIN, Oct. 1, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—The capture by the Serbians of Kaimakcalan Height, on the western end of the Macedonian front, for possession of which heavy fighting between the Serbians and the Bulgarians has been in progress for some time, was announced by the War Office today. The announcement regarding the Macedonian campaign follows:

At many points between Presba Lake and the Vardar River there were spirited artillery engagements. An isolated attack undertaken by the enemy was stopped.

By a strong attack the enemy captured the summit of Kaimakcalan.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 2.—A special correspondent with the Serbian army in a dispatch from Ostrovo describing the Bulgarians' determined attempt on Sept. 25 to recapture Kaimakcalan, which position is essential to the defense of Monastir, says:

"To obtain the maximum effort of which his men were capable, the enemy commander had recourse to an expedient familiar in some continental armies from prisoners' admissions, confirmed by unmistakable olfactory evidence. It is clear that the attacking troops on this occasion had been well primed with raw spirits.

"The rush of this half intoxicated host was so sudden and impetuous that the Serbian advanced line was overwhelmed after a brave but brief resistance, and the occupants virtually wiped out.

"This butchery was only the foretaste of the awful carnage that was to follow. Rushing in columns of company toward the Serbian second line, the foremost assailants were mown down by rifle and machine gun fire. The first wave of assault was shattered; the second wave likewise, but the third and fourth waves rolled up to our second line, and there ensued the most desperate hand-to-hand fighting. For nearly three hours the bayonet and hand bomb did their deadly work. Victory hung long in the balance. These second line trenches were thrice taken and retaken, but the third recapture was final and definite."

GEN. DANGLIS IN CRETE.

Convinced the King Has No Intention to Change Neutrality Policy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CANEA, Crete, Sept. 30, (Dispatch to The London Daily Telegraph.)—Yesterday General Danglis arrived in Suda Bay aboard a destroyer, accompanied by six other army officers. More wished to follow him, but there was no room on the destroyer. He was appointed this morning as the third member of the Provisional Government.

On Tuesday last, when the departure of M. Venizelos became known, General Danglis received in Athens a visit from General Giannakitsas, Minister of War in the Skouloudis Cabinet. He proposed to Danglis that a military movement sh[ould] be made in Athens in favor of depa[rt]ure from neutrality, with the secret consent of the King.

"General," was Danglis's answer, "if the King wishes to leave neutrality he should send one of his aids de camp to Venizelos at Crete to call him back."

Giannakitsas had not returned, so he left at midnight that day and went aboard the French flagship at Keratsini Bay. From there he left yesterday morning for this place. He is convinced the King has no intention of following the voice of duty to his country and people. Other confidential information that has reached the Provisional Government confirms the suspicion held by the followers of Venizelos that the agitation in the Germanophile press, semi-official communications and adroitly desseminated news by palace agents of the alleged decision of King Constantine to leave his neutrality, were merely manouevres to stay the flow of officers leaving to join the national movement. To a certain extent they had partial success.

I myself who know well the situation in Athens and the ins and outs of the policy followed am convinced that the above campaign is conducted under the advice and direction of the German Minister in Athens. If we have any illusions left that the King of Greece may become our friend we should lose them if a descent were made on the German Legation and its archives seized.

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The Rumanians have evidently suffered a severe defeat in the mountains just to the south of Hermannstadt in the region of Red Tower Pass. One of the first moves made by Rumania after the declaration of war was to rush the passes which controlled the crossings of the border and which led into Transylvania. Of these passes the more important are those leading to Kronstadt (Tomas Pass) and to Hermannstadt (Red Tower Pass.) From these passes the Rumanian troops advanced to Kronstadt and Hermannstadt and occupied both towns with apparently little resistance.

The forces have oscillated back and forth at Hermannstadt during the last few days, and it was evident that a severe battle was being fought. What has apparently happened is now simple enough to understand, but was certainly most difficult to accomplish. The line of communications of the Rumanian forces was the railroad which comes up the valley of the Oltu River, crosses the mountains, and enters Hermannstadt. There are practically no roads upon which dependence can be placed, as the only breaks in the mountain wall of this part of the borderland are the valleys of the rivers, which, rising among the hills of central Transylvania, score the mountains with their valleys as they flow south to the Danube. Therefore the Rumanians were limited entirely for their communications to the railroad of the valley of the Oltu.

The Germans delivered a stroke which, as it succeeded, deserves to be called brilliant, but had it failed would have been declared defective strategy. There are certain fundamental principles of strategy, the violation of any of which almost invariably results in disaster. Occasionally it works out, and when it does, the success is generally complete. One of these principles is never to divide your forces in the face of the enemy. Yet this is what Lee did at Chancellorsville when he sent Jackson down the Plank Road to fall on Hooker's flank, and this is what von Falkenhayn did at Hermannstadt. Both moves succeeded, and the degree of success was in proportion to the risks taken.

Although being attacked heavily in front, the Germans detached a considerable force from their right wing and sent it on a wide detour, with the object of falling upon the Rumanian rear. This force, winding up the small valleys, and scrambling over the mountains when there were no valleys, struck the railroad in rear of the Rumanians before the latter had any information of their coming. Red Tower Pass was occupied, and the Rumanian line of supply and of retreat was cut. Naturally, the greater part of their supply trains, which undoubtedly lined the railroad tracks for some miles in their rear, was taken, and much of the force scattered.

The Rumanians had to cut their way through the forces in their rear while holding the forces in front. This was apparently done with some success, the entire line falling back as the way was opened. On this point, however, the official reports are not clear and it may be that the way is not yet cleared, but it seems that this is the case. As the Rumanians fell back, the way was opened for the moving of the captured booty which was taken up the railroad to Hermannstadt.

It seems impossible that such a manoeuvres would be possible in these days of the aeroplane and efficient scouting. How any force large enough to do any damage could have passed all around the Rumanian Army and not have been picked up by the Rumanian air scouts, is beyond understanding. It is impossible, but it has happened. Future reports of the fighting will be watched with interest.

Some twenty-five miles east of Hermannstadt, at Fogaras, is the Rumanian Army which has been operating about Kronstadt. There is a railroad between Fogaras and the Red Tower Pass, and heavy reinforcements will undoubtedly be sent westward to support the Hermannstart army. It is this phase of the situation which has not yet had time to culminate and which may produce some interesting results. There is, however, no belittling the German victory. Reports, neither from Vienna nor Berlin, indicate any great number of prisoners. The raiding force was probably not strong enough to capture large bodies of men although it was strong enough to take the narrow pass over the mountains and hold it until the work could be done by the main body. But the captures of material has undoubtedly been extremely heavy and this is apt to be a greater blow than the loss of men.

Another interesting piece of news of yesterday's fighting is the renewal of the Russian offensive against Lemberg. The Russians struck principally on two sectors, the first in the vicinity of the Brody-Lemberg railroad, and the other further south in the Brezezany section. The report of this fighting mentions the "Brody-Krasne" front. This is deceptive in one particular. As far as the Russians are concerned there is no such front if we accept this expression to indicate that the Russian line extends between these two points. The Russians have not taken Krasne; in fact, are some miles east of it. Brody is, of course, in their hands, and has been for a long time.

This last move is apparently the beginning of one of Brusiloff's enveloping operations, as well as an effort to flank the Halicz position, which he has been unable to take by direct assault. The Russian line in the south is a rather sharp salient, the apex of which is on the Zlota Lipa River, one flank along the river, the other running due west toward Halicz. At Brzezany, the river was crossed some time ago. If the Russians can advance here the Teuton positions along the southern stretch of the river will be outflanked and forced to give way. This will not involve the fall of Halicz, but will force a readjustment of the line.

The main point in this renewal of offensive operations, however, is not the fact that it is aimed at this or that part of the line. It is that the German troops who are reported to have been sent from the western front to take part in a great offensive against the Russians have not deprived Brusiloff of the initiative. There has been much talk of a great offensive in the east. It is generally regarded as the first distinct manifestation of Hindenburg's presence as Chief of the German Staff. There is nothing in the Russian report, however, to indicate that their opposition was any greater than it has been. In fact, their first blow has netted the Russians 4,000 prisoners and some guns.

This may be merely a flash in the pan, a sudden minor stroke delivered without any intention of following it any further. At the same time this section of the Russian line has been quiet for weeks, all of the fighting having been done in the Carpathian Heights southwest of Bukowina. This quiet may have been a period of preparation for another gigantic effort to take the Galician capital by another route than that through Halicz. The next few days will tell.

DIFFICULT FIGHTING IN 'CRATERLAND'

British Major Calls His Entry Into Thiepval a "Most Devilish" Experience.

MAN'S LIFE IS WORTH LITTLE

Tale of a Private Who Killed or Wounded 23 Germans and Captured Another.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Saturday, Sept. 30, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle:)—This last day of September, a month of tremendous fighting, is waning in a golden maze of light. There already is a touch of Autumn in the air and the color of things. Where the trees are not stripped of their foliage by shrapnel and lyddite, they are yellowing, and the brown leaves are blown into the trenches.

But there are no leaves on the trees at Thiepval, and hardly a stump of a tree on the plateau to the northward and eastward, where there is a barren stretch of ground broken only by the hummocky lines of trenches and innumerable shell craters as desolate as any place on earth. It is here beyond Thiepval that the slaughter of men is the greatest. It is here that the Germans are sacrificing many more lives in the hope of driving the British back.

From an underground fortress and the surrounding redoubts desperate German counterattacks were made last night and this morning on the Schwaben redoubt just north of Thiepval, and on the Hessian redoubt further east, where the German troops hold out in a wedge made by a sunken road from Gueudecourt.

I have not often heard such a menace in the sound of gunfire as when I went to an artillery observation post in this direction this morning. There was something in the atmosphere as well as in the intensity of the bombardment which made the shell-bursts (they were German crumps) thunder out in a queer, hollow reverberating way. The Germans had concentrated their heavy-weight metal on the British lines here, so recently his own, and I watched these high explosives vomiting up from Thiepval ridge just below the Schwaben redoubt with great hope that the British, holding out there, might have found good cover in the old German dugouts and that the one advantage, gained in capturing these strongholds of German industry through two years of trench warfare, might be turned to British good and safety.

In Thiepval itself many elaborate underground chambers have been found, though when the British first won the place after all the hard hand-to-hand fighting with the garrison they could not get cover at once. A Major belonging to one of the battalions which came up first behind the assaulting troops (new army men who fought like old regulars, though many of them were quite new to this fortress fighting,) tells me that the entry into Thiepval was the most develish experience he had had, though he had been through other frightful "shows."

A dugout next to the hole in which he made his temporary headquarters was blown up with sixteen men, and when he moved on beyond the château (a fine name for the only rubbish heap which marked the site of a town) he found the headquarters of the leading battalion "sitting on red bricks" in the midst of dead men. By that time his Colonel and Adjutant were badly wounded and the Major arrived with only three runners and was surprised to see a commissioned officer of the other battalion standing up on the brick heap, waving a stick and rallying his men.

It was not really surprising. I met that officer today, and saw the ice-cold fervor of the man, the quiet determination of his character, utterly scornful of any kind of danger. Men would follow such a man into furnace fires.

When the barrage came many of the British lay about wounded, and it was difficult to get them into safety. The medical officer of one battalion lost his stretcher bearers and went up alone to do what he could, dodging the great shells and binding up the wounds of the men.

For a time a tank gave valuable cover. It had heaved itself across a trench, enfilading it on each side with deadly fire. Underneath its body there was good shelter, and the medical officer worked here for a while with a heap of wounded.

Capture Medical Supplies.

Afterward he found a better place. It was a German dressing station in a deep dugout, two stories down, superbly equipped with every kind of instrument and drugs—drugs not now to be got in England—including two oxygen cylinders with face attachments.

Fourteen dead Germans lay outside, but inside it was a pleasant sanctuary from all the inferno up above. The wounded Colonel was taken there and attended by German doctors, for at dawn a party of officers and men of the German ambulance station came rushing out of the sap and showed their red crosses with the cry of "Kamerad." They made themselves useful and the British medical officer says he could not have managed without this help. It is a pity he could not carry along the instruments and drugs, but when he took down some wounded the shell fire was still fierce and, as he says, "it would be a fool thing to be shot disguised as a Christmas tree."

The work at night of digging in on the captured line was a brave job, and the attack next morning on the last of the garrison, who held on to the northwest corner of Thiepval, serving their machine guns, was carried out with great gallantry. The fighting on the northeast of Thiepval is in a land of shell-craters. Most of the trenches are just linked shell-craters, into which the men burrow as soon as they have rushed the ground, getting little cover in their depths from the barrage which searches them out.

Desperate Fight for Trench.

The Hessian trench has changed hands several times within the last forty-eight hours. After savage bomb fights and bayonet work forty Germans were brought in from one bit of ground, but it is not a country where there is fighting in great numbers. It is difficult to know one's own whereabouts. There are single combats over the rim of a shell hole. Men knock up against each other in the dark, peer into each other's faces to know if friend or foe. If friend, they drop into the shell hole together, if foe, they fight till one is dead.

Queer things happen in shell crater land, as when a Canadian officer brought up rum rations for his men and found himself in a ditch with a number of German wounded. They were lying in a row in a tragic state. What was the officer to do? He was puzzled, but he decided to give the rum to the suffering men, who were grateful for it.

In Hessian trench or in a twist of craterland it was two German officers and twenty-two men who came down across the holes and were met by a private soldier who was surprised to see them. He emptied his revolver at them, shooting one of them. Then he picked up a German rifle, fired that and killed another. A second time he stooped, grasped a German rifle at his feet and killed a third man. The others ran and the one man after them. It was a chase along a dirty ditch which had once been a trench and the hunter was a dead shot with abandoned rifles all along the way. At the end of the hunt there was only one German unwounded and he was brought back as a prisoner.

This sounds like a lie, preposterous in the numbers given, but the German prisoner tells the same tale, and other men watched the hunt at different stages—this fearful man hunt down the bloody ditch. Things happen like that in this present fighting, worse than that in human anguish and better than that in courage.

Three Men Live in Shell hole.

Out in craterland were found three Australians in a hole, one of them unwounded, the other two rotting with wounds. They had been there nine days. The unwounded man stayed with his pals all that time day after day, night after night, hoping for rescue. This part of craterland was swept with machine-gun fire—British or German—how could these men tell who had lost all sense of direction—but at night the unwounded Australian crawled out of his hole, rummaged among the dead bodies for rations and water bottles, which he took back to his friends and shared with them.

It is only one incident of the kind. In craterland there are many like it, although not so long drawn. But it is the Germans who suffer the most out there. Many times men are left to hold a line. Their reliefs cannot get up through the British curtain fire or will not come, so the others, starving and wounded, crawl back leaving a trail of dead on the way.

For a time here and there the Germans disappeared before the British so when their patrols push out they can find no living man. Then after a while reliefs come up, dodging the British shellfire, leaving another trail of dead and wounded, then dropping into shell holes inhabited by corpses. It is the way of war, about which orators have much to say.

GREECE HESITATES AS FORCES DWINDLE

Gounaris, Who Controls Chamber, May Checkmate King if Latter Decides for War.

CHIEF OF STAFF DROPS OUT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Sept. 30, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—The situation at the week end has become stationary again. The hopes which were raised a few days ago—largely deliberately raised with the view to endeavor to arrest the military movement to the side of the National Defence Government—that decisive action in Athens was imminent has been succeeded by pessimism fully justified by the state of affairs which the Government by its inaction and inability to reach a decision has brought about.

At the present moment the King, according to my information from Court circles, is faced with a problem which may be stated as follows: If he decides for war, the Chamber must, according to the Constitution, be called to deal with the decision within the space of five days. The master of the Chamber is M. Gounaris, who in his newspaper, Neon Asty, has just declared himself definitely and finally against war. Since the article was published he has repeated his views to the King, and it appears that no considerations will move M. Gounaris from the position he has taken up. In the attenuated, one-sided Chamber he is supreme, and his power there makes him really the most important civilian in Greece today. If, therefore, the Chamber meets and there is brought before it the decision of the King and the Government, Gounaris and his party—who for so long have claimed to be the true royalists and the only real defenders of the monarch and throne—will vote down the King and the Government.

But that is only one of the absurdities and dangers of the situation calling for a firm hand and instant decision. Every hour brings news of fresh secessions to the Provisional Government. The royal army and navy continue to melt away. Chios, following Mitylene, has declared itself for the national movement; Saloniki has cordially saluted the new Government, and with that news comes the information that a battalion of Greek troops, organized by the National Defense Committee, went a few days ago to the front. The islands of Lemnos and Samos have also announced that they will cease to recognize the Government of Athens and that the authorities of the islands are now under the orders of the Provisional Government. The Athinai reports agitation among the police of the capital and states that a number of them are joining the movement.

The Minister of Marine is taking strong measures against the movement in the fleet, but it is certain that they are not having the desired effect. At roll call yesterday fifty-eight sailors were missing from the Averoff, thirty-four from the Kilkich, forty from the Lemnos, and about sixty from other ships of the Greek fleet. The Governor of the Naval School and all its students have placed themselves under the orders of Admiral Coundouriotis.

In an endeavor to rally the people to their crumbling cause all the anti-Venizelist papers are spreading most fantastic reports. According to them the national defense movement has been an utter failure everywhere, but the most absurd report is that Germany is sending a new army of half a million men to the Balkans, and that the German-Bulgar forces, having reoccupied Florina, are advancing toward Kastoria, driving the Allies before them.

A royal decree has been signed according forty-five days' leave to General Moschopoulos, Chief of the General Staff. This is tantamount to his resignation. It is believed his provisional successor will be Colonel Stratigos of the General Staff. He is an officer who was trained in Germany and is responsible for the recent series of anti-Entente articles in the pro-German journal Esperini.

PIRAEUS, Sept. 30, (via London, Oct. 2.)—King Constantine has appointed new commanders of the battleship Kilkis, formerly the United States battleship Idaho, and the Averoff, owing to the Venizelist leanings of the previous commanders of these ships.

Athens Police and Soldiers Rebel.

ATHENS, Oct. 1.—The official Gazette of the Provisional Government publishes this morning a decree signed by M. Venizelos and Vice Admiral Coundouriotis, "by virtue of the power vested in them by popular decree of Sept. 26," naming General Panyotis Danglis, the former Minister of War, as the third member of the trimvirate forming the Provisional Government.

The Island of Tenedos has joined in the revolutionary movement.

Forty-five policemen, cadets and soldiers who were desirous of joining the revolutionists at Saloniki, went to the French Legation yesterday. Jean Guillemin, the French Minister, supplied for them an armed escort from the marines guarding the French Legation. With this escort the men paraded through the streets to embark.

King May Make Decision Today.

ATHENS, Friday, Sept. 29, (via London, Oct. 1;) (Delayed by Censor.)—Notwithstanding the persistent assertions by adherents of former Premier Venizelos and the Entente that King Constantine is merely playing for time and does not intend to declare war, those close to the King are confident he will telegraph his decision to King George, Emperor Nicholas, and President Poincaré on Monday at the latest. The Athens stock market is extraordinarily bullish.

Once the King's decision has been reached it is expected a national cabinet will be formed, in consultation with the British Minister. M. Venizelos probably will have a portfolio if he desires. It is predicted that M. Kalogeropoulos will remain as Premier and Minister of Finance, with M. Stratos, former Minister of Marine, as War Minister; M. Carapanos, the present Foreign Minister, or M. Coromilas, Greek Minister at Rome, as head of the Department of Foreign Affairs, and with three supporters of M. Venizelos in the cabinet.

General Moschopoulos, Chief of the General Staff, asked King Constantine this noon to grant him leave of absence for forty-five days. The King assented. General Gennadis probably will replace General Moschopoulos.

The Hesperini, a newspaper with German affiliations, for which M. Stratos, who is leader of the new anti-Venizelos war party, has written previously, refused today to publish the pro-war articles of M. Stratos.

SHIPS FACE PERILS TO REACH KIRKWALL

BLOCKADE RUNNING ENDED

Threat of British Coal Boycott Enough to Force European Neutrals to Obey Regulations.

By HENDRIK WILLEM VAN LOON.

KIRKWALL, Orkney Islands, Sept. 2.—In the distance we can see a castle. It looks somewhat like those complicated castles which are constructed by little boys on rainy Sunday afternoons. Rumor on board has it that this edifice belongs to Mr. Balfour. In that case I do not wonder that this distinguished statesman has become a philosopher. I do not see what else he could have done on this island. The castle is surrounded my some small woods. The rest of the background is pasture. This pasture, rich and green, covers some low hills, like a Turkish carpet spread acros a sofa. Further away toward the north there is a high hill. We can see the base. The top has been lost in a cloud of fog or rain ever since we came here three days ago.

Personal narratives of narrow escapes, of vital emotions in the face of grave danger have lost all the interest of novelty. With fifteen million people living in the trenches even the most interesting adventures of a peaceful traveler assume an air of yawning commonplace. But unbeknown to the sleeping passengers we have passed through an experience which would have delighted the heart of Poe's most gruesome spook hunter.

All neutral vessels must visit the harbor of Kirkwall. It has become the accepted custom of all bona-fide neutrals to sail for this port. Refusal to obey this rule is punished by a boycott of British coal. And since Sweden, Denmark, Holland, and Norway are dependent upon Great Britain for their coal supply, such a boycott means commercial ruin. If this rule did not exist, if the neutral countries possessed coal mines of their own, then undoubtedly we could tell a different story. For if anybody thinks that the neutral Captain sails to Kirkwall because he likes to go there, he is gravely mistaken. The neutral Captain goes to Kirkwall because his Directors or the owners of his ship have given him the most complete and stringent orders to comply with the British demands.

They are in the shipping business to make money and not to encourage heroic deeds of blockade running. Otherwise—yes, if this were even fifty years ago the neutrals would give the British men-of-war a run for their money. The northern blockade would not be maintained by a few converted fruit steamers, but by fast cruisers. And the naval stories of Norway and Denmark and Holland, not to speak of Sweden, which enters this British harbor with the sour face of an unwilling boy being dragged to school, the naval lore of these seafaring countries would be enriched by many a curious exploit. As it is, there exists a regular line of steamships which, plying between New York and a European port, has sailed right through the British blockade eight times in succession and which would be sailing across the British blockade at the present moment if it were not for this unfortunate rule about coal.

Running the Blockade.

If one is to believe the chief participants in these events, the trick was comparatively easy. In the first place get a good wireless detector. That is the chief requisite, once you have a fast ship and willing stokers. This wireless detector is an instrument of which I know nothing except that it tells you with fair accuracy the distance which separates you from other ships which are using their wireless apparatus. Since warships are constantly sending and receiving messages you are at all times aware of the whereabouts of your nearest neighbors. Of course as soon as you enter the danger zone you must stop sending messages yourself, for the wireless detector, which is rarely found on merchant vessels, is on board most men-of-war.

That was requisite No. 1. But there was another one which reminds us of the happy days of buccaneers and voyages of discovery. The man in the crow's nest is now a mild sailor who looks for icebergs and warns the officers on the bridge when a steamer approaches. The Captain of this modern blockade-runner had an old barrel hoisted to the top of his mast, many feet above the wires of the Marconi apparatus. From this vantage point, some twenty feet higher than any lookout on a cruiser, a sailor scanned the ocean for British ships.

At night the vessel showed no lights. In the daytime it stopped as soon as danger was scented. Keeping a very northern course, (since the outbreak of the war few liners stick to the prescribed route and sail wherever it pleases them to go,) the steamer made straight away for the Faroe Islands. These islands are Danish, and the water around them is neutral territory. Sailing right between this group of lonely islands, the vessel made for the nearest spot on the Norwegian coast and, following the ragged line of this rocky peninsula, made for home.

Often it was necessary to circle around for two or three days to escape the British blockaders. Once, within sight of the Norwegian coast and home, the ship was stopped and sent back to Kirkwall. Another time a British cruiser gave chase and fired a number of shots before the neutral steamer found safety in a heavy bank of fog.

The British blockaders, bored by weeks and weeks of monotonous ocean and monotonous sky, with never the sight of a ship, welcomed the coming and going of this vessel as a first-class sporting event. There was no ill feeling. Finally, however, the prosaic Admiralty made an end to this monthly diversion by threatening the neutral company with a coal boycott unless her ships should sail into the harbor of Kirkwall. Hence we are here, to the everlasting disgust of Captain and cabin boy. So much for this modern blockade runner. Now let us return to our fog.

Kirkwall Comes to Life.

The town of Kirkwall is situated on a small bay, well protected from the storms of this cold and northerly ocean. It is an old centre of the Danish, Norwegian, English civilization. It was a station on the road from Scandinavia to England when that happy island was a far-western colony of the Danes, together with Iceland, Greenland, and Labrador. Old Viking kings of great renown, but dead since many centuries are buried in the enormous church, which we can see in the distance, and around which the little town is grouped like chickens seeking the shelter of the mother hen. In these latter days Kirkwall is rarely visited. In the Summer the pleasure boats of the Hamburg and Bremen lines bound for Iceland and Spitzbergen stopped here to give the passengers a short respite from seasickness, and show them the Orkneys. Otherwise the place was forgotten. Now, however, rumor (unconfirmed rumor, as far as the author of this letter is concerned) has it that a large part of the British fleet lies ready in the bay on the other side of this island. Hence the active German minelayers sprinkled their deadly machines all around this island and, as they flatter themselves, were directly responsible for the destruction of the Hampshire and the death of Lord Kitchener.

All that, however, has nothing to do with the neutral trade. The neutral vessels do not mind these mines, for they rarely cross the waters which are considered unsafe. They have, however, other and very serious complaints. In Summer time, and with clear weather, the harbor of Kirkwall is as easily managed as the pond in Central Park. But even in the Summer time the weather is rarely good. One sailor, who said that he knew what he was talking about, informed me that these islands are covered with fog five days out of every week. I am willing to believe him. I did not know what fog was until I came to the Orkneys. In the Winter severe blizzards are added to these fogs. Navigation, therefore, becomes difficult. Nay, it becomes extremely dangerous.

Navigation Is Difficult.

The Orkneys consist of some thirty islands. If we include the uninhabited cliffs we come to a total of forty or more. There used to be lighthouses, but since the beginning of the war their lights have been extinguished. The British Government does not provide pilots. Probably there are not more than two or three professional pilots in this entire region.

The boarding officers who are sent to take command of the vessel before she reaches the Orkneys, are not familiar with this region. In the case of the larger steamers the rule seems to be that the Captain is to find his way as best he can. Unless the neutral sailors are entirely too pessimistic we shall hear of several and serious accidents to neutral steamers during the coming Winter. I write this in the month of September and I voice the opinion of a score of neutral commanders. It is a matter which deserves the serious attention of those neutral Governments which insist that their citizens shall have the right to cross the high seas without being exposed to unnecessary risks or danger.

In a preceding letter I mentioned the spooky adventure through which we passed. It was a night in a dense fog without the slightest knowledge of our exact whereabouts. The pleasant fellow of the Royal Naval reserve, who was our temporary master, did not know within miles where we were. He was quite honest about it. He had never been in the Orkneys before. During the Japanese war he was first officer on board a blockade runner, one of the two vessels which successfully entered the port of Vladivostok. Since then he had been master of a ship in the Indian Ocean.

Our own Captain had been here before. But he, too, could not possibly know whether we were north, south or east of the Kirkwall port. On account of the currents between the many islands the ship was obliged to keep moving. The lead was our only salvation, but so few ships ever come near these rocks that the state of the ocean's bottom is but little known. Like a diver who searches for a lost pearl on the bottom of some shallow bay, we groped our way through the pitch dark. It serves no good purpose to describe the details of that watchful night. To those who knew the danger it was a night of the most refined horror. Death waded cheerfully by the side of our ship. Once when we were suddenly within sight of the surf, breaking its roaring waves upon some hidden ledge, the silent figure reached out a clammy hand. The fingers took hold of our deck and suddenly the boat rocked at this touch. Then the vigilant eye on the bridge saw the danger. There was the jingling of many bells within the dark recesses of the ship, and quietly the boat slipped past this danger. Our companion left us and disappeared in the fog. Erelong he was back. Like a child at play on the beach he suddenly pushed a dirty tramp steamer right in our way. But for the wary man on the bridge that tramp would have been cut in two. The bells jingled. We rocked under the sudden reversion of our engines and the tramp slid by. In the morning we were near some becalmed fishing vessels. Would they take us in? They would not. It was too dangerous. Only when the sun came did our silent guest part company. He went out to look for a more willing prey.

RUSSIA HAS 182,000,000.

Her Population Increased 43 Per Cent in Eighteen Years.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 1.—According to the statistics for the year 1915, which are now available, the population of Russia increased by 53,000,000, or 43 per cent., since 1897. The population increased by 3,800,000, or more than 2 per cent., since 1914. The total population is set down as 182,182,600.

Czar Makes Protopopoff Minister.

NEW STRUGGLE BEGUN IN GALICIA

advance northeast of the city was checked after the Russians had charged the German lines seven times. The announcement follows:

Front of Prince Leopold: West of Lutsk the enemy's fire has increased since this morning.

On both sides of the Brody-Lemberg railway (northeast of Lemberg) and further south as far as Graberka, near Zborow, the advance of the enemy has been arrested, partly by our curtain of fire and party by the complete collapse of assaults repeated seven times.

The southern wing of the attacking Russian forces gained a foothold in our front line of defense.

Front of Archduke Charles Francis: On both sides of the Zlota Lipa (on the front southeast of Lemberg) there was violent hand-to-hand fighting. In the angle between the Tseniuvka and the Zlota Lipa the enemy advanced. Further to the west the Turkish troops ejected the Russians yesterday by an immediate counterattack, and this morning penetrated positions held by Russian detachments. Two hundred and thirty prisoners were brought in.

In the Carpathians calm prevailed. The number of prisoners taken near the Klauzura road was increased to more than 600.

VIENNA, Oct. 1, (via London.)—Today's official account of operations on the Russian front says:

Fighting in the Ludowa regian Carpathians) continues. In an attack we captured 4 Russian officers, 532 men and 8 machine guns.

On the front of Prince Leopold there have been no events of importance, except the repulse of a Russian attack near Wytonice and successful advance guard engagements in Poland.

ATROCITIES AT TUTRAKAN.

Germans, Bulgars, and Bulgar Civilians Are Accused.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Monday, Oct. 2.—The Daily Chronicle prints the following from its Bucharest correspondent:

"It is more than probable that when all the horrors perpetrated by the Bulgarians and Germans at Tutrakan are known and officially confirmed they will rival anything yet recorded in Balkan warfare. There seems to have been competition between the two allies as to which would inflict the most torture. The Germans, as usual, did the thing systematically, putting the Rumanian prisoners in batches and shooting them in the market places and other convenient spaces.

"A regular massacre of the Rumanian civil population was organized, the Bulgarian soldiery, aided by Bulgarian inhabitants, going from street to street killing, maiming, and torturing as they went. Some of those who escaped state that among the Bulgarian inhabitants who took part were well-dressed women and young men in light suits and straw hats, while the women incited their children to share in the revel. Knives, hatchets, anything with which torture could be inflicted, were employed, and teeth freely used by women. Nameless horrors were perpetrated. Limbs were lopped off, eyes gouged out, or as many wounds as possible inflicted on the helpless victims.

"There is in the hospital today in Bucharest a raving lunatic, a lady of good Rumanian family, wife of a judge who, hearing that the Rumanians were being massacred, rushed half dressed to the tribunal to save her husband. She arrived just in time to see a hatchet descend on his head and cleave his body nearly in halves. She was found and recognized by some Rumanian officers who brought her to the capital.

"During the fighting the Bulgarian women and children followed the lines, stabbing and torturing the wounded. Bodies were found with twenty and thirty cuts and worse. There are a dozen Rumanian soldiers in hospitals bearing as many wounds who still lived to suffer torture. Many of the women had rifles. More than one wounded soldier was shot in the back.

"A very strict inquiry is to be made and a full report addressed to allied and neutral countries."

SAYS INVADING TURKS REACHED SUEZ CANAL

C. W. Whitehair Also Reports They Hauled Big Guns Across the Desert.

A report that the Turks reached the Suez Canal and also managed to transport their big guns across the desert from Syria was brought here yesterday by C. W. Whitehair, General Secretary of the Cornell University Y. M. C. A., who arrived on the Philadelphia. He said that he had been in Egypt and had visited the Suez Canal region from Port Said to Suez and the Libyan Desert, where the British are fighting the Senussi.

"The British officers in Egypt give great credit to the Turks for their fighting qualities," he continued, "because they have achieved feats that were believed to be impossible. No news is allowed to leak out of Egypt, and that is why the British public do not know that the Turks reached the canal just below Ismailia three months ago and were crossing in their boats when the guns opened fire and sunk them. This was followed by a big battle at a place called Rumani, in which thousands were killed and several thousand Turks taken prisoners.

"It was thought that the Turks could not get their big guns across the desert in the Summer, but they accomplished that feat three times this year, in spite of the great heat and the sandstorms.

"The British are using their West Indian troops, with some of the Anzacs from Gallipoli, to drive back the Turks, and the last battle fought before I left Cairo was thirty miles from the canal toward the Palestine frontier.

"The Territorials, with some of the old regular regiments, are in the Libyan desert fighting the Senussi, while Egyptian and Sudanese regiments are up at Wadi Halfa on the Second Cataract of the Nile, where they are out of the way of temptation.

"The British have about 35,000 prisoners in camp outside Alexandria, and marched 2,000 of them through the streets of Cairo in broad daylight as an object lesson to the natives, because the Turks have been secretly proclaiming a holy war in the bazaars from Alexandria to Khartum.

"It is no use saying that there is no unrest in Egypt, because there is, and all the Government officials know it, but they have the situation well in hand. They have 100,000 troops well supplied with machine guns and three-inch to six-inch guns for the heavy work."

HELD STAATS-ZEITUNG MAN.

British Suspected Pollak of Carrying German Embassy Dispatches.

One of the passengers on the Holland-America liner Amsterdam, which arrived yesterday from Rotterdam, was F. Pollak of the New Yorker Staats Zeitung, who went abroad in July and fell foul of British officials. They stopped him at Kirkwall, and took him first to Edinburgh and then to London. He was put through severe examinations in each place, as the authorities had an impression that he was a private courier for the German Embassy at Washington. Finally he was released and permitted to go to Berlin via Holland. On the return journey Mr. Pollak said he was searched at Kirkwall and again at Falmouth. He said the British treated him with courtesy everywhere.

Lieut. Col. W. J. Boom of the Dutch Army said that he had come over to spend two months in the United States to purchase ammunition and supplies for his Government.

Another passenger was B. B. Waters, United States Consul at Wartburg, Germany.

Pierre Lorillard returned from a visit to England and Ireland.

Sir George Peterson, President of McGill University, who has been to France to visit the McGill Red Cross unit at the front, said that Germany would be lucky if she struggled through the Winter. Sir William said that in the opinion of the British medical authorities the McGill unit was the best equipped which had been sent to France in the course of the war.

EXPECT BRITISH NOTE.

Washington Believes Mail Seizures Reply Came on the Philadelphia.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Officials here expect the British note on mail seizures to reach the State Department early this week.

Embassy advices indicate that it probably was sent to this country on the liner Philadelphia, which arrived at New York today.

FERRY STRIKE FAILS, RAILROADS INSIST

MANY SEEKING OLD JOBS

All but a Few Will Get Them Back if They Give Up Union, Employers Assert.

Officials of the New York Central and West Shore Railroad said last night that the strike on the ferries, tugs, and lighters of the railroads had been broken. Although President William F. Kirke of the Harbor Boatmen's Union, who led the strike, said that none of the men had gone back to work, W. B. Pollock, head of the Marine Department of the New York Central, asserted they had been coming to his office "in droves" all day long and asking for reinstatement.

Elated by their success in keeping their regular Sunday schedule going among ferries, tugs, and lighters, and professing resentment against the West Shore ferrymen, who began the strike Friday afternoon by going out and leaving thousands of commuters at the ferry houses during the heavy rain, the officials refused to take any man back who would refuse to give up membership in the union. Mr. Pollock said about sixty union cards had been surrendered up to yesterday evening, and that he expected practically all the strikers would try to get back by this morning.

"There are about thirty agitators," he said, "the men who started the strike, whom we will not re-employ on any conditions. One of them applied for reinstatement this afternoon and was refused, but we expect to take back all the rest of the men if they will give up the union.

"Today we ran the normal Sunday schedule of two boats each at the Weehawken and Cortlandt Street ferries. We also had all our nineteen tugs in operation—two with our own men and the rest with strikebreakers. On Monday we will resume the regular service of four boats at Cortlandt Street, three from West Forty-second Street to Weehawken, and one from West Forty-second Street to West New York. The special cycle of the boats in operation by strikebreakers had a very sobering effect on the men who had gone out, and their surrender was quite general."

Mr. Kirke, for the strikers, insisted that conditions were unchanged, but said that something might happen today. When asked whether the strike would spread to the ferries and tugs of other railroads he said that he could make no announcement. "So far," he said, "only the New York Central and West Shore men have been called out and none of these has returned to work."

GRAVEDIGGERS' STRIKE OFF.

The strike of 115 grave diggers in Calvary Cemetery was settled yesterday, and the men will report this morning at $2.50 a day and nine hours work. They were receiving $2.25 a day, and Saturday noon quit work and informed Superintendent James J. Cunningham that they wanted an increase of 25 cents a day. Many also wanted the eight-hour day.

More than half the interments were halted, and bodies were placed in the receiving vaults. Father William J. Stewart, Director of the Allied Catholic Cemeteries of New York City, advised granting the increased wage.

CALL ALBANY CAR STRIKE.

Traction Employes Ordered to Quit Work This Morning.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 1.—The employes of the Albany division of the United Traction Company have been ordered to quit work at 6 o'clock tomorrow morning. The efforts of Mayor Stevens and the Chamber of Commerce to prevent a strike have been unavailing. The grievance is the discharge of a motorman without a hearing, which, the union holds, is a violation of the agreement between the company and the union.

The Albany division includes all lines in Albany and Rensselaer, lines running there from rural districts, and the interurban lines running into Troy, Watervliet, and Cohoes.

The employes of the Troy division, which includes the Troy and Cohoes lines, will vote on the question of a strike tomorrow night.

SHOPMEN REFUSE TERMS.

Overwhelming Vote Against Compromise Proposals of Western Rys.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 1.—About 85 per cent. of the 40,000 members of six railway shopmen's unions, employed on twenty Western railways, have voted in favor of refusing compromise proposals of the railroads, to demands for an eight-hour day and a wage increase of 5 cents an hour. Union representatives who had canvassed the referendum vote announced the result here today.

The delegates left for their different stations where further negotiations will be carried on between the unions and the railroads, according to A. O. Wharton of St. Louis, a representative of the American Federation of Labor.

FARMERS' REVOLT CUTS MILK SUPPLY

of the town stations where milk is shipped. It was reported that farmers who had joined in the boycott of the distributing corporations had forcibly prevented others who had not joined it from shipping their milk cans, and that in some cases milk was dumped into gutters.

Appeal to Woodbury.

The distributing corporations were firmer than ever yesterday in their determination not to deal with the Dairymen's League, which is supposed to control about 75 per cent. of this city's milk supply. While the companies were making desperate efforts to arrange for milk shipments from other States, even from points as far as Illinois and Canada, President Loton Horton of the Sheffield Farms corporation was preparing a lengthy appeal to the State Attorney General, E. E. Woodbury, in an effort to break the farmers' combination. In it he bitterly attacked State Commissioner of Foods and Markets John J. Dillon, who has been acting as spokesman and representative of the Farms' League.

"We beg to call to your attention for an official investigation and action by your office of a conspiracy in restraint of trade now being conducted in this State for the purpose of enhancing the price of a necessary of life," President Horton's appeal reads in part. He states that an attempt is being made to create a selling monopoly in violation of the terms of the Donnelly act.

"The facts are as follows," says Mr. Horton. "We are informed that a corporation was organized under the laws of New Jersey in December, 1907, called the Dairymen's League, Incorporated. This incorporation has never procured a certificate entitling it to do business in this State. It, nevertheless, is attempting to do business in this state. It is endeavoring to induce milk producers who have heretofore been supplying milk to New York City to cease supplying such milk on Oct. 1, to appoint this so-called Dairymen's League sole selling agent on a commission basis, which, if their plan proves successful, will amount to $500 a day.

Added Cost to Public $8,000,000.

"The City of New York receives and consumes over 800,000,000 quarts of liquid milk per year. The avowed purpose and object of the Dairymen's League is to compel the consuming public of New York City, through milk dealers, to pay $8,000,000 more per year for milk than heretofore, and to accept milk of a standard now forbidden by the health authorities of the city. The active agents for such concern are one Albert Manning, Secretary of the company, who resides at Otisville, N. Y., and John J. Dillon, who resides in New York City.

"Mr. Dillon is a State officer, namely, Commissioner of Foods and Markets. We are advised by our counsel that there is nothing in the law of the State of New York which authorizes the Commissioner to so utilize his office or to compel milk dealers to purchase their milk from a monopoly of production represented by him.

"We are advised that this conspiracy has so far reached a head that in the country sections from which we derive our milk, organized attempts at intimidation of producers who seek to deliver their milk to us are being inaugurated to prevent the delivery to us of such milk and to require us to purchase all milk from said Dillon. Threats of violence are being made unless we accede to the demand of this organized conspiracy. We will not do so."

Commissioner Dillon's reply to Mr. Horton's statements held little promise of a settlement out of court.

"In the milk distributing business in this city there has been a combination in restraint of trade for forty years," Mr. Dillon said. "There have been two legal attempts to break it. Its form only has changed, and not its effect. Eight or nine of the biggest dealers are still under indictments returned against them five years ago on this charge, and were under bonds until last Spring, when the bonds were lifted, but the indictments were not quashed.

"We are acting entirely within our rights and within the law. My purpose has been to bring about more economic and efficient methods of distributing milk in this city. It now costs more to distribute than to produce the milk we consume, and it has seemed to me that the costs were out of proportion. The farmer has been getting 2½ to 4 cents a quart for his milk, and it has been costing the public from 9 to 16 cents a quart. The distributing corporations pasteurize the milk, but that costs just about ¼ of a cent a quart.

"Our plan is to distribute the milk ourselves, but if the distributing corporations want milk they can buy it from the Dairymen's League."

Mr. Dillon insisted that the Dairymen's League is a purely co-operative organization, and said that he was not a member and did not know whether or not it had procured permission to operate in New York State. He denied emphatically that it was a money-making corporation.

Supply Hospitals First.

Fears have been expressed in many quarters that the stoppage of New York's milk supply will cause serious hardship and suffering among infants and invalids, and that the effect of the quarrel will fall heavily on the hospitals. The officials of distributing corporations said yesterday that as long as they could procure any milk at all they would deliver it to hospitals and others in special need of it before putting it on general sale. It was said that the Nathan Straus milk stations, which supply milk for about 2,500 babies, would not be affected, as they had contracts which ran until March, 1917.

Mr. Dillon said that if the 280,000 quarts of milk which the Dairymen's League expects to be able to ship to the city itself each day is needed for infants and invalids, it will be supplied to them instead of to regular dealers.

Mr. Dillon said that the milk the league would distribute would be the same as that distributed by corporations now under the name of Grade B. Much of the milk now called Grade A, however, he said, was exactly the same as the Grade B milk. The companies now charge 10 cents a quart for the Grade B, and in some cases 12 cents for the Grade A, or twice the amount Mr. Dillon says his league will charge for all its milk.

"It is not necessary for the corporations to charge more at retail for their milk under the new plan," Mr. Dillon said. "They say in that appeal to the Attorney General that we want to increase the cost $8,000,000 a year. I haven't figured that out myself, but the Sheffield people raised their prices to the public $25,000,000 a year during the last six weeks, when they increased their prices. I understand that they cleared $150,000 net profit in June, and last year they stated that they made 48 per cent. profit on their capital."

Milk Famine by End of Week.

President Horton of the Sheffield Company said last night that his company would distribute 60 per cent. of its normal milk output this morning, but that he could make no estimate of the amount it will have to distribute on Tuesday or any of the succeeding days. Vice President H. N. Hallock of the Borden Company said he expected to deliver 50 per cent. of the normal quantity.

Raymond E. Van Cise, of the Mutual-McDermott Dairy Corporation, said that his company had made arrangements whereby it would be able to supply 75 per cent. of its patrons, largely from sources hitherto unused by the company, until Wednesday morning. After that, he admitted, most of the company's milk would have to be brought from distant States. He said prices would not be increased.

Officials of other large companies said that this morning they would be able to deliver between 50 and 75 per cent. of their normal output, and that the indications were that the quantity would diminish rapidly every afterward. Some of them feared that by the end of the week they would be able to deliver only 3 per cent. of their normal output.

The situation was the same in Brooklyn. The R. F. Stevens Company, with headquarters at 90 Third Avenue, Brooklyn, and six depots in Brooklyn, which delivers 40,000 quarts of milk a day there, will be able to deliver 35,000 quarts today, a representative said last night. It will deliver to families first, and then, if there is any left over, to stores. The Diamond Dairy Company, Carlton Avenue and Pacific Street, Brooklyn, delivers 10,000 quarts of milk a day. A representative of this company said that he expected the supply would be tied up, with the exception of 4,000 quarts coming from a Pennsylvania creamery.

F. H. Thompson of the Executive Committee of the Dairymen's League said yesterday the reports of agents at Copake and Otisville, N. Y., and from Washington, Conn., showed that no milk was delivered at these points yesterday to the Borden receiving plants, and that the same was the case at the Sheffield plant in Hillsdale, N. Y., and of the Mitchel Dairy Company in Bridgeport, Conn. The Mitchel Company finally admitted defeat and offered to buy from the league. Mr. Thompson was informed.

The New York Milk Committee, an organization headed by Stephen G. Williams, a lawyer of this city, issued a statement last night announcing that it had made an investigation of the present milk situation. The committee stated that the Dairymen's League "seems to lack the equipment, capital, and experience to supply the consumers of New York with milk in accordance with the requirements of the Sanitary Code." The statement sets forth that any combination which has as its object monopoly or dictatorship as to prices is prohibited by law, and asks:

"If the officers of the old Milk Exchange were indictable because of their activities to regulate the prices in the dealers' interests, are not the officers of the Dairymen's League in danger of putting themselves in the same position?"

Albany Shipments Normal.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Shipment of milk from this county continued today nearly normal, there being no appreciable falling off yesterday or today. The general opinion seems to be that although several branches of the Dairymen's League have been organized, the individual dairymen plan to take the best prices they can get and go on shipping.

No Shipment From Carmel.

Special to The New York Times.

CARMEL, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Oscar Bailey, Director of the Dairymen's League in Putnam County, said today that not one quart of milk was shipped from the county during the day, although the ordinary supply was 40,000 quarts. The Willow Brook Dairy, which supplies certified milk to concerns in Mount Vernon, sent its milk according to schedule.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Only fifteen cans of milk were delivered by farmers in the Harlem Valley section of Dutchess County today to the distributing plants for consumption in New York. Up until the expiration of the contracts thirty carloads of milk on an average were daily shipped to New York from this county.

Special to The New York Times.

CATSKILL, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Following the decision made yesterday the milk producers of Ashland and vicinity entirely stopped shipments to New York today. A few cans were shipped from Halcott by members of the league to independent dealers. The rest will be converted into butter. Lexington and Prattsville withheld all milk shipments.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The last trainload of milk for New York leaves Broome County tonight, according to a statement made by J. F. Eastman, manager of the Dairymen's League, Broome County Branch, this afternoon. Broome County has been shipping ten carloads of milk daily. The Broome Country dairymen have arranged for a distributing station in New York where Broome County milk can be obtained by independent dispensers.

DELHI, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Apparently less than 10 per cent. of the normal amount of milk was offered for shipment to New York from Delaware County today. The league expects an even tighter blockade tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

ONEONTA, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Members of the Dairymen's League kept to their agreement and the shipment of milk from this section was greatly reduced, estimates varying from 15 to 40 per cent. of the normal. In Central New York as a whole, the league has apparently made good its threat to shut off the supply to the city.

Connecticut Supply Short.

NEW MILFORD, Conn., Oct. 1.—The milk train that usually goes through here with 2,000 cans of milk had less than 500 today consigned to New York and other places. At Sheffield, Mass., it received 80 cans instead of the usual 200. No milk was shipped from New Milford except about ten cans to small dealers in Bridgeport, North Kent, Merwinsville, and Boardman. Judd's Bridge, Roxbury, and Roxbury Falls on the Litchfield branch all have idle creameries.

DANBURY, Conn., Oct. 1.—Acting under orders issued by officers of the Dairymen's League, proprietors of twenty dairies in the vicinity of Mill Plain today refused to ship in any milk to New York City. One car was sent. The Litchfield Branch producers also sent in one car. The usual number has been four. The Berkshire Branch train had its usual number of milk cars.

NEWTON, N. J., Oct. 1.—Shipments of milk from Sussex County tonight will not exceed 10 per cent. of the normal amount. This includes shipments by members of the Dairymen's League.

FARMER PICKETS POUR MILK INTO HIGHWAYS

Special to The New York Times.

BREWSTER, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Hundreds of quarts of milk, on the way to the local plants of big distributers in this vicinity, which is a big milk-producing centre, were thrown into the highways today by pickets of the Dairymen's League. Groups of farmers stood at every crossroads to stop farmers who had refused to join the league, and who were sending milk to the big dealers. Wagon after wagon was halted, the cans were rolled from the wagons, and the contents spilled over the ground, with the result that practically no milk was received at any of the local plants.

The farmer pickets were appointed at recent meetings of the league. A few of the farmers had refused to sign the agreement not to send milk to New York, while the others were withholding their supply to gain the advanced price demanded. The members of the league had argued with them in vain.

Well-to-do farmers volunteered eagerly to do picket duty. They covered all roads leading to plants, where the big dealers receive the milk, to send it, after pasteurizing, to New York. There was no attempt to disguise themselves. Whenever they saw a wagon coming they seized the horses, and, addressing the driver by name, advised him to turn back. If he refused the milk was poured out.

The possibility of arrest did not deter the farmers from what they believed was their duty. There probably will be a rush to the local Justices for warrants, but the milkmen have no fear of that. "What chance would they have against us with a jury in this section?" they say.

One driver, inspector for the Borden plant at Brewster, got a milk bath. He was on his way to the factory with a load of ten forty-quart cans, and showed no inclination to obey the commands of the pickets, so he was hauled from his seat and taken to the roadside. Two men held him while others poured the contents of one of the milk cans over him.

The farmers here are confident that the big dealers will have to surrender within a few days. They have been well organized by frequent meetings, held for the last several weeks, and say they will not back down. Many farmers assert that they will make butter or throw the milk to the hogs rather than sell it at the price which the big dealers offer. At the high cost of feed and labor they say they cannot afford to produce milk for the same price which they received ten years ago.

ATTORNEY GENERAL TO ACT.

Reported Combines in Milk Trade to Be Investigated.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 1.—The question whether combinations in restraint of trade have brought about the milk situation in New York is to receive immediate consideration by Attorney General Woodbury. He has been asked whether the Dairymen's League has a legal right to dictate the price of milk, and also whether there is not a combination of big milk distributing companies in New York City.

John J. Dillon, State Superintendent of Foods and Markets, through whom contracts between the distributing companies and the league members must be executed, is charged by some of using his official position to aid one class as against another. Attorney General Woodbury asked whether Supt. Dillon was exceeding his official duties, replied that this question would be considered along with the other two.

COOL DAYS TO END EPIDEMIC

Officials Expect Only Sporadic Paralysis Cases After This Week.

New York health authorities are confident that the coming of cooler weather this week will see the end of the infantile paralysis epidemic in the city, according to Dr. John S. Billings, Deputy Health Commissioner.

"Of course, we will not look for an entire absence of the disease in the city," Dr. Billings said yesterday. "As a matter of fact we always have with us an average of three or four cases a week. During the coming Winter, perhaps, we will have an average of eight or ten cases each week. This will be a natural aftermath of the epidemic."

The United States Public Health Service officers made a racial survey of the disease in Staten Island last week, showing that Russians have been the most susceptible to infantile paralysis, there being 29 cases among 3,378 persons of that nationality canvassed. Italians were next, with 41 cases among 7,063 persons canvassed. Scotch and Irish proved that they were immune in the largest percentage, only 1 case being recorded among 1,285 persons of the former nationality, and 15 out of 13,700 Irish.

Physicians Discover Further Efforts to Destroy Murder Victim.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, N. H., Oct. 1.—An examination today by Medical Referee Frank Horne and other physicians led to the discovery that the body of Mrs. Florence A. Small, which was found in the burned ruins of her home in Ossipee Friday, had been covered with resin after she had been shot, beaten, and strangled.

USES CHART IN ENDING LIFE.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 30.—After concealing all clues to his identity, a well-groomed young man, registering at a hotel here as Bruce Somerset, New York, ended his life by shooting late today.

Just before ending his life he copied on letter paper a well-known quotation from Omar and placed an anatomical chart on the table before him so as to direct the shot from an army automatic. His jewelry was initialed "R.," which leads to the belief that the name he registered under was assumed. He was apparently without funds.

SUSPECT LUNATICS SET FIRE

Beacon Police Hunt for Two Who Escaped from Matteawan.

BEACON, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Albert Mertie and Robert Graham, who escaped from the Matteawan State Hospital for the Insane last night, are suspected, the police assert, of setting fire to the home of John Van Houten, near this city, at 3 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Van Houten put out the blaze with a bed quilt. Kerosene had been poured on a door at the rear by the incendiaries.

The men escaped from the asylum with the aid of keys which the hospital authorities declare were obtained through confederates. Hospital attendants and the police of Beacon searched the surrounding country all day. A reward of $100 has been offered for their capture.

URGE SPAIN TO PREPARE.

Ministers Ask for Extraordinary Credits for Army and Navy.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—The Spanish Budget laid before Parliament, says a Havas dispatch from Madrid, shows expenditures estimated at approximately 1,325,000,000 pesetas, and revenue estimated at approximately 1,421,000,000 pesetas.

Extraordinary credits of 2,133,000,000 pesetas ($426,600,000) to be spread over a period of ten years, are asked for the reconstitution of the army and navy, for roads, railways, and public instruction.

POPE'S PROTEST SEEMS VAIN

ROME, Oct. 1, (via Paris, Monday, Oct. 2.)—Notwithstanding the official protest by the Vatican to representatives of the Governments accredited to the Holy See regarding the action of the Italian Government in seizing in August the Palazzo di Venezia, the quarters in Rome of the Austrian Ambassador to the Vatican, it is not thought that the Italian Government will change its plans with regard to the building.

The protest is a document of considerable length. It was issued by Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, in the name of Pope Benedict. In it the attitude is taken that Italy in the seizure of the palace has violated the law of guarantees of 1871, establishing relations between the Vatican and Italy, in that Italy now interferes with the rights of an Ambassador to the Holy See.

"Against such an act, which is now proof of abnormal conditions, the Holy See lodges a formal and solemn protest," says the document, which then asks the various Governments to heed the protest and to call the attention of the Italian Government to the irregularity.

MORE JOBS THAN APPLICANTS

Public Employment Bureau Found Work for 1,185 in September.

In September the State Public Employment Bureau obtained work for 1,185 men and women, according to the report of Superintendent R. A. Filon, who says the facilities offered to the unemployed would be greatly extended for the benefit of both employer and employe if those seeking jobs would file applications with the Bureau. Many of the unemployed apparently are unaware of the existence of the Bureau, and for this reason the number of applicants do not equal the requests from employers for labor of all kinds.

"Many men who assert they cannot find work to support their families are sent to this Bureau by the Domestic Relations Court or by social workers, and the worthy men are provided with employment," said Mr. Filon. "The men who won't work when the opportunity is provided are returned to the court. There is a large demand for laborers, dairy farmhands, restaurant help, packers, porters and institution help. There are vacancies for 100 office boys, 200 errand boys and 200 factory boys, due to the return of many of these workers to the public school."

CAR STRIKE MOBS FIGHT THE POLICE

let the strike go to a finish, but some labor men thought Mr. Mahon, had he come, might have influenced the organization to act otherwise.

Coincident with Mr. Mahon's failure to return, Theodore P. Shonts, President of the New York Railways Company, let it be known that the company was manning its surface cars at the rate of thirty new crews a day, and that each day sees sixty or more strikers permanently displaced from their jobs. The company now has 800 crews, or 1,000 men, he asserted, and that many strikers would be out of the service permanently were the strike to be called off tomorrow.

Labor leaders at the Hotel Continental had nothing to say about the sympathy strike yesterday, but the belief grew in labor circles that the Central Federated Union at its convention this afternoon would abandon attempts to revive that failed movement.

Mr. Fitzgerald returned to the Continental last evening from an automobile tour of the trolley lines much elated by the fact that on the Broadway and Seventh Avenue lines he had counted but thirty-two cars. However, the companies' figures showed that its Sunday normal is sixty on those two lines, and that it had that number running. Some railway officials thought maybe Mr. Fitzgerald only counted those running in one direction.

The General Organizer was wrought up over the fact that he found a policeman changing a sign for a motorman in State Street and another manning a chopping box for a ticket chopper in a subway station. He declared he would prefer charges against both men.

Mr. Fitzgerald insisted the strikers are sticking to the organization and that company figures of operation have been exaggerated, but impartial police figures continued to show that operation was slowly gaining.

Mr. Shonts pointed out last night that men now in the service of the company if they return in time to get their jobs back will be forced for the most part to take night runs as loyal employes already have nearly all the day runs.

The Saks Suit Selections for Men This Fall

at $17.50 to $50

is that there is a suit here for every man that comes into the Saks Store, whatever may be his shape, size, or financial condition.

¶ The beauty of buying a suit of clothes at Saks' is that you don't have to readjust your choice to what is offered to you—you can get what you want.

¶ We purposely emphasize that point because the scarcity and high cost of woolens today are such that in many shops a man will want what he can't get.

¶ The fact of the matter is, no store in New York can hold a candle to the Saks' collections, and no clothes made so faithfully reflect the taste and temper of the town.

¶ The range of choice in fabrics is as cosmopolitan as Manhattan, and the manner in which they are cut and tailored comes from rubbing shoulders with the Knickerbocker family.

We have tailored 5th Avenue into the cut and tailored it out of the cost, enabling a man to improve his appearance without impoverishing his pocket.

Models

¶ Notably slender styles, cut in at the waistline, featuring snappy small lapels on the roll, clever distinguishments in cuffs, and patch, half moon, slanting, and flap pockets. Even the vests are different, our particular preference being one with a narrow shawl collar, flap pockets, and sharply waisted to keep you from losing your shape.

Fabrics

¶ The tendency this season is away from the bold, definitive patterns, in favor of smart, soft finish cheviots and distinctive mixtures. Browns are very popular, so are greens—not dead greens, but greenish mixture effects that are full of life and hope. But don't imagine those are all we have—we have about everything worth while in woolens today.

How about a Blue Double Breaster with narrow fronts and patch pockets?
We have a corker for $25.

PRESIDENT'S REBUKE OF 'DISLOYAL' LIKED

Commended in Congratulatory Telegrams from All Over the Country.

WARM PRAISE FOR SPEECH

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Oct. 1.—All day yesterday and today telegrams came to the Summer White House offices commending the President on his decisive reply to Jeremiah O'Leary, President of the "American Truth Society," who sent an offensive message to Mr. Wilson on Friday threatening him with the loss of the pro-German vote. Today they were augmented by many more messages congratulating him on his speech yesterday.

Statements made by a brother of Mr. O'Leary that suit should be brought against the President for libel were received lightly by Administration officials. No comment was made on the question except that the President personally handed the telegram to Mr. O'Leary and that he stood back of the message.

Democrats all over the country responded enthusiastically to the attack the President made on the Republican Party yesterday. The address has brought such wholesale approval from the members of his party that the President is expected to continue in his future speeches at Shadow Lawn the aggressive course he mapped out yesterday. Democratic leaders here are waiting with curiosity Mr. Hughes's response to the attack.

Tomorrow noon Henry Ford will come to Shadow Lawn to have luncheon with the President, and Mr. Wilson will also have an important conference with Representative Fatton of New York.

Tuesday night the President will leave for Omaha, where he is to speak on Thursday at the commemoration of Nebraska's admission to the Union. His speech there will be confined entirely to nonpartisan subjects, following his decision to refrain from campaigning while away from Shadow Lawn. He will return here on Saturday for a speech to a gathering of independents.

Among the callers at the Executive office yesterday was Howard Colby of Plainfield, N. J., a brother of Everett Colby, the Progressive leader, who is actively campaigning for Hughes. The Colby family is divided in politics and Howard Colby is a Wilson man.

Among the reasons for his support of Mr. Wilson, he told a NEW YORK TIMES reporter, is a personal one which he had never before confided to the public. Mr. Colby was a member of the Princeton class of 1886, and took a course in public law under the then Professor Wilson. For some reason, Mr. Colby said with a laugh, he had difficulty in getting through the course. His instructor told him to tutor in it, and he carried out this advice faithfully. After several weeks, when commencement loomed close and his diploma looked very remote, he went to Professor Wilson and told him he had followed his advice to the letter.

"Well, Mr. Colby," was the reply, "I guess you've done the tutoring as you say. Yet, to tell the truth, I am much inclined to hesitate about giving you an examination. I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll pass you."

Mr. Colby was graduated with his class.

In 1912, when Mr. Wilson was elected President, Mr. Colby wired congratulations from his camp in Maine, adding: "I never expected a man who would pass me in public law without an examination would become President of the United States."

A few days later he got a reply in the President's handwriting. It read:

"Neither did I."

Irish Bazaar Meeting Hears O'Leary's Brother and Koelble.

John J. O'Leary, brother of Jeremiah A. O'Leary, and Alphonse G. Koelble, who is prominent in the pro-German propaganda, with the assistance of Peter Golden, an Irish poet, staged an anti-Wilson demonstration last night at the Garden Theatre, Madison Avenue and Twenty-seventh Street, where, it had been announced, a meeting would be held for ratifying the final plans for the Irish Relief Fund Bazaar, which will be held in Madison Square Garden from Oct. 14 to 22.

Neither the name of the President nor of Charles E. Hughes was mentioned by any of the speakers, but there was no mistaking whom they were talking about. The speakers were angry about President Wilson's telegram to Jeremiah O'Leary last week, in which the President said:

Your telegram received. I would feel deeply mortified to have you or anybody like you vote for me. Since you have access to many disloyal Americans and I have not, I will ask you to convey this message to them.

Jeremiah O'Leary was to have made reply, but he did not arrive from Chicago in time, and the task was taken up by his brother and by Mr. Koelble. Mr. Koelble was introduced by Mr. O'Leary as "the man who is going to tell about the bazaar," for incidentally Mr. Koelble is one of the leading spirits in the Irish bazaar. His first words were:

"The Chairman introduced me as his 'German friend.' I am not his German friend; I am his American friend. The man who does not love the country of his fathers is at heart a traitor to that country where he may happen to reside. If that be treason, let the Tories of this country make the most of it."

Mr. Koelble went on to say that at the bazaar there would be exhibited the original submarine.

"Years ago a young Irishman stood on the shores on his homeland and saw the flag of England waving from many ships. Then he began to think of how those ships could be sent to the bottom and, for liberty's sake, the English flag with them. He made the submarine in his mind, but he could get no money to back him. It was years later that I saw John P. Holland launch his first submarine in this country, and it was Irish money that backed him.

"What Holland didn't finish about that submarine, the Germans have, and they made a pretty good job of it. (Cheers.) And what Holland didn't finish in attending to England, I hope the Germans will finish."

After promising his hearers that they would know the truth about the war after "London ceases to edit the New York newspapers and English gold ceases to pollute their news columns," Mr. Koelble said that the German-Americans and Irish-Americans had kept this country out of the war.

"It is the stand of German-Americans and Irish-Americans for America above all that has kept this country out of war and not that distinguished gentleman who says 'I have kept the United States out of the war.' If that arbitration treaty had been signed, which you heard about at Carnegie Hall last Spring, this nation would have been the ally of Great Britain. Providence guides our hand!

"'Disloyal?' (Hisses.) I don't call him disloyal because I differ from him. I am as good an American as that distinguished gentleman (hisses). My family fought for the Union in 1862 while his family fought to destroy it. There were 150,000 boys of Irish descent in the Union Army (cheers) and there were 152,000 boys of German descent.

"'Disloyal!' Pity and shame on him who tries to array one part of our American population against another. Blessed is he who speaks and fights for a united America." (Cheers.)

Mr. O'Leary's sentiments corresponded with those of Mr. Koelble.

"We are as good and loyal Americans as ever trod the streets of New York," he shouted. "Disloyal, say you? We have as much right to discuss public questions as any other citizens, of English or any other descent, and we mean to assert that right." (Cheers.)

Mr. Golden told the story of Ireland's woes in prose and poetry. "And," he shouted, "we Irishman won't go crawling on our knees to Carnegie for a pension!" (Prolonged cheers and hisses.)

A sample of the poster that is to be used for the bazaar was shown at the meeting. It represents the execution of James Connolly, who is shown in a chair facing a firing squad of English soldiers. Many volunteers came forward after the meeting and promised to take charge of booths at the bazaar.

LEUBUSCHER ATTACKS HUGHES

Says He Is Known as "Good Angel" of the Traction Trust.

Frederic C. Leubuscher, President of the Wilson-Seabury League, issued a statement yesterday attacking Charles E. Hughes as having been favorable to the "traction trust." He said in part:

"Mr. Hughes is best known as the 'good angel' of the traction trust. As law partner of Paul D. Cravath, Thomas F. Ryan's private counsel, Mr. Hughes had a fine chance to learn about transit matters. As a result, he rendered every service to the traction trust which a Governor could, and appointed as Chairman of the Public Service Commission for New York his present campaign manager, William R. Willcox. Mr. Willcox carried out Mr. Hughes's plan to deliver New York over to the traction trust.

"Privilege of all sorts is working for the election of Mr. Hughes, justly believing him the best qualified man in the country to open the door for our exploiting monopolists to raid the weaker countries of the world. They know he will use the army and navy to back up their shady claims. As President Mr. Hughes would again make the people, this time of the entire country, the pawns of privilege. He would do it honestly—with no thought of personal profit—but Mr. Hughes thinks in terms of privilege and not of people. Can the workers of the country afford to be exploited for the benefit of a few financiers?

"In Governor Whitman the State has a frightful experience of the ambitions of the Republican Party. Governor Whitman showed his contempt for labor by deciding the case against labor in the Conscription bill. As even the Republican Constitutional Convention stated, the finances of the State are in a chaotic condition under his administration.

"Mr. Seabury is hated by the same interests which hate President Wilson, and for the same reasons. Never in this State has such a contrast been presented to the voters as that between Hughes and Whitman, servers of privilege, and Wilson and Seabury, champions of human rights. The people will return an overwhelming verdict for the champions of human rights."

ANSWERS MEXICO CRITICS.

Policy of President Wilson Is Text of Campaign Pamphlet.

The Democratic National Campaign Committee has issued a pamphlet dealing with the Mexico policy of President Wilson and answering the criticisms that have been made regarding it. After setting forth at length the President's efforts to restore peace in Mexico the pamphlet concludes:

"There was a powerful pressure for war—a terrible war—by a well-armed, powerful nation against an unarmed, bankrupt people, exhausted by five years of civil strife, but who still retained enough of patriotic feeling to unify them against an invader. It was the old, old question whether the United States should impose a peace on Mexico; whether, for the sake of the interests of a few of its citizens, it should permanently suppress Mexico's upreaching toward freedom and self-government.

"President Wilson and the Democratic Administration, contemplating this prospect, said: 'No. There will be no glory in such a war.'"

TWO POLLS FAVOR WILSON.

Buffalo Canvassers Find Hughes Can't Hold Progressives.

The results of two Presidential polls were made public yesterday by the Democratic National Campaign Committee. In Ohio, a State-wide poll conducted by the Columbus Evening Dispatch gave Wilson 8,347 and Hughes 6,506. The telegram accompanying these figures said: "This poll was taken in fairly balanced Republican and Democratic districts."

A poll conducted by the Buffalo Courier gave Wilson 2,720 and Hughes 1,965. "The partial canvass so far shows that Hughes will not hold the local Progressives," was the accompanying comment.

HUGHES 'STRADDLES,' M'CORMICK ASSERTS

Declares Republican Nominee Now Admits Wilson 8-Hour Stand to be Right.

BELIEVES PEOPLE SEE THIS

Says G. O. P. Candidate's Speeches Will Aid in the Re-election of the President.

Vance McCormick, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, summed up yesterday the progress of the Presidential campaign to date. Reports he has received from all parts of the country have convinced him, he said, that not only would President Wilson be re-elected, but that there would be a Democratic Congress. Two things, he said, have stood out conspicuously in the campaign thus far—" the absolute failure of the Hughes candidacy and the certainty that Woodrow Wilson will be re-elected President of the United States on Nov. 7." Mr. McCormick added:

"In the East, the West, the North, and the South the people are happy and contented. The country is at peace. Prosperity rules the land as never before. Factories are working to their limit. The banks, always a barometer of business conditions, are bulging with deposits. President Wilson has brought peace and prosperity to the country, and that is the reason that the American people are for him. My reports show that the Senate will remain overwhelmingly Democratic and that the Democratic majority in the House will be increased to upward of fifty.

"The recent speechmaking tours of Mr. Hughes have shown him in his true light. His addresses have been one continual tirade of fault-finding; they have been evasive; he has advanced not a single constructive idea; he has straddled on every question of importance before the people. Mr. Hughes has tried hard to find an issue in this campaign, but has failed dismally.

"The Republican nominee knows that the President has the people with him because he has acted merely as their spokesman and has endeavored to carry out their wishes on all questions affecting the welfare of the country. On the other hand, the people know that Mr. Hughes is the candidate of that small group of persons who seek special privileges at the expense of the people of the country—that same group which was rampant at Washington until Mr. Wilson became President and restored the Government to the people.

"Mr. Hughes tried hard to make the eight-hour law an issue of the campaign, but after days of generalities he was forced to admit that the President was right. He now says that he believes in the eight-hour day. That is what President Wilson said when he declared that the subject was not arbitrable. Mr. Hughes says he believes in investigation; so does President Wilson, and he has provided for a thorough investigation of all of the issues involved in the railroad employes' demands, with the exception of the eight-hour day, which the Republican nominee finally admits that he believes in. This belated statement of Mr. Hughes is in line with all of his utterances. He is an opportunist pure and simple.

"Furthermore, President Wilson has a definite program, while Mr. Hughes has nothing but words."

Mr. McCormick criticised Mr. Hughes for his "straddling" policy in regard to woman suffrage. He said he firmly believed that the longer Mr. Hughes remained on the stump the more certain would become the election of President Wilson.

WILSON LATIN-AMERICANS.

Naturalized Citizens Organize a Campaign Club.

A Latin-American Wilson Club was formed yesterday afternoon at the Hotel Ansonia by twenty Mexicans and Latin Americans who met in response to a call sent out by the Bureau of Information for Naturalized Citizens of the Democratic National Committee.

The meeting was called to order by D. Collazo, a Latin American newspaper man and Chairman of a bureau of the Democratic National Committee. J. D. M. Terreforte was elected Chairman of a committee of twelve, representing Mexico and South and Central American countries. Mr. Collazo said the committee would carry on a campaign among naturalized citizens who are in the shipping business and in cigar-making and other industries.

Five hundred copies of the call, which was a long document praising the Mexican and Pan-American policies of President Wilson, were sent out by the National Committee before the meeting yesterday. A second meeting for the purpose of enlisting a larger membership and launching an active campaign will be called within a few days.

ANSWERS PERKINS'S CRITICISM OF WILSON

W. L. Saunders Quotes Progressive Leader's Pamphlet Assailing Republican Party.

DEFENDS TRADE BOARD

Holds Federal Commission Has Cleared Away Obstacles for Business Progress.

William Lawrence Saunders, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Ingersoll-Rand Company, has written an open letter to George W. Perkins in reply to the latter's letter to Secretary Tumulty criticising President Wilson's speech before the National Grain Dealers' Association at Baltimore on Sept. 25. Mr. Saunders is a Director of many large corporations, including the International Harvester Company, with which Mr. Perkins has long been associated, and the $50,000,000 American corporation organized by the National City Bank to capture world trade for the United States.

Mr. Saunders quotes at length from Mr. Perkins's own pamphlets of 1911, in which he assailed the Republican Party for failure to carry out its promises in a "proper and reasonable interpretation of the Sherman law," and quoted Mr. Perkins as asking "Why cannot a commission be appointed in connection with our great industrial agencies of trade?" Mr. Saunders then says:

"I maintain that it is a matter of record, not opinion, that the Democratic Party has done exactly what you in 1911 wanted done. The quotations given from Governor Hughes sound Wilsonian in their wisdom and moderation. 'Short cuts,' says Governor Hughes, 'lead to disaster. The line of progress should not be arbitrary but through publicity and supervision. Ours must be the rule of reason.'

"The Sherman law is still on the books, and I am not aware that anybody but yourself now advocates its repeal. I have before me several of your pamphlets of recent date, in which you vigorously push for its repeal. If the party you represent wants the Sherman law repealed why did they not say so in their platform? Why does not Mr. Hughes advocate it? The fact of the matter is that through the decisions of the courts, through the Federal Trade Commission and the Clayton act, the Sherman law has been clarified and made practical by the rule of reason, by confining its restrictions to bad practices which are contrary to the public welfare; by separating bad trust from good trust; by substituting co-operation for competition—the very thing you advocated in 1911.

"If the Federal Trade Commission did nothing else, it would have justified its existence. It has stood as an expert business agent of the Government, dealing with business situations and disputes in a practical and prompt manner, after the fashion of business men. It has cleared the obstacles from the path of development for all legitimate trade enterprises, large and small, protecting the little fellow from unfair aggression on the part of his larger and more powerful competitor.

"The active business world has accepted this commission as a highly serviceable utility. Its personnel is composed of men of sound judgment and large experience. During the existence of this commission some 250 complaints, charging unfair methods of competition, have been filed with it. Each complaint has been investigated and most of them settled, through the practical work of the commission in directing fair practices. The commission has done constructive work in ascertaining that only 10 per cent. of our manufacturers and merchants know what is meant by costs. Chairman Hurley of this commission has formulated a practical cost plan, which is much appreciated by business men. He has encouraged co-operation, and I know of several concerns which during the Administrations of Roosevelt and Taft scarcely dared speak to their competitors who are now co-operating with them on a basis of uniform costs and in general business practices which do not conflict with the Sherman law.

"It is a fact beyond dispute that business now runs in smooth waters. Nobody is concerned any more about the question whether the Government, through its Attorney General, is going to make an attack on them or not, and whatever other influences may have brought about this wholesome result, the one controlling factor is the spirit and practical work of the Wilson Administration in the encouragement of co-operation and through the beneficent influence of the Federal Trade Commission.

"Your letter, my dear Mr. Perkins, confirms what some of your friends have recently expressed, that you have been for so long tickling the trunk of the elephant and lassoing the Bull Moose that you are not now in touch with live, modern business practice."

Mr. Saunders says it was his intention to take up other points in Mr. Perkins's letter and hopes that he can carry on an open discussion with him.

VALDES INAUGURATED.

Special to The New York Times.

PANAMA, Oct. 1.—Ramon Valdes was duly inaugurated sixth President of Panama at the National Theatre today. Ex-President Porras made a speech calling attention to the critical state of the nation's finances. Valdes, after taking the oath, publicly declared himself in favor of an honest and economical administration. Like his predecessor in office, Valdes takes his seat with practically an empty treasury.

The city was in gala attire today, and a fireworks display finished the day's program.

Men's Pure Silk Neckwear, $1.00

Made of Fine Quality Italian and Domestic Silks

Large, finely tailored cravats, designed of the most beautifully woven silks that have so far come under our observation.

The Italian silks especially are most exquisite, having been run through the looms four times to produce the fullness of color peculiar to these cravats.

THE DESIGNS:

Men's Pure Silk Shirts at $3.85

Guaranteed Fast Colors

Garments sold at higher prices could not be tailored more carefully, and one glance will show these to be shirts of the better kind in fabric, design and finish.

Men's High-Grade Silk Shirts, $5.95

SAVE NEW YORK

The SAVE NEW YORK Committee announces that its efforts have met with approval from all sources, that it has received the co-operation of the manufacturers of cloaks, suits, skirts, petticoats, clothing, furs and other kindred lines, located in the Zone, and that it is starting a CONSTRUCTIVE CAMPAIGN to locate in this section such lines of business as should properly be there, for their own and the City's benefit.

202 of the 220 manufacturers in the SAVE NEW YORK Zone have signed an agreement to remove therefrom at the termination of their leases.

This photograph, taken during the noon hour, is typical of the condition which existed daily from 14th to 23rd Streets on Fifth Avenue

REALIZATION of the harm done by the congestion as pictured above caused the formation of the Save New York Movement. The public-spirited action of the manufacturers in removing from the zone will preserve for all time the heart of New York City, and they will secure lower rents and the benefit of having the industry located in one section.

Their employees will save time and money in going to and from their work; in many cases they can walk to their homes.

On account of space we publish only the names of those firms removing from the zone in 1917 and 1918.

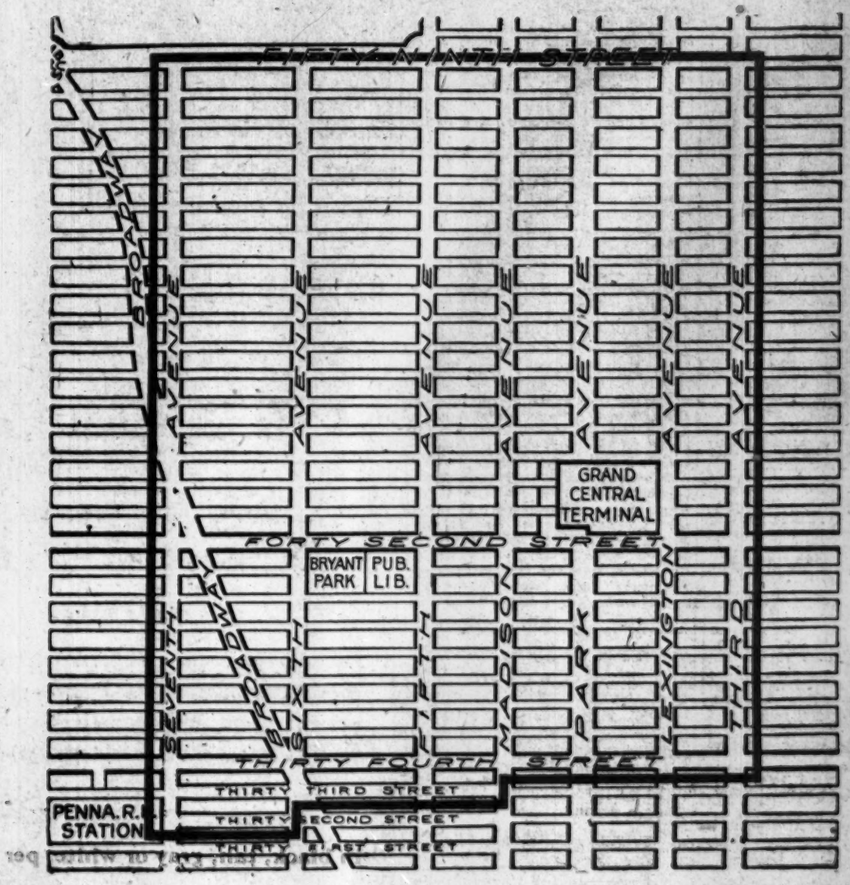
Sanitary, modern, fireproof lofts must be prepared for these manufacturers in locations further downtown and near the main lines of transportation. There are now enough vacant lofts to take care of the firms who will move out in 1917, but additional proper fireproof buildings will have to be erected to take care of the firms moving out in 1918 and succeeding years, and lenders of money should encourage the erection of new buildings to meet the requirements.

The establishment of the SAVE NEW YORK Zone, free from congested conditions, offers the most desirable location in the City of New York for offices and salesrooms of industries which sell the 100,000 buyers and shoppers coming to New York City every week during Spring and Fall.

Map of the Save New York Zone



BUSINESS MEN—YOUR OPPORTUNITY!

THE SAVE NEW YORK Zone, within the boundaries of which are located the two greatest railroad terminals, the largest hotels and the finest retail section of New York, is particularly adapted for retail trade, offices and salesrooms of those lines of business which require a location most convenient for the 100,000 buyers and shoppers who come to New York City from all over the United States, every week during Spring and Fall, and for the offices and salesrooms of manufacturers of all lines who wish their merchandise represented in the thousands of retail stores throughout the United States.

The ZONE is especially suitable for salesrooms for such lines as Millinery, Flowers and Feathers. Importers and Wholesalers of Silk, Woolen, Cotton and Linen Goods. Wholesale Furniture Dealers. Rugs, Carpets, Linoleum, Oilcloth, Embroideries, Laces, Novelties, Upholstery, Lace Curtains, Wall Paper, Screens, Underwear, Rubber Goods, Ribbons, Hosiery, Gloves, Knit Goods, Trimmings, Publishers, China and Glass Trades, Drugs, Perfumes and Toilet Articles.

Real estate brokers and owners are expected to work hand-in-hand to accomplish this end. It is for their interest as well as for the benefit of the entire City of New York.

We express our thanks to the citizens of the City, the manufacturers, real estate owners, financial institutions and the press, who have given us their earnest support and co-operation and have made the success of this movement possible.

We shall be pleased to furnish list of lease expirations, maps of the SAVE NEW YORK Zone and any other information upon application to

HUGHES TRIP SHOWS OHIO IS DOUBTFUL

DISAPPOINTED IN BUFFALO

Leaders Now Think Fight Will Be Close, and Nominee Will Rest a Week to Get Strength.

Charles E. Hughes got back to New York yesterday for a week's rest before swinging into the final lap of his campaign for the Presidency. He was husky of voice as a result of two weeks of strenuous work on the stump, which took him into seven States, but his general physical condition was much better than his physicians had expected. Mr. Hughes expressed the opinion that a brief respite would put him in top form, and said he felt full of energy and fight.

The nominee held a conference with National Chairman Willcox at the Astor, but refused to talk politics with any of the other leaders. He expressed pleasure over the results obtained by the tour, and felt that things were going favorably. Mr. Hughes will remain in New York until after the reception in his honor at the Union League Club tomorrow evening, at which Colonel Roosevelt and ex-President Taft will be present, and then will go to some resort within a few hours of New York to get in shape for the wind-up.

In the last two weeks Mr. Hughes campaigned in Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York, in the order named. The Republican leaders were of the opinion that he made a good impression. With partisan opinion put aside they felt that Illinois, Wisconsin, and Pennsylvania could, with a fair measure of certainty, be counted upon as safely Republican. They felt also that Mr. Hughes had made an impression in Indiana, where there was splendid organization and big crowds, which it would be difficult for the Democrats to overcome.

Concede Ohio Doubtful.

Ohio was conceded to be a debatable State, as it was evident that, because of lack of organization or other causes, the tour did not go with the same swing and vim while the nominee was in that State. The labor situation there afforded reason for worry.

Prospects in New Jersey were looked upon as hopeful from the Republican viewpoint, principally because of the success of Senator Martine in defeating the President's candidate, Wescott, for the Democratic nomination as Senator in the primaries. Mr. Hughes made only one speech in New Jersey, at the Trenton State Fair.

In New York State the Republicans are saying that the addresses by Mr. Hughes have assured him the solid Republican vote in districts visited outside of New York City. Mr. Hughes got large crowds up-State, and there were indications that he was well liked. The reception in Buffalo was not as large or as spontaneous as the Republican leaders had predicted, but the Broadway Auditorium was filled, and the nominee found his audience attentive. The Republican leaders, it is understood, are planning to have Mr. Hughes devote much time just before the close of the campaign in this State.

There has crept into the situation with the close of the second tour of Mr. Hughes an atmosphere of tenseness which had not been present before. Political leaders who publicly had predicted a landslide for one party or another a short time ago were privately expressing the opinion that "it looked like a close fight."

Improvement on First Tour.

It semed to be the general opinion that Mr. Hughes had made more progress on his second tour than he did in his swing to the Pacific Coast earlier in the campaign. Republican leaders were enthusiastic about his tour of Indiana, and from what they had to say, publicly, at least, were satisfied with the way things had gone in the other States visited. They said that he had put force and energy into his addresses and had won the confidence of the people.

The attack upon the Adamson law, which Mr. Hughes developed into the "paramount issue," gave some worry, although the leaders felt that it put "punch" into the fight, and would rebound on President Wilson. The ones who were worried were men who feared that it would be difficult to get the issue in its proper light clearly stamped in the minds of the voters, especially in communities where the labor vote is a big factor. Some reports from labor centres in Ohio had given grounds for concern.

The big majority of the Republican leaders are with Mr Hughes in regard to the issue, but they are very anxious that he shall make his opinions known to the voters in words of one syllable which cannot be misunderstood. Some of them are afraid of academic discussions, which might not make the point of attack clear and leave the impression that the attitude taken by Mr. Hughes was a blow at labor.

Think Moose Will Come Back.

An impression gained on the tour seemed to indicate that in the States visited the majority of the Progressives would return to the Republican Party. There were some among them—the ardent followers of Roosevelt—who were a bit disappointed that Mr. Hughes did not handle the "hyphen" issue by the use of the Rooseveltian terms instead of by the general declaration, pounded out with clenched fist and in impassioned voice, that he would, as President, protect American lives, property, and commerce at home and abroad, on land and sea, and without fear or favor make America stand four-square to the world. This assertion by the nominee was received always with enthusiastic applause, and Republican leaders held that Mr. Hughes had convinced the people thoroughly of his stand on Americanism.

Mr. Hughes will confer with the Republican leaders today and tomorrow. The campaign managers are anxious that Mr. Hughes shall get in trim for hard fighting, as they look to a situation which will find President Wilson taking a much more active part than had been predicted.

FALL STARTS A BUREAU

To Circulate Matter Assailing Administration's Mexican Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Having failed to persuade the Republican National Committee to establish a special bureau for the dissemination of Mexican information, Senator Albert B. Fall of New Mexico has established a personal bureau of his own. Including Senator Fall's bureau, the Republican Party is now sending out matter concerning the Administration's management of Mexican affairs from four offices, the other three being in charge of James R. Garfield of Ohio, who was Secretary of the Interior under Roosevelt; R. B. Howell, National Committeeman from Nebraska, and the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee.

Senator Fall returned recently from New York, and it was reported that he had gone there in the hope of persuading the Republican National Committee to let him take charge of a special Mexican bureau. Much detail work had been done by Mr. Fall, with some associates and a clerical force, in compiling statistics, sorting out material, and putting it in form for the use of stump orators and the press. It was said that among other things under consideration was the financing of speaking tours of American refugees from Mexico, singly and in parties, who would tell of their experiences. Photographs were to be shown on lantern slides as part of the arrangement. The plan was to have these refugees appear in New York, Ohio, Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, and California, especially in close Congressional districts.

Senator Fall, however, did not give up when the plan fell through, and is now sending information on Mexican affairs to the Republican National and Congressional Committees, as well as supplying newspapers and campaign orators with material attacking the Administration's Mexican policy.

INSURANCE WAR IN ELECTION

Companies in Pennsylvania Fight for Compensation Business.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—With $25,000,000 as the stake, the insurance companies who are doing much of the casualty business under the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation act have locked horns with leaders of organized labor to control the next Legislature. The issue on which the fight hinges is labor's plan to put all the insurance under the control of the State Insurance Fund.

Under the law as it now stands an employer is permitted to insure with either the State or the private companies. In an aggregate of approximately $25,000,000 insurance the State has been able to underwrite but $900,000, the residue going to the corporations. Labor leaders sent a circular letter to every candidate for the Legislature, asking him to pledge himself to vote for a measure that would make it compulsory to insure in the State Insurance Fund which was organized under the Workmen's Compensation act.

Insurance men immediately took action to combat the scheme. They carried their case to the State Insurance Federation, and this body took up the fight in earnest. They called meetings of the insurance men in the various counties to organize for the fight. Representatives have toured the State to organize committees to oppose the election of candidates pledged to support the labor scheme.

CARRIERS HEAR ADDRESSES.

Congressmen Review Efforts They Have Made for Postal Employes.

The New York Letter Carriers' Association held an open meeting at the Amsterdam Opera House, 340 West Forty-fourth Street, yesterday afternoon to hear addresses by officers of the national association and members of Congress. There was music by the Letter Carriers' Band.

Resolutions offered by Secretary Peter J. Vandernoot of the New York association, favoring strict adherence to the so-called Reilly-eight-within-ten-hour law with double pay for overtime work, were passed unanimously. Congressmen Thomas G. Patten, Walter M. Chandler, Michael F. Farley, Woodson S. Oglesby, Peter J. Dooling, Michael F. Conery, Daniel J. Griffin, John P. Carew, and Murray Hulbert spoke of their activities in Congress in behalf of the letter carriers. William M. Calder, Republican candidate for United States Senator, reviewed the legislation enacted during the ten years he was in Congress, and congratulated the letter carriers on the strength of their organization.

Edward J. Gainor, National President, and Edward Cartwell, National Secretary, spoke of their activities for the betterment of the Letter Carriers' Association.

MRS. T. R. MARSHALL ILL.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1.—The illness of Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall at the Hotel Jefferson today caused the Vice President to cancel his engagement to address the Wilson Club this afternoon. Mr. Marshall spent the afternoon and evening at his wife's bedside.

Mrs. Marshall ate oysters in Chicago a day or two ago, and became violently ill. She, however, insisted on making the journey to St. Louis with her husband. A physician called today, assured Mr. Marshall that his wife was not seriously poisoned.

The Vice President has just completed a tour of Indiana. He spoke in every Congressional district, concluding his campaign on Saturday night.

"I decline to make any prophecy as to the outcome in Indiana in November," the Vice President said. "One can hear Republicans on every hand making claim that they will carry this State and that. I prefer to do my work and let the result speak for itself."

"The Greatest Treasure House of Linens in America"

McCutcheon's

SIXTY YEARS of continuous growth and merchandising in Linens as a specialty have taught the Linen buying public to regard McCutcheon's as beyond doubt The Greatest Treasure House of Linens in America.

As you stand before our broad counters to-day, so far as abundant supplies are concerned, you will find it hard to realize that there has been the slightest difficulty in ocean transportation or any limitation in the supply of Linens as a result of the war in Europe.

Our stocks of Table Linens, Bed Linens, Towels, Fancy Linens of all kinds, Handkerchiefs, etc., are so varied and complete that our patrons need want for nothing in Linens.

Not only are our supplies abundant, but in accord with our usual custom we are showing many new designs in our various lines. In Table Linens, for example, a goodly number of the designs are being shown now for the first time.

Our great stock of Table Linens includes hundreds of different designs—perfectly plain Damask, stripes of every desirable size and variety, Scroll and Floral designs, etc. The opportunity of finding just what you want in Table Linens, as well as in all other household Linens, is almost unlimited.

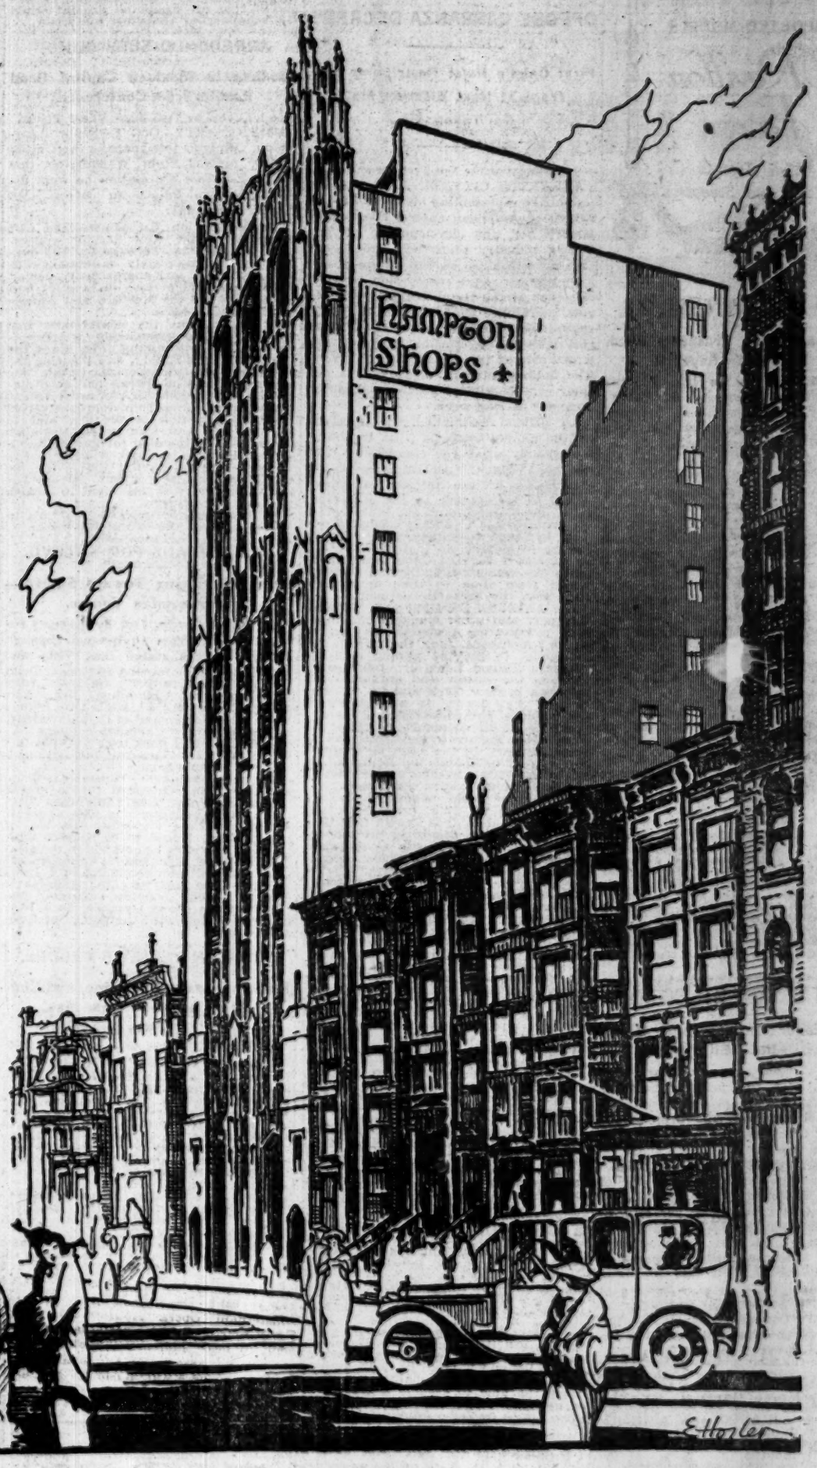
A Famous Gallery of Beautiful Things



OUR BELIEF IS THAT A VISIT TO THE HAMPTON SHOPS WILL RICHLY REPAY ALL THOSE WHO TAKE AN INTEREST IN THE BEAUTIFYING AND ADORNMENT OF THEIR HOMES. TO THESE, THEN, WE EXTEND A MOST CORDIAL INVITATION QUITE IRRESPECTIVE OF A DESIRE, ON THEIR PART, TO MAKE ANY PURCHASES WHATEVER.

IN the first place they cannot fail to be impressed by the architectural aptness of the Building itself, which, with its lofty ceiling, suggesting the nobility of some ancient Manor-House rather than a commercial establishment and its clever spacious Galleries, offers the most original and novel arrangements conceivable for the effective display of furniture and all that concerns the embellishment of the house.

THE Galleries of decorated and furnished Rooms, again, present a charming series of carefully composed studies in Interior Decoration. Each one of them expresses the Hampton idea of the Perfect Room, which, in a phrase, is one whose furniture, while instinct with an individuality of its own, yet forms part of a whole in harmonious accord with the surroundings.

INTERESTING, too, will be found not only the famed Hampton Reproductions of fine old English, French and Italian Furniture, not only the gathering of superb imported pieces representing the creative skill and nice taste of the leading European makers, but also suggestive examples of such interior fittings as carved mantel pieces, panelled wainscotings, exquisitely moulded trims and effective lighting arrangements.

IN addition there may be seen a wealth of such subsidiary accompaniments as Oriental Rugs of intricate patterning and subtle color, Textiles—hangings and so forth—of convenient variety, Metalwork of striking originality, Pictures of a rarely decorative quality and delicate Oriental and European Porcelains.

FINALLY, at the Hampton Shops may be obtained not only the experienced skill and the ripened knowledge which can conceive schemes for the interior decoration of single rooms, city apartments and complete houses, but also the ability and technical resources necessary to carry these out in their entirety.

Mercantile Marine Prospects Good, W. W. Miller Reports.

W. W. Miller of the law firm of Hornblower, Miller, Garrison & Potter, counsel for the International Mercantile Marine Company, who had been in England in connection with the reorganization plans of the company, returned here yesterday on the Finland.

Mr. Miller said that he had reorganized the British interests in the International Mercantile Marine Company and that everything was working satisfactorily. In his opinion the prospects for future business were very fine.

"The business conditions in England," Mr. Miller said, "are very good. Exports are increasing and quantities of raw materials are being shipped into the country. With all their industries the English do not forget that their country is at war and they are confident of the final result.

"In France I found the people were now attending to business and looking forward with quiet confidence to victory. By the crushing of Prussian militarism, the French people believe that the need for big armaments will be ended."

Mr. Miller said that he and his wife spent two weeks at the front at Verdun, where they saw the American Ambulance drivers bringing the wounded back from the firing lines. Mrs. Miller said that she assisted in carrying three wounded soldiers to the field hospital.

Mrs. Miller was so much impressed with the work of Richard Norton's ambulance section, attached to the French Army at Verdun, that she said she intended to donate a complete motor ambulance.

HEAD TAX NOW $10,000,000.

Commissioner Howe Tells Bronx Forum About Ellis Island.

Frederic C. Howe, Commissioner of Immigration, was the principal speaker yesterday afternoon at the opening of the second season of the Bronx Open Forum, at the Morris High School, 166th Street and Boston Road. He spoke on "Standing at the Gates of Ellis Island," and told of his administration and of the many improvements he had made.

He said that probably 98 per cent. of the aliens arriving here were admitted to the country, and that those rejected regarded their rejection almost as a death sentence. He said the head tax of $4 collected from each immigrant now totaled $10,000,000, and although he thought Congress should use this fund for the improvement of Ellis Island, it had failed to do so.

Owing to the war, it was impossible, he explained, to deport many of those now at the Island under orders to be sent back to their own countries. He added that although these persons were allowed to go out in the open instead of being cooped up, there had been only three escapes from the Island in the last twenty months.

The meeting was presided over by Register Edward Polak, and was addressed by Douglas Mathewson, President of the Bronx; Surrogate George M. Shultz, and several other borough officials.

New Destroyer Meets Tests.

ROCKLAND, Me., Oct. 1.—With the exception of a six-hour run at twenty-five-knot speed, which is to take place tomorrow, the torpedo boat destroyer Wilkes has met all standardization tests without mishap. The destroyer had her four-hour endurance run in a choppy sea today, averaging 29.55 knots. The contract required an average of 29.50. A four-hour run at twenty-knot speed, using main turbines, was also within fuel economy requirements.

CONFEREES TO HEAR MINING COMPLAINTS

Loeb, Hammond, and Others Will Appear Today Before American Commissioners.

OPPOSE CARRANZA DECREES

First Chief's Edict Restricting Suffrage at Next Election May Be Taken Up.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 1.—A committee representing more than $100,000,000 of American capital invested in Mexico for the development of the mining industry there will appear before the American section of the American-Mexican joint commission when it convenes at the Hotel Traymore tomorrow morning. This will be the first committee or representative of commercial interests in Mexico to go before either side of the commission officially. The mining interests already have put their case in a brief which reached the commission last week.

An official intimation was received by the mining interests from Washington shortly after the commission first convened that a presentation of the complaints of the mining companies would be acceptable to the conferees. It is understood that the purpose of the request was to obtain concerted action by the capitalists interested in mining in Mexico, so that it would not be necessary for the Commissioners to study the numerous individual protests which from time to time have been filed with the State Department.

The American Smelting and Refining Company and other Guggenheim interests, constituting probably the largest single investment, took the lead in the movement to get the mining men together. William Loeb, Jr., represented them in the matter and organized the interests in New York and its vicinity. A brief was drawn up and placed in the hands of the commission. The appearance of the committee before the commission tomorrow, therefore, will be supplementary to the case as outlined before, and to enable the Commissioners to ask such questions as their study of the brief may have suggested.

While the points submitted by the mining men in their brief have not been made public, it is known that they went into details regarding certain decrees which the Carranza Government has promulgated or has under consideration. Many of these decrees are regarded by the mining men as confiscatory either in their intent or in the interpretation which has been given them by local Carranza officials. Minor decrees issued by State officials with or without the authorization of General Carranza also were quoted.

At the time the statement of the mining interests was sent to the commission one of the prominent representatives of the committee stated that he had little hope that the case would be laid before the Mexican members of the commission for consideration. So far as is known here, no discussion of the complaint has taken place so far before the whole commission. It is possible, however, that such a course may be adopted after the meeting tomorrow.

Among the men who may be expected to appear before the commission tomorrow are Mr. Loeb, representing the Guggenheim interests; John Hays Hammond, representing a group of Boston investors, and Carlos W. Van Law of the American Refining, Smelting and Mining Company of Boston.

It is expected that when the commission convenes in the morning changes in the Mexican Constitution as made by Carranza in a recent decree will come up. The Commissioners have taken a great interest in the political developments in Mexico, as they realize that any assurances which may be obtained from present authorities are dependent on nothing more than the personal influence of General Carranza. It is known that the Commissioners would like to see the ground cleared for the establishment of a national government in Mexico which could be dealt with on a ground of greater equality, and which would be able to assume a greater international responsibility than is possible for a de facto administration.

Restriction of Suffrage.

Reports here this afternoon were to the effect that some of the most important reforms which were instituted by Carranza in his recent decree dealing with the coming Presidential elections had not yet been published in the United States. It is stated that the restrictions which the decrees place on the exercise of suffrage are calculated to make any election held under them a mere farce. A copy of the decree has reached the American Commissioners from Washington, and, while the details of the document have not been revealed, it is said to stipulate that none of those who were connected, even remotely, with the Huerta administration shall have the right to vote. One of the things which the American Commissioners have been most interested in is the possibility of an amnesty which would enable many Mexicans of ability to return and lend their services in the work of rehabilitating the country.

The question of funds is again reported to be pressing in Mexico City. Prominent business houses in New York and other cities are said to have refused credit to the Carranza Government, pending the adjournment of the commission, with favorable action announced.

So far as has been made public, the financial question has not come up before the commission, except in so far as it concerned banking laws and proposed reforms. Rumors that the question of a large loan by American bankers, with the guarantee of the United States Government, was being discussed were met with persistent denials.

Only two members of the commission had arrived here tonight, but it was stated that all would be present when the commission convenes tomorrow.

ARREDONDO SEES CHIEF.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 1.—Señor Arredondo, Minister Designate to the United States, arrived from Washington this morning. From the station he went directly to the Palace to confer with General Carranza.

Commenting on the proceedings and prospects of the New London conference, he said that he expected the outcome to be completely satisfactory to both countries, and energetically denied the rumors that serious difficulties had arisen between the Mexican and American Commissioners.

He added that the conferences had been devoted to formulating an acceptable program maintaining order along the international boundary, and insuring the withdrawal of the American forces. The internal affairs of Mexico had been discussed only incidentally, in order to explain to the American representatives the real situation in Mexico, and to show to the American people the aims of the Constitutionalist revolution. Señor Arredondo paid a high tribute to the American press, saying that with the exception of a few yellow papers the press accorded fair treatment to Mexico and her Government.

VILLA HEADS FOR SATEVO.

Reported Moving Toward Satevo—Carranzistas Confer.

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 1.—Reports received today from Chihuahua through private sources stated that Villa and his bandits were moving southeast from Cusihuiriachic toward Satevo, fifty miles south of Chihuahua City. The general report in Chihuahua City is that Villa was in command at Cusihuiriachic, and that the few Carranza soldiers stationed there had gone over to Villa before the arrival of General Matias Romas and his command.

General Francisco Gonzales, commander of the Carranza forces in the North, returned from Chihuahua City today after a conference with General Jacinto Trevino, regarding the use of the northern troops to co-operate with General Trevino's commands in the field against Villa. It is possible that General Gonzales will take command of a force in the field in western Chihuahua against Villa, moving against the bandits from Casas Grandes, as a base in co-operation with the forces of General Ozuna.

FUNSTON REVIEWS TROOPS.

Praises Morale, Discipline, and Condition of New York Men.

Special to The New York Times.

McALLEN, Texas, Oct. 1.—Major Gen. Frederick Funston, who reviewed the troops of the New York Division this morning, expressed great satisfaction with the condition, morale, and discipline of the regiments. What impressed him more than anything else, he said, was the horsemanship exhibited by the cavalry and artillery and the proficiency the soldiers had shown in training "green" horses in three months. General Funston remarked that all the troops had their horses under perfect control and kept lines of troops, wagons, and other vehicles remarkably straight.

The Department Commander spoke of the plan of replacing regiments already on the border with those that had not yet seen service, and remarked on the possibility of bringing to Texas the three other New York infantry regiments—the First, the Tenth and the Forty-seventh.

General Funston said he thought it might be possible to fill up Major Gen. O'Ryan's command by sending the troops of other States here to take the places of the three New York regiments sent to Camp Whitman. Most of the troops now going to the border are from the South.

The General said that he had given up speculating on the Mexican situation. He expressed the opinion that the necessity of having troops upon the border had become greater in the last few weeks. This was partly in response to a question on a recommendation concerning the withdrawal of the Pershing column.

TWO REGIMENTS HOME.

Newark and Jersey City Hold Celebrations of Troops' Return.

Newark's officials and citizens welcomed home the First New Jersey Infantry on its arrival at the Broad Street Station of the Central Railroad yesterday afternoon. A rousing welcome greeted the soldiers as they scrambled from the cars, formed in lines, and marched up Broad Street with Brig. Gen. Edwin W. Hine and the regimental band and police band in the van.

Leaving Newark in June as militia the men returned as full-fledged regulars, and they looked the part as they marched with swinging stride past the cheering multitude that lined both sides of the streets all the way to Branch Brook Park, where the regiment was reviewed by Mayor Thomas L. Raymond and members of the Common Council preliminary to the return to the armory. The regiment will be mustered out this week.

The Fourth New Jersey Infantry Guard received an enthusiastic welcome when it got back to Jersey City yesterday noon. Several thousand citizens and members of patriotic and fraternal orders marched ahead of the regiment from the Pennsylvania Railroad Station in Exchange Place, up Montgomery Street, in Grove Street past the City Hall, and up Mercer Street to the armory at Bergen Avenue. The City Commissioners and many other city officials met the regiment and reviewed it from a grand stand at the City Hall. Mayor Fagan at the reviewing stand made a brief speech of welcome, to which Colonel George T. Vickers, Assistant Prosecutor of Hudson County, responded.

LANE DENIES CHARGE OF COL. ROOSEVELT

Contradicts Statement That He Said "Note Sending Has Not Been a Success."

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 1.—Secretary of the Interior Lane tonight made public a letter which he had sent to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, as follows:

"My Dear Colonel:

"I notice that in your Battle Creek speech you quote me as having said apropos of the beginning of our present negotiations with Mexico, that 'note sending has not been a success.' I made no such statement. The newspaper men were asking me as to how the negotiations were to be conducted at the American-Mexican conferences, and I told them that if I had my way we would sit at a round table and talk man fashion to each other and not deal formally with each other by an interchange of notes.

"At this point the reporter for one New York paper said: 'Then you regard note sending as a failure?' I said: 'By no means. I am talking of the manner in which men can come closer together at such a time and avoid the indirect methods which custom has imposed upon diplomatic negotiations.'

"At this conference there were present among others Mr. McFall and Mr. Simpson of The Associated Press, Mr. Groat of the United Press, and Mr. Goodwin of the International News Service, all of whom will, I believe, verify this statement. Of the dozen newspaper men present the man who asked the question was the only one who misquoted me.

"Chief Justice White has been quoted as saying that by our notes to Germany we achieved the greatest diplomatic triumph of a full half century. With this view I agree. I need, I believe that we achieved more than years of war could have accomplished.

"Very truly yours,

"FRANKLIN K. LANE."

TROOP TRANSFERS IN TEXAS.

North Carolinians Arriving There—Others to Return.

EL PASO, Texas, Sept. 30.—The First Infantry, North Carolina National Guard, arrived here today and is being followed by the Second and Third Infantry Regiments from the same State. The ambulance and hospital companies preceded the infantry regiment to the border.

Carrying out General Funston's orders for the return of National Guard commands as rapidly as other similar units reach the border the First Infantry, Pennsylvania National Guard, will leave here for Mount Gretna, Penn., early next week. The Third Infantry from the same State will follow and the Tenth Pennsylvania Infantry will leave later in the week.

The Second Pennsylvania Infantry will remain here and be converted into an artillery command.

IN JUSTICE TO W. W. BRIDE.

A Denial and a Statement as to His Potash Negotiations in England.

William W. Bride, a lawyer of Washington, D. C., who was formerly in the office of the Foreign Trade Advisers of the State Department, and last Summer visited England in the interest of a group of Americans who wished to make another effort to get potash out of England, strongly denies a statement made in a news article in THE TIMES of Sept. 10 that he returned after receiving an official intimation that it would be desirable for him to leave for America by the next steamer.

Mr. Bride says that he was cordially received by the representatives of the British Government with whom he had business. To support this he was able to show a friendly personal letter from the legal adviser of the Foreign Office and two books given to him by the legal adviser, each containing a cordial presentation inscription on the fly leaf. Mr. Bride says that ex-Consul General T. St. John Gaffney was employed to handle the German end of the potash negotiations because it was thought by their clients that Mr. Gaffney's known pro-German sentiments and the sympathy that existed for him in Germany on account of his virtual dismissal from his consular post would help him with the German Government. This was explained to the British authorities, and the fact that Mr. Bride and Mr. Gaffney were engaged in the same enterprise made no difference whatever in the attitude of British officials toward Mr. Bride.

Mr. Bride says that he was not ordered to leave England nor was an intimation that it was desirable for him to leave given to him. He left because the British Foreign Office was informed that all such cases as he was engaged in handling would be handled officially by the United States Government and not by private attorneys. This prevented him from accomplishing the object of his visit to London, and he returned because it was useless for him to remain in England.

OUST THE OLD GUARD.

Johnson's Followers Take Reins in California State Committee.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—Formal control of the Republican State Central Committee passed from the regular wing of the party to what is known as the united wing, when the new committee met here yesterday and organized. Supporters of Governor Hiram W. Johnson were elected to all the offices, and the candidacy of Charles E. Hughes was indorsed.

Chester H. Rowell, Fresno publisher, who has long been prominent in the Johnson ranks, was elected Chairman to succeed Francis V. Keesling, a San Francisco attorney.

FIND ARMY AVIATORS IN SEA.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 1.—Lawrence Sperry, the inventor and aviator, and Captain Leo A. Dewey, attached to the staff of Major Gen. Leonard Wood, both of whom started from Amityville at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon in a flying-boat, to fly to Boston, were rescued by life savers at 7:30 o'clock that night off the Block Island Light, where they had been forced to descend in the ocean.

Their machine was towed to Great Salt Pond, where it was tied up to the submarine tender Tallahassee. All today the aviators and men of the tender have worked on the boat in expectation of the flight's being resumed tomorrow morning.

The flight was a bomb-dropping and wireless test. The flying-boat was equipped with devices invented by Elmer A. Sperry, such as the Sperry gyroscopic compass and the Sperry horizontal and vertical stabilizers, and it was planned to make the trip entirely by compass and with as little manual control as possible.

After leaving Amityville, the machine flew over Forts Terry, Wright, and Mansfield, and "bombs" were dropped on each. From Fort Mansfield, the last in New York State, they flew over Narrangansett Pier and Newport, where "bombs" were dropped on Fort Adams and the other defensive works.

Shortly after 6 o'clock they became lost, and at about 7:30 picked up the Block Island Light and landed on the water. The Block Island life savers were signaled for and they rescued them. The flying-boat was damaged in making its landing.

RUMORS IN NICARAGUA.

Reports Current That American Banks Want Debt Paid.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Oct. 1.—It is reported here that American bankers to whom the Government is indebted have notified the Government that it must liquidate the indebtedness by Oct. 15, or that otherwise they will take over sufficient of the country's revenues to reimburse them.

Another report is that the United States Government is considering the rehabilitation of Nicaragua's finances by adding $2,000,000 to the $3,000,000 due on the canal treaty concession, thus forming a fund to guarantee an issue of 15,000,000 cordobas (a cordoba is equivalent to a dollar, American gold,) with which to pay all debts.

CHAIN STOPS SHIP'S SHAFT.

Steamer Nacoochee Held Up After Fouling an Anchored Barge.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Oct. 1.—The steamer Nacoochee, from Boston for Savannah, was held up here today by an anchor chain wound around her shaft and will be unable to proceed until tomorrow morning.

She put in here to land Quartermaster Victor Greenwood of Port Clyde, N. S., who had a hand badly crushed, and while transferring him to a small boat she fouled the anchored barge Henry Clary. The anchor chain of the barge was wound around the steamer's shaft in such a way that it was impossible to work the engines, and a message was sent to Boston asking for a diver to come and remove the obstruction.

Dr. Cadman on Border Life.

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, Chaplain of the Twenty-third Infantry, who has just returned with the regiment from the border, gave the first of a series of talks on "Life on the Mexican Border" at the West Side Young Men's Christian Association yesterday afternoon. He said his experiences with the troops convinced him that if every young man in the country could have three months' similar training, it would make for a better and cleaner manhood.

Stop and think—Do you realize what science and invention has accomplished in your day—

WHAT would Hendrick Hudson say could he stand on the banks of the river he discovered and view an aeroplane sailing through the air, and one of the wonderful all-steel trains of the New Jersey Central almost flying over the rails.

We accept as a matter of course the fact that machines weighing thousands of pounds fly through the air at incredible speed, and great steel trains lighted by electricity and drawn by giant locomotives make the run from New York to Philadelphia in two short hours, but it is none the less marvelous, and should bring us to a realization and appreciation of the wonderful age in which we live.

The de Luxe New Jersey Central two-hour train service every hour on the hour supplies the luxury of travel to Philadelphia. The absence of smoke and dirt (hard coal used) and the fact that you pass through no tunnels, makes it the favorite route for particular people.

TOBEY-made

WHEN a man does something that cannot be improved we call his work a "classic."

In the Seventeenth Century, design in household furniture reached its classical periods. But none of the luxury-loving French Kings, or the English designers, Adam, Sheraton and Chippendale, ever saw houses heated by steam, lighted by gas or electricity and equipped with sanitary plumbing.

Tobey Hand-Made Furniture utilizes the classical ideals of the Seventeenth Century where they fit modern conditions. The perfect cabinet work and the finish which develops and preserves the exquisite tracery of the natural grain of the wood may be truly characterized as classical achievements on the part of the Tobey artisans.

One hundred years from now Tobey Hand-Made pieces of today will be the most valuable of all antiques.

This fact makes the two exquisite bed-room sets now offered at $2,500 each, genuine investments. African Satinwood and Australian Plumwood have been used in making these truly distinctive and rare works of modern art.

Visitors are welcome. No one is asked or expected to buy unless the exact article that harmonizes with your personality is found.

As you spend more time with your furniture than with anything else that influences your thought, it is important that it be acceptable to you as well as artistically correct in every detail.

We are constantly replenishing our stock with individual pieces and we are glad to have all connoisseurs enjoy them in our display rooms.

THE

has pleasure in announcing the following changes and improvements, which have been made.

The Restaurant has been greatly altered and improved and entirely re-decorated and re-equipped by the most skillful artisans in New York, and in its new form will appeal to all our friends and clients. The changes include a raised platform around the room. This room opens this evening for dinner.

The Ball Room will be re-decorated and re-equipped. It is the most beautiful room in New York, and in connection with our restaurant is most suitable for Balls, Receptions, Weddings, and other social functions.

The Oak Room, which has been such a great success in past years, has been re-equipped, and our endeavors will be directed toward its retaining that hold on the liking of our clients which it has always possessed.

The Crystal Room, which was such a pronounced success last year, will be re-opened on or about the first of November, and we have every reason to hope and believe it will continue its prosperous career.

We propose to exert to the utmost all our powers to serve and gratify our customers.

The Collection of Checks

The collection of a check is not so simple as it may seem to the depositor, whose care ordinarily ends when he puts it through the wicket and has it duly entered in his pass book.

The Collection Department of a bank is one of its most important departments, and upon it devolves a very great deal of responsibility, for there are not only checks to collect, but there are also promissory notes, which the law demands shall be paid by a bank at the date of maturity, and not any time thereafter without instructions; there are drafts with valuable documents attached, and other forms of collection, some familiar and others unfamiliar.

The cost of collection is of itself no small item—overhead expenses of a bank, clerk hire, postage stamps, stationery and other items, in fact the same expenses that any merchant is put to in conducting his business, but it is upon the perfection of its system of collecting checks that the Harriman National Bank takes especial pride.

The Harriman National Bank enjoys exceptional facilities through its numerous correspondents all over the country, for the collection not only of checks, but of all other forms of credit, and its customers benefit correspondingly.

RIPLEY URGES FIGHT ON EIGHT-HOUR LAW

CRITICISES THE PRESIDENT

Wilson Acted Without a Hearing on the Question, He Says, Despite Roads' Protest.

President E. P. Ripley of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railroad, in a circular to stockholders, declares anew his opinion and that of his company that the Adamson eight-hour law is unconstitutional and that "steps should be taken to resist it in every lawful manner." He also urges stockholders to use their influence in favor of appropriate remedial legislation and recites the circumstances of the enactment of the law as follows:

"The events which have recently taken place relative to the attempted increase of wages of the railroad engineers, firemen, conductors, and brakemen are of such an epoch-making character that it is proper to give you this account at the same time that you receive the annual report for the last fiscal year, which closed before these events took place. These trainmen have been on the average the best paid employes on the railroads and among the best paid employes in any field of endeavor.

"The demand out of which the present controversy grew was made by the trainmen in the freight service. Broadly speaking, the pay of these trainmen has been on the basis of ten hours' work or less. A trainman got a day's pay for his run, no matter how much it fell short of ten hours, but if it exceeded ten hours he got extra pay on the basis of one-tenth of a day's pay for each hour beyond ten hours. The trainman also got extra pay for any distance by which his run exceeded 100 miles, on the basis of one-tenth of a day's pay for each 10 miles beyond 100, and this was true even though the total run was made in much less than ten hours. In cases where the run was over 100 miles and took 10 hours, a man had the option of claiming his extra pay on the basis of either excess mileage or excess hours, whichever produced the larger amount of pay.

"These trainmen in freight service, acting through their four brotherhoods, demanded that their wages be increased through the expedient of paying them for the first eight hours their present standard pay for ten hours or less, and so that all time over eight hours would be paid for as extra time; and through the further expedient of increasing by 50 per cent. the pay they receive for extra time. These demands did not seek that their working day should be shortened to eight hours or at all.

"The railroad companies declined to accept these demands, claiming that they were wholly unreasonable, and claiming that they would be unjust, not only to their bondholders and stockholders, but also to the general public which ultimately, through increased rates or impaired service, would have to bear the additional burden, and would be unjust to other railroad employes; but offered, however, to submit the whole controversy to arbitration, by the Interstate Commerce Commission or by a board of arbitration appointed under the Newlands act.

Says Wilson Acted Without Hearing.

"The trainmen declined to arbitrate and took all necessary steps to strike, with a view to tying up the railroad traffic of the country, both passenger and freight.

"At this juncture the President of the United States summoned both sides and stated that he had decided that in order to avert a strike the railroads ought to pay the trainmen for the first eight hours the present standard ten hours' pay and for every hour beyond eight hours at the rate of one-eighth of a day's pay. The President's suggestion, of course, still left the men free to claim their pay on the basis of excess mileage whenever that would produce a greater amount than the increased scale on a time basis which the President proposed. The President suggested that the men hold in abeyance for consideration in the future their demand for still further increase in wages through being paid 50 per cent. additional for excess time. This decision of the President had been reached without any hearing of the controversy.

"The railroad companies declined to acceptd this proposal and pointed out that the increase which the President thus urged would amount to about $60,000,000 a year and that the railroad companies and the general public were entitled to have the demand for such an increase heard and determined by the orderly processes of arbitration. The President also advised the railroad companies that he would use his influence to get the Interstate Commerce Commission to grant any increase in rates that might be necessary for the purpose of placing upon the general public any necessary increase in railroad expenses thus brought about. The railroad companies replied that they were not warranted in thus committing the public to such a burden in advance of a hearing as to its reasonableness, and, moreover, that the Interstate Commerce Commission would necessarily be independent of the President in reaching its conclusion.

"The railroad companies renewed their offers to arbitrate and further offered to arbitrate before a board to be appointed by the President, and offered to keep each man's time on the eight-hour basis as well as on the present basis so that any award favorable to the men could be made retroactive and payable in cash for the entire period beginning Sept. 1, 1916."

Sees Government Powerless.

Mr. Ripley, continuing, reviews the strike threat, the passage of the Adamson bill and the plan of President Wilson for an increase in freight rates if necessary, and says:

"The result appears to be that according to the view of the Government it is under existing laws powerless to protect the public against any nation-wide combination on the part of railroad employes to paralyze by strike all the railroads in the country. If this view is correct, it must be on the theory that the Clayton act which was passed and approved about two years ago, was intended to and does facilitate strikes at the expense of the public by freeing from restraint and punishment any conspiracy, no matter how widespread or unreasonable, to paralyze by strikes the rail transportation upon which the public is dependent.

"Under this view of existing law upon which the Government seems to have acted, it appears that until some remedial legislation shall be adopted the only way to avert such tieups is for Congress to grant by special legislation whatever demands labor combinations may insist upon as their price for permitting the people to continue to enjoy railway transportation.

"The question, therefore, becomes of profound importance to you, both as a citizen depending upon railroad transportation and as a holder of railroad stock, to consider what can be done to obtain necessary remedial legislation. The brotherhoods made it clear at the session of Congress just ended that they will resist with all their power any such remedial legislation, whether it seeks to prohibit strikes in advance of public investigation or to put any form of restraint upon labor combinations. It is, therefore, reasonable to assume that the public demand for a remedy will have to be persistent and forceful, or else the public will continue in its present defenseless position.

"Since the precedent of abandoning arbitration and hurriedly paying the demands of railroad unions by special Congressional enactment has thus been established, does it not behoove you to exercise your influence in favor of appropriate remedial legislation?

"This company believes that the act which Congress has passed is unconstitutional, and that steps should be taken to resist it in every lawful manner."

CITY BANK CONDEMNS LAW.

People Would Have Suffered by Strike, October Letter Asserts.

The National City Bank devotes half of its lengthy October letter to a discussion of the Adamson eight-hour law, condemning the haste with which it was passed and commenting on the possible effects of the precedent established for the railway employes.

"The members of Congress who voted for the measure," says the letter, "generally acknowledged that the policy could not be justified upon any plea but the one which justifies surrender to a foreign enemy, to wit: that for the sake of noncombatants it is necessary to yield to superior force, without considering the merits of the case.

"That timorous decision does not sit well with the American people. There is something repugnant in the idea of bringing the power of the Government to enforce the demands of a comparatively small group of men, under threat of mischief they may do to the community, without any inquiry as to the reasonableness of their demands.

"A strike would have been a serious matter, no doubt, but it is preposterous to suppose that no trains would have been run, or that the traffic of the country could long be held up by the arbitrary action of these leaders. It is highly improbable, in fact it is certainly known that a very considerable share of the brotherhood membership would not have approved of the uncompromising attitude of the chiefs."

In discussing the effect upon the strikers themselves if a body of men attempted to curtail production in any line, the National City Bank says:

"There was some talk that if the railway men went on a strike they would be supported by the Federation of Labor, which would call out the wage earners of its organization in all trades. This would be carrying the idea of class conflict to an extreme where its fallacy would be apparent. The effect would be to stop the production and distribution of goods; but for whose consumption are goods produced and distributed? It is certainly not chiefly for the 357,515 persons who paid income taxes this year and their families. They would suffer comparatively slight inconvenience. It is to supply the wants of the other 100,000,000 persons, and chiefly to supply the wants of those who depend upon their weekly earnings and weekly purchases, that the vast machinery of business is required."

New Plan for Film Distribution.

The Triangle Film Corporation has adopted a new plan of film distribution partly co-operative in its working, according to a statement issued from the executive offices here. By this plan local interests in the twenty-one cities in which its branch offices are located will be given the opportunity of entering into partnership with the parent organization. The new plan tends toward a more independent ownership of the exchanges through which the product of the corporation is distributed and a constant increase in the number of smaller exchanges within each general exchange district. This is a reversal of the trend in recent years which has been toward a gradual centralization of the film distributing business. It is thought the new system will result in economy and bringing the exhibitor and producer closer together.

Aviators to Appear in "Le Poilu."

Four American aviators have been engaged to appear in "Le Poilu," an operette in two acts, to be produced by Lucien Bonheur, director of the Théâtre Français, in association with the Messrs. Shubert next Monday night at the Garrick. The operette, which is by Pierre Veber and Maurice Hennequin, with music by H. Maurice Jacquet, has been performed more than 450 times at the Palais Royal and Bouffes Parisiens, Paris. Andre Bellon will play the principal rôle in which he appeared in Paris, and will wear the uniform he wore in the trenches. Jeanne Maubourg, Belle Ashlyn, Madeleine D'Espiroir, Sidonie Spero, Lucille Kent, Alice Martin, Pierre Mindaist, Gerard Viterbo, and Emil D'Etramont will be others in the cast.

Prof. Guthrie Lectures Tonight.

Professor William B. Guthrie of the College of the City of New York will give the first of a series of twenty-eight lectures on American government and politics at 8:15 o'clock tonight at Washington Irving High School. The first lecture will be on "Primary Considerations of the Nation." THE TIMES erroneously printed that the lecture would be given at the New York Public Library, 121 East Fifty-eighth Street.

THE LITTLE THEATRE REOPENS WITH 'HUSH'

ESTELLE WINWOOD CHARMS

Hers is the Central Role in a Nicely Produced Comedy That Twits the Sedulous Liberals.

Mr. Greville	Eric Blind
Mrs. Greville	Winifred Fraser

Mrs. Allison	Katharine Brook
Miss Allison	Cecilia Radclyffe
Lizzie	Augusta Haviland
Rev. James Allison	Cecil Yapp
Keith Allison	Cecil Fletcher
Lucilla	Estelle Winwood
Mrs. Stevens	Mrs. Kate De Becker
Mrs. Shipley	Ruby Hallier
Mrs. Flummock	Myra Brook
Mrs. Blatherwick	Mrs. Myra Birkett
Mrs. Clutterbuck	Shirley Aubert
Mrs. Warwick	Agnes McCarthy
Mrs. Russett	Carolyn Darling

After standing dark and disconsolate for an entire season, the Little Theatre will reopen its doors tomorrow evening when a little English comedy called "Hush" is given to the American public for the first time. It is the work of Violet Pearn, hitherto known only—and not very well known at that—as the author of a piece called "The Starlight Express." Her new play has already been seen in Manchester and in Liverpool.

It is by way of being a mildly satirical treatment of the sedulous liberals; it spoofs the young radicals. It twits the conscientiously unconventional with being both conventional and rather tediously behind the times. It gently reminds our rising young anarchs that, after all, the Victorian age is over and done with and that it is a trifle late for them to be getting excited about it. All these salutary reflections are made in a comedy that is bright but scanty. Here is an hour's wit and wisdom stretched out for two hours and a half of thin and unsubstantial entertainment. Or so it seemed to those that filled the Little Theatre Saturday night for one of the several private performances that always precede an Ames première.

For a Winthrop Ames première it will be tomorrow night, the first production to be made in his tiny playhouse in two years. Only "A Pair of Silk Stockings" has been given there since the revival of "The Truth" in the Spring before the war. The production of "Hush" is marked by the care and good taste which distinguish all his work in the theatre. As a matter of course, then, "Hush" is nicely staged and well played, particularly by two newcomers from England, Estelle Winwood and Winifred Fraser. Miss Winwood is an actress of uncommon ability, and a person of unusual charm. She recalls faintly the Grace George of fifteen years ago.

Hers is the central rôle in a play within a play, for the new piece at the Little Theatre is another use of the pattern which "Fanny's First Play" familiarized to this generation. The inner play is written this time by a dashing damsel who would go straight to self-conscious Greenwich Village if ever she were to cross the Atlantic. As it is, she joins the Daughters of Revealment, who, taking a hint from the Boy Scouts, pledge themselves to do or say something shocking at least once a day. She regards herself as the natural result of the revolt from centuries of oppression.

In her gospel, nothing should be hidden—not even her fortunately comely figure. Nothing should go unsaid, so she dashes off a play intended to be simply too shocking for words. And her fiancé's mother, played by Miss Fraser, as a silly, humorous, white-haired, and utterly charming marquise, who must have read Dickens serially, goes to see it. This lady, who has had six children, is less offended than bored by sex discussions, and secretly wishes the liberals would be a little less threadbare in their observations. But she enjoys "Hush" at the Haymarket, and afterward is quite amused when she learns she was supposed to have been shocked.

And the interior play does curiously resemble all those comedies designed ruthlessly to upset institutions that have been prostrate for years, boldly to say something that goes without saying, magnificently to free you from prejudices you did not know existed, from manacles you never wore. But it is unfair of Miss Pearn to identify such efforts with juvenile radicals. Israel Zangwill is not a lad. Henry Arthur Jones is about as adult a dramatist as it would be safe to deal with. Yet each of them might have written this play by the daughter of revealment, and very likely did at one time or another.

This interior comedy deals with a girl brought up in a pre-Adamite naturalness that would have enthralled Rousseau. Marrying the sea-faring son of a rector, who lives at Gaskell-on-Fearn, she is taught by his people to be so cryptic about her expected baby that, after it is born, she continues to blush at the very thought of it, to continue to call it an "event" or a "link" or a "certain subject," and thus arouses in the village a suspicion that she had not come by it honestly.

This is an amusing trifle, charmingly played by Miss Winwood, with the assistance of such able artists as Cecil Yapp, Cecil Fletcher, Augusta Haviland, and Louie Emery. Of course, the prologue and epilogue have the effect of disowning it, but whether they were part of the original scheme or were added because Miss Pearn was a trifle ashamed of it, you cannot tell from the product. Possibly she merely wished to piece out a short play into a satisfying and full evening's entertainment. If so, she cannot be said to have succeeded.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The four principal parts in Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester's new farce, "Business Before Pleasure," will be played by Grant Mitchell, George Parsons, Kathleen Clifford and Fritz Williams. What time William Collier isn't acting in "Nothing But the Truth" he is directing rehearsals of the Chester farce for H. H. Frazee.

With the engagement of Ronald Byram the cast for "Shirley Kaye," the new comedy in which Elsie Ferguson will be starred, has been completed. The play will be produced next Monday night in Atlantic City, and after a few weeks out of town, will come to one of the local Klaw & Erlanger houses.

Julia Arthur is assembling the players who will appear with her in her forthcoming production of Mr. Lindsey's romantic drama, "Seremonda." Alphonz Ethier will leave the cast of "The Guilty Man" next Saturday night to assume an important role in Miss Arthur's company, and Mary Forbes, who has been playing in London, will depart at once for America in order to be here for the first rehearsal.

George M. Cohan left New York on Saturday for Detroit with the company that will appear in support of Chauncey Olcott in "Honest John O'Brien," his latest play. The first performance will be given tonight and in the cast will be seen Willette Kershaw, Grace Goodall, Marion Barney, Mary Ramsey, May Dale, June Scott, Joseph Kilgour, George Sidney, Edward Gillespie, Calvin Thomas, George Schaeffer, George Fredericks and Noel Roche. After engagements in Cleveland and Baltimore the piece will be presented here.

"The Amber Empress" ended its engagement at the Globe on Saturday night because its contract had expired and Charles Dillingham wanted the theatre for his production of "Betty," in which Raymond Hitchcock will reveal to Manhattan his British accent tomorrow night. An effort was made to find another playhouse for "The Amber Empress" but none was available. As soon as one can be procured the musical comedy will resume its engagement.

When he has finished posing for "The Black Wolf," his latest film, in the Lasky studios in California, Lou Tellegen will return to the stage. It is probable that a stage version of one of the pictures for which he has acted will be arranged for his use, and that he will take advantage of the advertising the screen has given him by touring the country.

Earle Browne has succeeded Philip Merrivale in the role of the Grouch in "Pollyanna." Mr. Merrivale gave up the part to join Laurette Taylor's company.

Rehearsals of the new Winter Garden revue, which will follow the current attraction within a few weeks, will be begun today on the stages of four Shubert theatres.

Augustus Thomas's play, "Rio Grande," seen last Spring at the Empire, will begin its second season tonight at the Hollis Street, Boston.

Kirah Markham, who was a member of Emanuel Reicher's organization last season, is en route to Los Angeles to act principal roles in the Little Theatre there under the direction of Richard Ordynski.

Mary Pickford will begin work this morning on the second picture produced since she became her own manager. While John Emerson, who directed the taking of "Less Than the Dust," the first picture, is cutting and assembling it, Maurice Tourneur will direct the photographing of the second.

Tuesday night, Oct. 17, is the date set for the first public showing of the Annette Kellermann film, "A Daughter of the Gods," at the Lyric.

Plans for American Drama Year, as the Drama League has named the theatrical season of 1916-17, are progressing. William Seymour has been added to the committee in charge of the selection of American plays to be produced under the direction of Arthur Hopkins. Mr. Seymour was for many years associated with the late Charles Frohman. The complete program of plays to be reproduced will be announced shortly.

Twenty-four girl skaters, half of them from the Admiral's Palace in Berlin and the others gathered from Switzerland, Norway, and Sweden, arrived Saturday on the liner Kristianiafjord to appear in last season's Hippodrome show, which will begin its tour on Oct. 14 in Philadelphia. They will appear with Charlotte in the ice ballet.

Arkansas, where he started practice in Helena.

Immediately plunging into politics, he fought the organization that controlled Philips County. At first he lost, but finally, in 1886, he won and was elected to represent his county in the Legislature. Two years later he was elected to the State Senate, of which he was elected President in 1891. He secured the enactment of a law which brought about the collection of more than $400,000 back taxes from various railroads. After serving his term as State Senator, Senator Clarke announced himself as candidate for Attorney General of Arkansas and he was elected. His race for Governor followed, and again he was elected with little opposition. His term as Governor ended in 1897, and he refused the renomination, announcing himself as candidate for United States Senator to succeed James K. Jones.

The contest was to be decided at the primaries, and after several counties had voted overwhelmingly against him, Senator Clarke withdrew, announcing he would be candidate at the expiration of Senator Jones's next term. He began organizing his forces, and had himself appointed in 1900 a member of the Democratic National Committee. He was a prominent delegate at the National Convention in Kansas City, and after his return spent the next two years keeping his organization in line and preparing for the battle he knew would come in 1902.

Outspoken in Public Life.

The campaign in that year, which resulted in his being sent to the United States Senate, was one of the most acrimonious ever fought in Arkansas. At the election Senator Clarke gained more than two-thirds of the counties. Years after Senator Clarke and former Senator Jeff Davis, now dead, became estranged. This was emphasized when Davis was sent to Washington as Senator from Arkansas in 1907. It is customary for the senior Senator to introduce the new one from his State, and this Senator Clarke refused to do. The late Senator Money of Mississippi performed the ceremony and escorted Senator Davis to the Vice President's desk and made the introduction. The same situation arose when John N. Heiskell was appointed to succeed Senator Davis. Heiskell's newspaper had always been opposed to Senator Clarke, and Senator John Sharp Williams introduced the new Senator.

Senator Clarke was a man of impetuous temperament and never hesitated to express his disapproval of either men or measures. In his younger days he sought out a member of the Arkansas Legislature, who had impugned some of his actions, in the lobby of a Little Rock hotel, to deliberately spit in his face and then draw a pistol when his fellow legislator signified his intention of resenting his attack. Such evidences of his quick temper, however, rather augmented his prestige, and for many years Senator Clarke was rather a hero to a certain majority of the Arkansas Democracy. To this majority he was affectionately known as "Old Cotton Top," owing to his hair, which became gray early in life.

Senator Clarke acted for several years as Chairman of the important Committee on Commerce and was the ranking Democratic member of the Foreign Relations Committee and the Committee on Military Affairs.

In 1883 he married Miss Frances M. Moore of Helena, Ark.

HART FILM A "THRILLER."

"The Return of 'Draw' Egan" a Good Picture of the Wild West.

"The Return of 'Draw' Egan," the new feature film exhibited yesterday at the Rialto, is an unusually good western picture of the William S. Hart school. It is better than most films of its type because it tells a reasonable story, or at least it tells its story convincingly, which amounts to the same thing.

Hart does this Bret Harte sort of thing so well that he must begin to fear he will spend the rest of his life in chaps and a saddle. He can draw a gun with the best road agents of fiction, can roll a cigarette with one hand and strike a match on his nails with the nonchalance of Will Rogers, so it is no wonder his director keeps him standing for closeups beside the counter of the Yellow Dog Saloon.

"The return of 'Draw' Egan" is the story of the regeneration of a bad man through love. Egan, the mysterious masked bandit of the hills, has long been the terror of his district, but finally in the course of human events he is driven to cover and it is only by grace of an underground passage from his mountain cabin that he breaks through the iron ring of the posse.

In a distant range town his cool nerve and virtuosity with a revolver cause him to be made Marshal by the law-abiding element. He cleans up the town and has just begun to hope that his past is buried when one of his former henchmen arrives and holds the revealment of Egan's identity over his head. The accusation finally comes, and the settling of the score after the primal manner of plainsmen, is one of the most exciting sections of a film that almost equals the Fairbanks shows for the number and intensity of its fights. Of course, any audience would be terribly disappointed if Egan was not absolved and accepted by the girl, so the ending is happy.

MANHATTAN OPERA CONCERT

Mme. Margarete Matzenauer of the Metropolitan Opera Company was the soloist of the Wagner concert at the Manhattan Opera House last night, the fourth in the series of Sunday night concerts that is being given there with Oscar Spirescu as conductor. Mme. Matzenauer sang Senta's ballad from "The Flying Dutchman" and the Liebestod from "Tristan und Isolde." The orchestral numbers were the "Tannhäuser" Overture, the Prize Song from "Die Meistersinger," Siegfried's Funeral March from "Götterdämmerung," the "Meistersinger" Prelude, and the Ride of the Valkyries and Wotan's Farewell from "Die Walküre."

The orchestra was heard to better advantage last night than at any of its performances during the series. Mme. Matzenauer was in good voice for the beautiful singing that distinguishes her work. She added Wagner's "Träumerei" to her number in the first part. Mr. Spirescu, the conductor, proved himself a capable and spirited interpreter of Wagner's music.

BARITONE BAKLANOFF HERE.

Russian Singer Had Difficulty in Leaving Switzerland and Italy.

Georges Baklanoff, the Russian baritone, who arrived yesterday on the American liner Philadelphia from Paris, to join the Boston National Grand Opera Company, had difficulty in getting out of Switzerland and Italy.

When he was in Zurich, Norfert Salter, an operatic agent in Berlin, sent a notice to a local paper saying that Baklanoff had been engaged to sing at the Imperial Opera House, and that a safe conduct passport was waiting for him at Berne. M. Baklanoff said it was true that he had received an invitation to go to Berlin, but had naturally declined it, since Russia and Germany were at war.

He tore up his correspondence before going to Italy, when the police refused him a passport into France until he convinced them that he was on his way to America. On his arrival in Paris M. Baklanoff had to proceed at once to the Prefecture of the Police and explain it all over again, and even then the French officials did not seem satisfied.

All the trouble was caused, the singer said, by the zeal of the press agent at Berlin.

Mme. Elvira Amarzar, a Russian coloratura soprano from Petrograd, arrived on the liner to join the Boston Opera Company.

THE SHAKE FUNEREAL.

The Union League Club millennium has been postponed indefinitely. Countless thousands mourn. Mr. ROOSEVELT refuses to have his face on the same button with Mr. TAFT'S. He wants it distinctly understood that the ceremony, the funereal ceremony, it seems, at the Union League tomorrow night is no reconciliation tableau, no mimic reintegration of the lost love between him and "WILL." He goes as an honorary member of the club, and to make the reception to Mr. HUGHES a success. And the handshaking with the ostracized set, the 1912 porch climbers, will be purely formal, the heart will not go with the hand:

> I will make no advances to shake hands with Mr. TAFT. I will be in the receiving line and I will shake hands with Mr. TAFT only in the same manner that I did at Professor LOUNSBURY'S funeral in New Haven. I would do the same thing with Mr. BARNES, or with Mr. ROOT, if they were in line.

Implacable Indian, he will not pretend to forgive. The bubble of harmony is dissolved. What good man has not hoped that Mr. PENROSE and Mr. CRANE and Mr. SMOOT would figure in the show? Mr. ROOSEVELT is unruly, all the Republican fat is in the fire, the world is deprived of a masterpiece of humbug, and the Union League Reception Committee is in doleful dumps.

The Colonel is all for arbitration now. Would he consent to have the proper duration of the perfunctory handshake referred to a committee consisting of the Hon. CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW, General HORACE PORTER, and the Hon. GEORGE W. PERKINS, men and politicians of all-acknowledged amiability and experience of social usage? Mr. BARNES shouldn't refuse himself the joy of being present at the dolorous handshake. He would be sure to shake with laughter, if not with the Colonel.

But why does the Colonel insist on shaking hands as at a funeral? A cheering omen for Mr. HUGHES'S campaign.

NEW YORK'S 1916 REFERENDUM.

This State is to vote this Fall respecting a bond issue for $10,000,000. Generally speaking, it is not a good time to propose the spending of money or the incurring of obligations. This case may be "different." The expenditure of $2,500,000 of the $10,000,000 by the State will establish the State's claim to receive from private citizens the gift of an equal sum for the same purpose. The entire $10,000,000 is to be spent in the acquirement of real estate which would cost more hereafter, and which cannot be stolen or wasted. It is an investment rather than a cost of living that is proposed, and the action by New York will obligate New Jersey to co-operate in the same object. The fixed charge of $45,000 will give the entire population of the State an undivided interest in the common possession of a property which was utilized this year by ten persons for each dollar of the fixed charge. At a dime apiece it was cheaper than visiting "the movies," and incomparably more profitable in its results.

No doubt those who must vote on the $10,000,000 bond issue recognize that reference is made to Bear Mountain Park, the 24,721-acre estate on which $8,000,000 already has been spent, and which could not be bought for that sum. In a sense the project is priceless in worth. There is not such another park in the world. Larger areas may be found in "common" lands, but none of them possesses both the Hudson River and the Palisades, both primeval forests and charmingly cultivated spaces, and so convenient of access, "for the use of all the people," as the referendum puts it. As the accounts now stand New Jersey has contributed 5 per cent. of the cost, which is not far from its proportion according to the area in New Jersey. New York's public funds account for 40 per cent., and private gifts for 55. In respect to private contributions the project is unique. They may be regarded as a margin below which the State's investment cannot fall in value. Buildings deteriorate, and opinions differ regarding their value and cost. New York has never made a park investment which it regretted, and the beginning of regret is not likely to be made with the strip of land running from Fort Lee to Newburg.

There might be a time when $10,000,000 could be better spared, but the cost of the land then is likely to be so much higher that there would be no true economy in waiting. Although the Democrats opposed the referendum, there is nothing partisan about the proposal, and it might very well be detached from national politics.

THE HYPHEN VOTE, THE SILENT VOTE, AND THE AMERICAN VOTE.

From the beginning of this year its striking political characteristic has been that the politicians could not guess what the people were thinking about. There has been no delusion concerning any general apathy; it has been evident that the people were deeply, intensely interested. The Spring primaries gave such extraordinary results, in the overthrow or narrow escapes of established party leaders, that the politicians were frightened and uneasy. There was manifest a deep-seated dissatisfaction with something or other, but they could not discover what. So, on the Republican side especially, but to some extent on both, they put on the soft pedal while they were trying to find out what was going on in the minds of the people, what was the direction of the unmistakable unrest. One of the difficulties which politicians find in interpreting public sentiment is that under our system it is so seldom possible to get a clean-cut expression on an issue without complicating circumstances. The politician knows that if he guesses wrong his fate will be swift and disastrous.

It has been evident, too, that what was passing in the minds of the silent voters had something to do with the war and our foreign policy, but whether it portended a sympathy with Germany and a desire for a feeble policy in the interest of preserving peace at any cost, or the reverse, the politicians could not decide. Neither could they tell whether the German vote was strong enough, and would be cast with such unanimity even if strong enough, as to make it necessary to conciliate it, or whether one who petted the German vote would thereby antagonize other votes in dangerous numbers. Most of them have shown an inclination toward the first of these opinions, without going so far as to burn their bridges behind them. The most notable of these is Mr. HUGHES.

There has been as yet no vote of the people as a whole, but there have been primary elections which, in our opinion, have indicated with substantial unanimity not only that the silent vote is deeply stirred, but the direction which its thought is taking. The Spring primaries showed apparently chaotic results if viewed in any other light. In one Congressional primary, held in January, one of the candidates appealed for votes as an opponent of President WILSON on the issue of "militarism." This was the Fifth Mississippi, where Congressman WITHERSPOON, whose death had left a vacancy, had taken the same attitude, and this candidate believed it popular in that district. The issue was clearly made, and his opponent, Mr. VENABLE, was elected. Then came the astonishing Spring primaries, which bewildered the politicians, but which should not have bewildered them if read by the only lamp they refused to use. Senator WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH, who expected as a matter of course the empty compliment of a nomination as Michigan's favorite son, was defeated by HENRY FORD, who was not in any real sense a candidate, but whose name was on the ballot, and therefore offered an easy alternative for the protest vote against SMITH; Senator CUMMINS, the regular and apparently unopposed candidate in Nebraska, was a minority nominee and nearly defeated by FORD, while thousands of voters took the trouble to write other names on their ballots—more than half as many, in fact, as voted for CUMMINS; LA FOLLETTE was at first reported defeated in Wisconsin; Nebraska denied to BRYAN even the pleasure of going as a delegate to the convention. The theory that FORD's vote indicated that the voters were crazy over pacifism was discounted by the defeat of BRYAN, a pacifist, and the theory that the liquor interests accomplished that feat encountered the objection that BRYAN'S candidate for the Senate was I. J. DUNN, attorney for a brewery, opponent of the early closing law, and also defeated. Nothing seemed sure except that the voters were registering their deep disapproval of something—something, to the politicians, as yet unknown.

LA FOLLETTE, CUMMINS, and BRYAN have all conciliated the German vote, and SMITH has "pussyfooted." The moral would have been plain if it had not been for the usufruct going to FORD. The figures, however, show that the anti-Cummins vote in Nebraska did not go to FORD. He got 26,884 of it, HUGHES 15,490, ESTABROOK 8,132, ROSS 5,506, and ROOSEVELT 1,764; CUMMINS'S own vote was only 30,290. ROSS was an illiterate livery-stable keeper who could not spell words of three letters, and the vote for him was generally treated as a joke. It was not a joke; it was the ill-expressed indignation of 5,506 American citizens who cast about for any club with which to beat their anger into men's heads. The names of ROOSEVELT and HUGHES had to be written in. Only at first was the vote for FORD interpreted as a pacifist uprising. The surest proof that it represented no real desire was given by the Michigan delegation, which immediately proceeded to ignore the instruction given at the primaries to vote for FORD and split between HUGHES and ROOSEVELT.

The lesson which the politicians should have read was this: CUMMINS and BRYAN got the German vote, or, rather, they got so much of it as obeys the dictation of German-American politicians acting in the interest of Germany rather than the United States; for, as we shall proceed to show, there are great numbers of Germans who refuse to be so swayed. In exchange for this gain, they lost the silent vote; the votes of those Americans who are deeply discontented with "pussyfooting" at the expense of American honor, but who, just because they are the silent vote, do not know how numerous they are and sometimes despair amid the vociferous noise of the other kind.

The German-American politicians were misled by the protest vote, which was cast for FORD as the only available club with which to knock out SMITH and CUMMINS, and a real attempt was made to capitalize it at the Ohio primaries which followed. BURTON was the organization candidate, but an effort was made to get the German vote for FORD, and advertisements saying, "Scratch the name on "your ballot and write in the name of "FORD," "This will make Washington, "D. C., sit up and take notice that "you are against war," &c., filled the newspapers. Now Ohio is a State where the German vote is strong. Cincinnati is a German capital. But only a few thousand votes were cast for FORD, and of these more were cast in the Democratic than in the Republican primary, though more Germans are Republican than are Democratic. The German voters disregarded instructions and voted as Americans.

There was, however, a real German-American candidate in Ohio. This was FRANK S. MONNETT, ex-Attorney General of the State, whose services to Germany had been so great as to lead to his indictment by the Federal Government; not only a pro-German, but a pro-German martyr. He ran for the Vice Presidential nomination against MARSHALL, and the German-Americans had a chance to register at least a protest vote against the Administration. He was beaten by about four to one. He also ran for delegate to the St. Louis Convention, still as a pro-German candidate, and was decisively beaten even for that.

The politicians regarded these mixed results as contradictory and mysterious, and so they are if read by any other light than that of an aroused Americanism. Read by that light, they are uniform and harmonious, and there is nothing strange about them. However, the politicians, refusing to read them by that light, sought other explanations and continued to "pussyfoot," under the delusion that that would win German votes and not repel American votes.

The Republican Party was a special offender in this respect; but to do it justice, it did not "pussyfoot" in Maine. There Colonel ROOSEVELT, the chief speaker, denounced hyphenism, and Mr. HUGHES gave a blanket indorsement to his speech; and it repelled no votes. It did not frighten Maine men into fearing that an assertion of Americanism would drag us into war; and if there are not many Germans in Maine, there should be men afraid of war, or the calculations of the "pussyfooters" are all astray.

Next came the September primaries. The organization Republican candidates in New York were WHITMAN and CALDER. For three years CALDER had built up a perfect organization, embracing the whole State; he had no opponents and reasonably expected a unanimous nomination. A few days before the legal limit expired ROBERT BACON became a candidate. The universal expectation was that he would poll only a few votes; it was, from a political standpoint, an impossibility for any man to make headway against the votes already fully controlled by the organization. But BACON made his campaign as an extreme advocate of Americanism, a vigorous foreign policy, compulsory military service; he declared himself "an avowed unneutral," a friend of France. The candidate against WHITMAN was a State Senator of respectable attainments. WHITMAN is not popular; CALDER is very popular, a genial, honorable, likable man with no enemies. BENNETT, WHITMAN's opponent, did not make a dent on the solid block of organization votes, though his candidacy had been long and earnest; how could he? But BACON did accomplish the impossible, and on the issues he made he reduced the 75,000 majority which had been figured out for CALDER to about 8,000. Yet CALDER had never truckled to the German vote; BACON was merely more outspoken than he. Again, too, the Germans proved that they are better Americans than the "pussyfooters" give them credit for; in CALDER's home town, and despite the exhortations of the Staats-Zeitung, BACON ran better in the German districts than in most of the others.

In Ohio, the State of Cincinnati and the Germans, MYRON T. HERRICK, ex-Ambassador to France, ran for the Senate. HARRY M. DAUGHERTY, his opponent, thought to capture the German vote by attacking HERRICK as the friend of France. DAUGHERTY is popular, widely known, and one of the keenest politicians in the State. He was defeated. On the Democratic side, ex-Congressman JOHN J. LENTZ ran as a pro-German candidate against Senator POMERENE, and made a campaign entirely on that issue; he, too, was defeated. Again, as in the Spring, Ohio proved that the Germans, in the main, vote as Americans, and not as Germans; and that whether they do or not, the man who truckles to them must be prepared to meet the loss of more American votes than he can gain from the hyphenated.

In Texas ex-Governor COLQUITT believed that the German vote could nominate him for the Senate. He not only appealed to it in public, but he sought in private the aid of the hyphenate leaders in New York. He had the advantage of whatever dissatisfaction with Mr. WILSON'S Mexican policy may exist in Texas; but he was defeated by 75,000 majority. If he got the German vote, he repelled the American vote.

In the New Jersey primaries the issue arose only in two Congressional districts. In one, CAPSTICK'S, the American vote was divided, and CAPSTICK, who had courted the hyphen vote, was renominated, but, as the late figures show, by a very small margin. In the other, EAGAN'S, the American vote was not divided, and EAGAN, who was opposed by the hyphenates because of his Americanism, defeated them. None of the other candidates either appealed to the hyphenates or antagonized them. The Staats-Zeitung urged the Germans to vote for certain candidates, such as MARTINE and FRELINGHUYSEN, and these candidates were elected. How much influence the German vote had in their success no one can know; but it is a fact that the American vote was not aroused or interested, that the campaign was made on other issues, and that not until the primaries were over and the Germans were claiming that they had done it did most Jerseymen have any idea that the question had been involved. Therefore, while New Jersey is claimed by hyphenism as an exception, as out of step with the rest of the Union on this question, there is no warrant for the charge; the result in the only two districts where the question was an issue gives the contrary impression.

At what time will the "pussyfooted" campaigners come to the conclusion that they are poor politicians; that Colonel ROOSEVELT and President WILSON have understood what was going on in the public mind, what was the meaning of the unrest and discontent among the silent vote, and flee from the wrath to come? The German vote is a myth, and where not a myth it is a minority as against the votes of outraged men who put this country first. While the lessons of the primaries we have discussed point all one way, there is not a single State primary, not even in New Jersey, where the results point in the other direction. The American has not had many chances to speak, but wherever he has spoken he has said the same thing over and over again. If the politicians do not understand it yet, it is because they are deaf and blind.

SAVING NEW YORK.

The movement to "save" the retail trade district of this city has had another surprising success. The district's westerly side extends from the Pennsylvania terminal to Fifty-ninth Street. The easterly side of the quadrangle takes in the easterly side of Third Avenue, with similar northerly and southerly limits. Within that square the very valuable trade which was driven from the old retail district took its last stand, and was threatened by the same blight which fell upon the lower portion of Fifth Avenue, Fourteenth and Twenty-third Streets. There was danger of another invasion of unsuitable trades, bringing throngs of workers who would monopolize the sidewalks and repel fashionable shoppers. The city lost scores of millions of taxable values in the section thus first blighted. Private owners suffered similarly.

A repetition of that experience would have been a greater public and private misfortune, for there was no place to which the expelled shops could retreat. In this crisis leading citizens promoted a movement to "save" the new shopping district by organizing public opinion against the factory invasion. Almost immediately the factories which were injuring others without benefiting themselves undertook, so far as they were free to act, to find elsewhere quarters equally useful to them. The complete success of the movement was endangered by rental obligations which made the loss from removal too great, if the leases were to be forfeited. What now has been done is to accept the obligation of removal as soon as the disabilities can be removed, either by subleases or by expiration of leases. Nearly 200 public-spirited firms have adhered to this expression of present sympathy and undertaking of future action. Many of these removals cannot take place for the next five years or even more, but some scores of firms have undertaken to remove their factories by 1918 or sooner. Their action merits public acknowledgment. They are conferring a double benefit. They are reviving a depressed section as well as "saving" a threatened district.

There is no mistaking the signs of renewed vitality in Broadway and the cross streets below Thirty-fourth. The values which are "saved" and the values which are revived may easily enough reach a hundred million dollars. Even that is not a full statement of what is "saved." New York each year welcomes an enormous number of buyers from every section of the country, and it is desirable that their personal comfort and commercial convenience should be consulted. If the high-class trade of the city were to be dispersed by the invasion of factories there is danger that the trade would be driven from the city as well as from the district which has been saved by their voluntary exclusion. No more than the retail trade would this wholesale trade fight its way through unpleasant crowds. It would be easier to go to another city if New York lost its attractiveness. From that the entire city has been saved as well as the small but rich square whose boundaries are given above.

The incident shows that public spirit in New York is not dead. New York is richer not alone in its taxable values, but in its proof of civic pride.

Senator JAMES P. CLARKE of Arkansas was a man of strong convictions to which he firmly held. He was steadfast in his opposition to the ill-advised Shipping bill until it was finally amended, and his support of it then was not enthusiastic. He was so firmly opposed to the recent eight-hour legislation that he refused, as President pro tempore of the Senate, to sign the bill which was hurried through, and named an acting President pro tempore for the purpose. His amendment to the Philippines bill, granting to the inhabitants of the islands complete independence in four years, was, in the view of a large majority of his fellow-countrymen, illogical and dangerous. It was inevitably defeated, but he firmly believed in its wisdom. According to his lights, he was a strong man, and his influence will be missed in the councils of his political party.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

They Fear German Science, Too.

In the current Atlantic there are printed several letters written by men who before the war were engaged in scientific research at Oxford and Cambridge, but now are serving their country in munition factories or in building and improving the aeroplanes needed on the battle fronts. The letters are addressed to an American friend and sometime colleague, who, realizing their value, has obtained consent for their publication, though they were not written with that end in view.

In tone and substance they are strangely different from the letters and statements that have come from men of like standing in Germany, for they show no trace of hysteria or bitterness, and, whether or not the assertions made in them are accepted, at least they involve no ignoring of known facts, as so many of the proclamations of German scientists have done, and they can be made the basis of reasonable argument.

One of these English letters is particularly interesting because its author declares of the war that "in science as much as in politics this is a fight for freedom." Then he proceeds to characterize Germany as the country in which a teacher of science smashed the apparatus of a subordinate because it was designed to test a question not suggested by the superior—a country in which the results of investigation could not be disclosed until after quitting a university where a professor held opposing views—"the country where 'Es ist leicht zu sehen' and 'Mann muss annehmen' take the place of observation." It has not been customary to think of German science as based on "it is easy to see" or "one must assume," but that is the charge brought by this English physiologist, and he sums up his opinion by writing, "I fear German scientismus as much as German militarismus, and I believe the origin of both is the same."

In another of the letters we learn, or at any rate are told, that "Cambridge is now filled with a sad lot of cranks, who believe the war is a sad thing and ought to be stopped," but also that in all England there are only about a thousand pacifists, and that "most of them are simply people who suffer from a constitutional inability to agree with their fellow-countrymen." That characterization is neat, and it fits beautifully a lot of our own peace-at-any-price folk.

He Simply Isn't a Soldier.

With something between satisfaction and approval, The Evening Post prints a letter from an unnamed officer who has just resigned from one of the New York regiments now in Texas. Its writer says that he has no complaints to make of treatment or conditions on the border, and yet he is convinced that "the National Guard is through," and that "the end has come." Privates and officers alike, he thinks, consider themselves aggrieved by finding themselves unexpectedly subject to three years of active service and then to three more in the reserve. So they are going to quit the army as soon as they can, and never again will they get themselves into a like situation.

That, it seems, is what will end the National Guard! But it is not the whole case as this officer sees it. "On the other hand," he writes, "I do not believe that the proposed Continental Army will work a bit better," and then, after a reference to the many employers who are notifying men on the border of their immediate or speedy discharge from their old positions at home, the writer of the letter naively adds: "As men are not enlisting in the regular army, and I am opposed to universal conscription, I confess I do not see where we are going to get off with all this military business."

This does not mean, of course, that the United States is unable to raise and maintain a real army of real soldiers—the popularity of the Plattsburg camp and the successful efforts in this vicinity and in other parts of the country to give boys the beginning of military instruction are sufficient disproof of that for the ordinarily patriotic American. What it does mean is merely that the writer of the letter joined the National Guard on the assumption that by so doing he would become a member of a half-social, half-athletic club, and without a thought either as to what the duties of a soldier are or of ever being called upon to perform them. Presumably he supported, if he was not a part of, the militia lobby that killed the Garrison plan, but like too many other militiamen he feels no obligation on that account to give the country the only fair and honest return that could be made for the millions thus diverted from the creation of true "preparedness."

Unwilling—perhaps with good reason—to be a soldier himself, he likes to call his own lack of the soldierly spirit a common American trait, and he declares an American Army to be an impossibility!

The "Finish" May Be Unexpected.

Just as in the quarrels between the street-car companies and their employés, so in that upon which the producers and distributers of milk have started, each of the contending parties sees its own interests clearly and is firmly determined to protect or advance them. To the incidental interests and necessities of the general public, neither gives anything like the attention that would be seemly in this nominally altruistic age—the amount that in the end might even be profitable to both, as tending to prevent for a while longer a realization and use of the power over these reckless and selfish squabblers which the general public undoubtedly possesses.

The producers and distributers alike are declaring themselves ready for "a fight to a finish." Of this readiness they are proud, rather than ashamed, in spite of the fact that "a fight to a finish" between two such stalwart enemies means the infliction of inconveniences on millions of "innocent bystanders," of real suffering on not a few thousands of them, and of death itself on a good many babies and little children. Yet the dairymen and the milk-carrying companies are both under a distinct moral obligation to carry on their respective parts of a business upon the regular maintenance of which the life of their fellow-men so largely depends.

Ultimately, of course, these antagonists will come to some sort of a settlement. The complete elimination of the middleman in a transaction of this sort is not possible or desirable, for it would be as unsound economically for the man whose specialty is cow-keeping to carry his milk to the consumer as it would be for the consumer to go every morning to the farm for it. As a final adjustment is inevitable, why the fight—why not a present getting together instead of a future one, after heavy losses have been incurred and grievous wounds inflicted?

Capstick and the German Vote.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial article regarding the New Jersey primaries you state that Mr. Capstick's majority over Charles N. Fowler for Congress in the Fifth Congressional District (N. J.) was over 1,000. This is an error, the figures being as follows: Union County, Capstick, 4,273; Fowler, 4,984—Fowler's majority, 711. Morris County, Capstick, 3,595; Fowler, 2,730—Capstick's majority over Fowler in Morris County, 865, giving Capstick a lead of 154 votes in the two counties.

While it is true that Mr. Capstick had the indorsement of the German-American Alliance, Mr. Fowler carried the City of Elizabeth, where the German-American vote is strongest, by a majority of 574 votes over Mr. Capstick. In the Fifth Ward of the City of Elizabeth, which is regarded as the strongest German ward in the city, Mr. Capstick only had a lead of 62 votes out of a total of 249 votes. On the other hand, in the wards where the colored and Italian vote is heaviest, Mr. Capstick showed unexpected strength. This is particularly noticeable in the Fourth District of the Seventh Ward, where Mr. Capstick got 56 votes to 10 by Mr. Fowler. In the 1914 primary election this situation was reversed, Mr. Capstick only getting 2 votes to Mr. Fowler's 58. While Mr. Capstick graciously accepted the flattering indorsement of the German-American Alliance, his activities among other classes of voters, hyphenated and otherwise, would lead a close observer to infer that he considered the indorsement a doubtful vote-getting proposition.

To Protect Our Dye Industry.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The victory that the United States has gained from Germany in the dye industry, as shown by the exhibition of American-made synthetic indigo, is certainly a most notable one, and one that will startle the world. It remains now to be considered what is to be done to conserve these and other great industrial victories which are now being won by this country. The defenses will have to be partly built upon the confidence of Americans in their own people and in their own genius, and certainly by practical steps to be taken immediately by the American Government against the bitter and almost resistless attacks which will be made against this country's industries, and which are even now commencing.

The Australian Government found in a somewhat similar situation that the only practical and impregnable defense against such attacks as Germany can and will make to kill these industries consists in prohibitive tariff, and the industrial chemists call upon the Government of this country to take this step, or else confess itself unworthy of the genius and untiring efforts which are being spent in its behalf. We have no interest in sentimental theorists who talk about hothouse industry. Practical remedies are necessary to meet this practical menace.

A Departed Friend.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The subscription of the late Colonel Andrew M. Adger to the daily and Sunday NEW YORK TIMES having expired, please therefore discontinue the service. This will remove from your books a name that has been continuously there for many years. When Colonel Adger passed away you lost one of your stanchest friends. You have many others, but none more loyal and none who believed more implicitly in the value of THE NEW YORK TIMES news service over that of any other paper published in the United States. Colonel Adger was my great friend and I knew him intimately for many years, therefore this last mention of his love and loyalty to the great invisible monument you have built.

THE SPELL.

Once, long ago, at harvest-tide,
I slipped outdoor as morning broke.
I went as free as bird or beast
Down little ways of faery folk.
Where never yet my steps had been,
There little daisies hedged me in!

Ah, what were they that crossed my path?
The blighted leaves on yonder stem,
The blackened stubble in the field,
Is fairer than the like o' them,
And green as scum that clots the pond
Their eyes looked through me and beyond!

What word was that they shaped to say,
What spell was that their cunning wrought,
That I, so free of old, must be
Like bird or beast the trap hath caught?—
Not even know what bonds I bear
Or—God! how brave I'd loose my snare!

DANGEROUS DRIFT OF OUR JAPANESE RELATIONS.

By DR. SIDNEY L. GULICK,

New York, Sept. 28, 1916.
To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your fine report of an interview with Baron Sakatani is one that Americans should ponder. It seems difficult for us to appreciate the way in which we are wounding the feelings of both Japanese and Chinese by our race discriminatory legislation and treatment. This legislation could be easily adjusted so as to provide for our people the protection from excessive Asiatic immigration they rightly ask for and yet also so as not to wound their feelings or chill their friendship.

I offer the following discussion as to the real problems involving American-Japanese relations and with suggestions as to their solution.

"America and Japan are like two trains running full speed toward each other on a single track." Thus wrote the editor of the Tokio Nichi Nichi a few months ago. "Unless something intervenes a collision is inevitable."

This opinion is held, not only by many in Japan, but also by many in America. All right-thinking people should study this question and should earnestly consider what may be done, especially here in America, to avert disaster and to insure a fundamental solution.

Our problems are due to the rapid shrinkage of space in recent decades, to the immediate contact of virile races that have experienced millenniums of divergent evolution, and to the impact of the West upon the East. We must either solve these problems by reason and character or they will overwhelm us all in ruin.

The Situation.

1. The daily press of both countries gives clear evidence of widespread suspicions and animosities, with frequent predictions of war. In each land many believe that the conscious policy of the other land is definitely preparing for attack. Each vehemently urges its own Government to make adequate preparations against wanton attack.

2. The diplomatic correspondence between America and Japan regarding California's anti-alien land law (1913) has ended in a deadlock. This gives occasion for belief in many quarters that the difficulties in the case are insoluble. In the United States it gives color to the argument that Japan is trying to force open our doors for free Japanese immigration. In Japan it appears to justify the contention that America as a whole refuses to keep her treaty pledges—that America is a treaty-breaking land.

3. An anti-Japanese campaign is in progress in America. It is malicious and untruthful. It has produced numberless full-page editorials, insulting cartoons and a "Hymn of Hate." It poisons the minds, not only by direct falsehoods, but by insinuations, assumptions, and implications. It seeks to raise suspicion of the honesty and sincerity of every Japanese no less than of the leaders and of the Government.

4. Japan's own problems, industrial, political, financial, international, moral, and religious, are naturally little understood by Americans—and least of all by sensational writers. Yet, in spite of colossal ignorance, they discuss Japanese affairs with an air of omniscience.

5. The complicated international situation in the Far East, moreover, where Russia, Germany, France, and England for a century have intrigued and fought, have made treaties and secured vast special privilege, and have done much to destroy the Chinese Empire, which no doubt also played her game of duplicity, intrigue, graft, and greed, and displayed her incompetence and injustice, and where all the nations have, more or less consciously, striven to bottle up Japan in her own restricted land and prevent her from enjoying equal opportunity with themselves in the wide world—all this welter of complications and problems is dismissed with a wave of the hand when discussion turns to Japan's efforts to prevent being bottled up and throttled.

6. But whatever the problems may be and the wrongs done or received, the important thing now is that America should deal with Japan in ways that are just and even generous. If matters are allowed to drift as they have been drifting for years they may easily grow serious and suddenly turn acute. Over some relatively trivial incident the feelings of America and Japan may suddenly become so intense that a solution will be impossible.

Is it not clear that those who love justice, truth, and good neighborliness between the East and the West, should co-operate in effective ways to direct public opinion and to mold public action? Should they not be as active in guiding our nation into policies that are right and that make for international justice and peace as are those who, whatever their motives, are, in fact, embroiling us in war?

Core of Japanese Problem.

The problem is twofold—the treatment of Japanese in America, and American and Japanese policies in China.

This first question does not concern the matter of immigration, as is properly believed. Japan is not demanding nor intending to insist upon free immigration to this country. The "Gentlemen's Agreement," in operation and faithfully administered by the Japanese Government since 1908, has stopped labor immigration from Japan. The number of adult Japanese males in America has diminished by 15,139.

The anti-Japanese agitation in America, nevertheless, ignoring Japan's faithful administration of the "Gentlemen's Agreement," insists on fresh differential race legislation to meet an imaginary danger. This legislation, past and prospective, is resented by the Japanese on two grounds. It is regarded as insulting because it ignores what Japan has done, is doing, and says she will continue to do to prevent the difficulties we feel through the coming of Japanese labor immigrants. Such legislation not only does not appreciate what Japan has already done for us, more effectually indeed than we could have accomplished by our own legislation—as proven by the difficulty of enforcing our Chinese exclusion laws—but it also expresses, in the clearest way, distrust of her promises to continue to faithfully administer the "Gentlemen's Agreement." How can friendship be maintained or even asserted when distrust expresses itself in legislation? Such anti-Japanese legislation, past and prospective, is regarded as insulting, also, because it insists on race differential treatment which Japanese inevitably regard as bemeaning to their honor and dignity as a race.

Japan has proven her willingness to stop labor immigration to the United States by her own action, out of desire to maintain friendly relations with us. She wishes that we shall reciprocate and deal with her problems in a friendly way. She resents race discriminating legislation on our part because it brands Japanese merely because they are Japanese, and refuses to give those who are lawfully in America a treatment equal to that which we accord to any other people.

Then there is the problem of American and Japanese policies in China. Many Americans think that Japan plans to gain such political control of China as practically, if not formally, to destroy her sovereignty and enable her thus to prevent any such expansion of American trade and influence in that land as may conflict with her own commercial and other interests. In a word, destruction of Chinese sovereignty and closing of the "open door."

On the other hand, many Japanese think that America plans to block Japanese legitimate and absolutely necessary expansion of trade and influence in China; that America desires and intends to use China as her own private field for expansion in commerce and for investment of capital to the exclusion of Japan; and that Japan's future welfare depends upon her ability to block America's imperialistic plans in the Orient no less than upon her ability to prevent such further European expansion there as does not accord her full recognition and opportunity.

These, I take it, are the central questions at issue threatening to mar the friendly relations of America and Japan.

The Solution.

1. The United States Government might well make public acknowledgment of appreciation of the splendid way in which Japan has administered the "Gentlemen's Agreement." This would help dispel the bogy of the sensational press that Japan is menacing us with a vast flood of laboring immigrants.

2. A comprehensive policy and program should be adopted dealing with all immigration on a basis free from race discrimination. Such legislation can give equal treatment and opportunity to every race and yet afford complete protection to the Pacific Coast from invasion from Asia, and also protection to our industrial classes from overwhelming cheap labor from every land if such immigration legislation is based on the principle of admitting no more from any people than we can Americanize.

3. Legislation is also needed dealing in a thoroughgoing way with the Federal protection of all aliens in our land and with the matter of their Americanization. It should provide for Federal laws dealing with State or local legislation and with crimes against aliens, for Federal supervision of the education of aliens, and for the granting of citizenship to all who qualify regardless of race, under the above suggested restrictions.

These three comprehensive proposals adequately carried out would, I am persuaded, remove all ground for friction between America and Japan with regard to Japanese immigration, and also with regard to the proper treatment of those who are here.

In regard to the questions of American and Japanese policies in China, I speak with less assurance, for they deal with matters upon which I have not specialized and do not have adequate knowledge. They are, moreover, complicated to a degree that few Americans can appreciate. As I have already noted, Russian, German, English and French interests, acquired rights, past procedures and present policies, all enter in as vital factors. Americans have little knowledge of these facts and little appreciation of their relations to Japanese problems and policies.

We must not forget, moreover, that Japan has learned the bitter lesson that she may not send her increasing population to so-called "white men's lands." She realizes that she must provide for her multiplying millions only in Asia. She has also learned that the Governments of Europe have scant regard for the rights, for the sovereignty, and even for the vital interests of non-Caucasian nations and races. Such position and power as Japan has today she has wrung from an unwilling world by positive achievement of a high order, by astute diplomacy, and by bullets, bayonets, and battleships. Further acquisition by Europe or America of rights, privileges, or territory in China, Japan holds, will not only harm China, but will endanger her own future welfare.

What now should be American policies in the Orient? Are we prepared to follow the methods of Europe demanding our place of opportunity and enforcing plans for imperialistic expansion and influence? This is the policy which many in Japan attribute to us, and many in America are actually urging. How should Japanese regard this statement from The Washington Herald: "Bombs and dollars are the only things that count today. We have plenty of the one. Let us lay in a good supply of the other and blast a path to world leadership as soon as the opportunity presents itself." If this is to be our policy, then I doubt not difficulties will increase, suspicions multiply, hostile spirit develop, and a final clash become inevitable.

I advocate no such policy for the United States. I believe that American influence and opportunity in the Orient will be vastly greater and more profitable by the maintenance of our historic policy of friendship and good-will, based entirely on moral and mutually advantageous commercial, educational, and philanthropic relations rather than upon the adoption of an imperialistic policy of expansion relying for success upon "bombs and dollars."

The profits of no amount of trade with the Orient could possibly compensate for war, even a short war, with Japan; while the moral damage to our influence upon all Asia for the uplift of those lands would be incalculable.

For these reasons I earnestly desire that our national policy should be in sharp contrast to the imperialistic and militaristic policies advocated by some; a policy, moreover, so conceived and so worded that it may go out over the country with convincing force.

We need a clear statement from influential business and other groups as to our policies in the Orient which would help to allay the rising suspicion in Japan that we plan to help bottle her up and throttle her. Such statements would help to steady our own people also by letting them know that the imperialistic expansionists of America do not have the field all to themselves.

And might not such statements also aid our Government in molding its course, and in resisting the subtle and sinister forces that wish to utilize it for their own selfish ends?

Should not the leaders and creators of public opinion declare with the utmost clearness and strongest emphasis that America seeks no opportunity in China that is not in harmony with the interests of both Japan and China? And that America will never resort to force to gain or to manifest commercial advantage or vested privilege?

Might not America make efforts also both privately and diplomatically to harmonize the clashing international interests in China, striving to persuade all the nations to adopt policies which subordinate selfish advantage and ambition to the rights and welfare of China herself? Is it not evident that an independent, self-governing and prosperous China, in which all nations have equal opportunity for trade and investment, will in the long run be more advantageous for each nation separately and for the whole world together than a divided, humiliated and exploited China?

Clear declarations from time to time along these lines, and also affirmations at suitable times by our Government of such a policy as this, would render important aid to the cause of world-justice and peace by educating our own people in the fundamental principles of our international relations and policies and in allaying doubts and suspicions so easily raised both here and in the Orient by sensational, unreliable and sometimes even malicious newsmongers?

I have no hesitation in affirming that Japan seeks no exclusive opportunities or rights in China. If she could be assured that Europe and America would play fair in China, respecting the principles of the integrity of China and the "open door," Japan would undoubtedly do the same. Her experience, however, has led her to doubt both us and them. This it is that creates the situation. She doubts them and they doubt her. Just here is where America might render important help by taking a firm and outspoken stand for these principles when dealing with Russia, Great Britain, France and Germany, as well as when dealing with Japan.

In conclusion, then, if America will adjust her immigration and naturalization legislation so as to remove invidious and humiliating race discrimination and will adopt an Oriental policy that repudiates imperialistic ambitions to be won by "bombs and dollars" and that insists on making all international policies in China place as foremost regard for China's own welfare, important steps will have been taken for maintaining lasting friendship and peace with both Japan and China, and indeed with the whole world.

BISHOPS SEE BRITAIN PROTECTING WORLD

STAND IN WAR IS DEFENDED

Two Bishops of the Church of England, preaching in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, yesterday pictured England as the conservator of the future peace and welfare of the world. In the morning the Rt. Rev. Huyshe W. Yeatman-Biggs, Bishop of Worcester, told of a dream of the Church of England linked to the American Episcopal Church for the good of mankind, "to bring about a recall in all departments of life of the reign of the law of God"; in the afternoon Bishop Henry H. Montgomery of London told of another dream of England, after the war, as the head of "a commonwealth of nations," keeping large peoples at peace and keeping small peoples in safety.

"England must win," said Bishop Montgomery, "for it seems to us that the dissolution of the British Empire now would be too great a catastrophe to mankind to be contemplated."

The two Bishops are delegates of the Church of England to the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, which opens in St. Louis Oct. 11. Bishop Montgomery is Secretary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts.

The congregation that greeted the Bishop of Worcester filled every seat in the Cathedral, filled the aisles, and several hundred could not enter the edifice. He referred to the fact that twenty-five years before, to the day, he had been consecrated Bishop of Southwark in St. Paul's Cathedral, and said that it was fitting for him to observe the anniversary in St. John's.

"I find myself dreaming of the wondrous things which might come to pass if these two churches, nay, these two nations, yours and mine, which are so closely allied in race and language and in sentiment," he said, "agree to work together in head and heart and hand for the nobler side of civilization, for the triumph of those eternal principles of faith and conduct which are found in the teaching of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Sees Two Peoples in Common.

"Look at it either way: We in England are facing problems which forever change, arising from strivings between old and new. We have, if we be patriotic, to build a greater and more faithful nation upon a great past. If so, we shall be lacking in insight, indeed, if we do not keep in view the trend of the race on this side of the Atlantic, for here we see a more rapid and untrammeled development than ours—we see things done we may do, and others done which we should leave undone.

"And so it is with you—you look on the old past which is yours and which is ours. Shakespeare is your poet and philosopher as he is ours. You study our Parliamentary origins, you understand the spirit of our laws, you still carry on our old municipal traditions, and as you look back you trace the springs which have flowed out to make a freedom-loving race—yours and ours.

"There is nothing like it in the rest of the world—this common origin of two great peoples, free yet linked, keeping with the unity of language and many a custom, a fresh and healthy diversity. That is why an individual Englishman like myself dares use the coincidence that he keeps his quarter-century anniversary in your cathedral, as an illustration of deeper things and, casting his eyes onward, sees a vision.

"And what vision do I see?

"You remember how Archbishop Benson once said that he believed that the unity of Christendom, for which we ever pray, would in God's time be accomplished. The thought that the body to which you and I belong may be God's instrument to interpret the religions on each side of us to one another is indeed a great and pregnant one, and should inspire us to shake off arrogance and self-seeking if only we may gain their trust and bring them into unity, but here comes our task.

"If this is the mighty and glorious destiny for our apostolic church, we must hold together by means of stronger links of work and aims and sympathy which have ever been stronger than any disciplinary ties. Can we do this? I dream that we can.

Thinks War Will Weld Peoples.

"Certainly in Europe the anxieties of the war and the compulsion which has come to us all there to be up and doing in mutual service have brought us together in a way which seemed hopeless two years ago. The chaplains at the front tell us of this and we at home see it.

"For, look, our very war is on behalf of convictions, and we are no more likely to be satisfied with platitudes on the deepest of all convictions, namely, the relation of God to man, than we are content to accept fine speeches in lieu of treaties and engagements.

"No, we shall not touch the strength of Christianity or find unity on such terms, but we are learning what mutual respect for strong convictions other than our own can do, and in the process we shall, please God, find how near we have been all along and how much greater were the points of agreement than those of disagreement."

In his sermon in the afternoon Bishop Montgomery told of what he called "The Dream of England."

"It may be asked, ought the British Empire to be dissolved because it is too great a power, with its flag floating over one-quarter of the world? We think not. And in so thinking we think not of the British 'Empire,' but of the 'British Commonwealth.' We believe that the British flag floats over an edifice that bears the inscription, 'School of Liberty.' England wants her flag to fly for all civilization."

The Bishop drew an analogy between the dream of the English Church to make Christianity again a telling factor in international affairs and the dream of English statesmen to make England, the State, the guarantor of liberty.

"We believe that England will live, must live, for the blessing of mankind. We dream of the existence of such an England, of an unselfishness that would cause her to exist without the jealousy of other nations.

Commonwealth of Nations Sought.

"For Englishmen know that the time has passed when a part of the Empire can be ruled for the benefit of the centre, and that no land should be governed by her longer than until that time it is able to govern itself. But England hopes that when the proper time would come for lands she governs to be set free, that those lands would be glad to embrace the privilege, the blessing, of remaining under our flag.

"We dream of a commonwealth of nations, insuring peace on earth and protecting small nations. It's a beautiful dream—this dream of the English statesmen of today. Impossible, you say! But hold! There are 5,000,000 men of many races fighting side by side on 2,000 miles of battlefront. What does that mean? That they are fighting for what England dreams of.

"You ask why we have dared to dream such a dream. The answer is that the events of the past two years have shown the confidence of the best part of the world in our rule.

"No Englishman doubts his duty to protect his land against the evils of child labor, to protect its women and to guard its rights. The British Empire asks to do the same for the world of nations. Than this nothing seems better, nothing seems nobler, to England. It seems to us that the dissolution of the British Empire at this time would be a catastrophe to mankind too great to contemplate.

"We are a nation upon its knees, conscious of its blunders, or its ignorance, but praying to fulfill our destiny as the hope of the race."

Roman Catholic Dignitaries at Church in East Thirty-third St.

The Roman Catholic Church of the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary, at 315 East Thirty-third Street, near Second Avenue, was dedicated yesterday morning by the Most Reverend John Bonzano, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, assisted by the Right Rev. Mgr. John F. Mooney, V. G.; the Right Rev. Mgr. Michael J. Lavelle, V. G.; the Right Rev. Mgr. John Chidwick, D. D.; the Right Rev. Mgr. Francis H. Wall, the Very Rev. Mgr. Gherardo Ferrante, V. G., and the Very Rev. Mgr. John F. Dunn.

After the dedication services there was a solemn high mass by the Very Rev. Daniel Burke. This was followed by a sermon in Italian by the Rev. Joseph Grivetti, and another in English by Mgr. Lavelle. The Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was imparted by the Apostolic Delegate at the conclusion of the service. In the evening there was a sacred concert with the Apostolic Delegate presiding.

Perosi's Pontifical Mass, with organ and orchestra, was the chief musical contribution of the morning service.

The church was founded by the Rev. Joseph M. Congedo, the present pastor, and the building dedicated yesterday was designed by N. Serracino, an architect of 1,170 Broadway, who also supervised its erection. It was completed in December, 1915.

DR. J. H. JOWETT RETURNS.

Pastor of Fifth Avenue Church Spent Three Months in England.

The Rev. Dr. J. H. Jowett, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, returned yesterday on the Holland-America liner Nieuw Amsterdam, after spending a three months' holiday with his family in England and Scotland.

Dr. Jowett said that England and the English people feel that President Wilson is a man of sterling character, and that while his attitude since the beginning of the war might have been more positive, there is no question that the affairs of this country are in the hands of a man not only of sterling moral character, but most capable, and with sanity of judgment.

Dr. Jowett said that Edinburgh was the darkest city at night that he visited, as there were no lights in the streets or showing from the houses. This was on account of the city's proximity to the sea.

ST. ANN'S IS 75 YEARS OLD.

Bishop Greer and Former Rectors at Anniversary Services.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of St Ann's Church of Morrisania, at St. Ann's Avenue and 140th Street, founded by Gouverneur Morris, was celebrated today. Bishop David H. Greer delivered the sermon, which was followed by the laying of the cornerstone of a new parish building.

Bishop Greer reviewed the history of St. Ann's, calling the roll of its rectors and making many allusions to the spirit of self-sacrifice and devotion that marked their pastorates.

The Rev. W. Bertrand Stevens, rector of St. Ann's, assisted Bishop Greer in the ceremony of laying the cornerstone. Two former rectors of St. Ann's also participated in the ceremony, the Rev. Charles Conant Harriman of St. Peter's, Albany, and the Rev. Gibson W. Harris of Trinity, Ossining.

At the evening services a tablet to the memory of the Rev. William Huckel was dedicated. Tomorrow evening there will be a reception in the parish house.

LAUDS FRANCISCAN ORDER.

Cardinal Farley Speaks at Jubilee Celebration.

Cardinal Farley and many distinguished prelates from widely separated points participated in the services held yesterday morning in the Roman Catholic Church of St. Anthony of Padua, Sullivan Street, in connection with the four-day celebration of the fiftieth year of the Franciscan Fathers' missionary work in this city.

The services in the morning consisted of a solemn high Pontifical mass celebrated by Mgr. J. Dunn, Chancellor of the Archdiocese. Cardinal Farley delivered an address in which he outlined the work of the Franciscan Order from its inception down to the activities of the four parishes under its direction in this city. His Eminence declared that he was well satisfied with the work of the order and congratulated it upon the work it has done among the Italian immigrants.

Solemn vespers and benediction were held beginning at 8 o'clock last night and afterward, the Rev. John P. Chidwick, President of St. Joseph's Seminary, who was chaplain of the U. S. S. Maine when the battleship was blown up in Havana Harbor, spoke.

S. FISH, JR., INJURED IN AN AUTO CRASH

STEERING GEAR JAMMED

Special to The New York Times.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., had a narrow escape from serious injury late last night when the steering wheel of his automobile jammed as he ran onto the brick pavement in front of St. Mark's Church. The motor crashed into a telegraph pole, breaking it off at the base, and the car turned over on the lawn in front of the church. Mr. Fish rolled clear of the auto and escaped with severe bruises.

He was on his way to his home at Garrison's and after he had notified a garage of the accident, he was sent to his home in a taxicab.

A man's felt hat and an innkeeper's vague description of the wearer are all the Nassau County authorities have to aid them in the search for a motorist whose car on Saturday night killed Mrs. Ella M. Taylor and seriously injured her son as they walked along a well-lighted portion of the Old Country Road in Westbury, L. I. The car after tossing aside the unsuspecting pair, crashed into a lamp post and caromed across the road into a telegraph pole, but kept going.

While the mother lay dead at the roadside and her son was unconscious near her, the driver of the car made a hurried stop at Carl H. Schmidt's inn a few hundred feet away, cried to the proprietor that a doctor was needed back on the road, as he had run over two persons, and disappeared. At the time it was thought he was returning to aid his victims. Schmidt described him as well dressed, blonde, and about 25 years old.

Three men were injured late yesterday afternoon when the motor fire engine of Engine Company 25 ran up on the sidewalk at Avenue A and Fifth Street, to avoid a collision with a street car and an automobile. Louis Fischman of 536 Fifth Street had his right leg broken and was sent to Bellevue Hospital, while Drs. Rebins and McKee treated the injuries of Samuel Linwond of 1,621 Pierpont Avenue, Brooklyn, and Jacob Granavator of 1,024 St. John's Place, Brooklyn, and sent them home. None of those on the fire engine was hurt.

Mrs. Nettie Jacoby, 25 years old, of 112 West 117th Street, was sent to Lincoln Hospital yesterday afternoon suffering from contusions and lacerations suffered when she was thrown to the street from a carriage in which she was riding. The horses, which were driven by Abraham Grivilitz of 79 East 114th Street, became frightened at an automobile at 163d Street and Third Avenue, the Bronx, and ran away. They were brought to a stop when they crashed into the rear of an automobile owned by John Olsen of Edgewater, N. J., a block away, and tore the rear tires of the motor in addition to wrecking the carriage.

Four persons, all members of the same family, were seriously injured yesterday afternoon in an automobile accident near Fallsington, Penn., and were all sent to St. Francis's Hospital in Trenton, N. J. The steering gear of the machine broke and it turned over after running up a four-foot embankment and striking a stone wall. The injured were: Frank Busher of 1,122 West Greenwod Avenue, Philadelphia, who suffered a fractured skull; his wife and two daughters, Bernice and Hilda, all of whom were bruised and cut severely.

F. W. Oswald and his brother, Henry, both residents of Nosconsett, L. I., were injured last evening when their automobile was struck and wrecked by a train on the Port Jefferson Branch of the Long Island Railroad at Lake Avenue, in St. James, L. I. They were taken to the home of Dr. Peterson, near by, and after being treated were sent home in another automobile.

REVEAL SECRET MARRIAGE.

East Orange Pair, Wed Last February, Make Announcement.

Miss Helen Virginia Potter, daughter of Frank A. Potter of East Orange, N. J., was married on Feb. 4 last to Henry Parsons Chapman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Chapman of East Orange, according to the announcement made yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Chapman kept their marriage a secret until Mr. Potter returned from a Western trip, when he was informed and notices of the wedding were sent out.

Their engagement was known and approved by their families, but it was decided to postpone the wedding owing to the illness of a relative. However, the young people decided not to wait and motored to Glen Ridge, N. J., where the Rev. Dr. Edwin A. White married them in Christ Church.

Church to Celebrate Jubilee.

Preparations for the celebration of the golden jubilee of the Church of St. Ignatius Loyola have been practically completed. The exercises will cover the week beginning Nov. 26. The celebration will open on Sunday, Nov. 26, with a solemn pontifical mass at which the celebrant will be the Most Rev. John Bonzano, the Apostolic Delegate. Cardinal Farley will preside. The preacher will be the Very Rev. Raymond Meagher. The General Committee of Arrangements includes Nicholas F. Brady, W. Bourke Cockran, James Byrne, Charles J. Carroll, Francis B. Delehanty, James F. Feitner, Dr. Edward L. Keyes, James F. Mulqueen, and other men prominent in the parish.

Matriculation Sermon at Yale.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 1.—President Hadley of Yale today preached his annual matriculation sermon to the Freshman class, urging the need in national life of the four qualities, self-control, intelligence, courtesy, and devotion.

Renew Service to West Indies.

Sanderson & Son, general agents for the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company in the United States, announced yesterday that the passenger and freight service between New York and the West Indies would be renewed shortly. Beginning Dec. 2 the steamships Danube and Tagus, well known in the trade prior to the war, and other vessels, will leave this port every two weeks, calling at Santiago, Kingston, Colon, Puerto Colombia and Cartagena. The cruise will occupy twenty-two days and ample time will be allowed for sightseeing at each port. The cost of the round trip will be $180, which will include all meals in port as well as at sea.

BEERBOHM TREE ARRIVES.

Actor-Manager Will Begin His American Tour in Boston.

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the English actor-manager, arrived yesterday on the American liner Philadelphia from Liverpool, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Iris Tree. After a few days in New York, Sir Herbert will go to Boston, where his company is reheasing, and will open with "Henry VIII." on Oct. 16. From Boston the company will visit other Eastern cities, and reach Chicago in the latter part of January. With regard to his New York season, Sir Herbert said:

"I shall have a season here, but cannot give the date definitely, because I shall have to return to London in February to look after my affairs there.

"Chu - Ching - Chow," which Oscar Asche has produced at His Majesty's Theatre, has made such a big success that it will run all season. It is taken from 'All Baba in the 'Arabian Nights,' and has delightful music, as well as comedy. I intend to bring it to New York, and shall also play 'Colonel Newcome.' There are more than 5,000 British actors at the front now fighting for their country, and everyone in England is confident for the future end of the war."

Miss Elsie Mackay, who arrived on the Philadelphia, was engaged by Sir Herbert in London to play the part of Anne Boleyn in "Henry VIII." She was in this country before with Cecil Maude in "Grumpy," in which Miss Mackay took the rôle formerly acted by his daughter. Miss Phyllis Bullen, who has been engaged as understudy to Miss Mackay, is a descendant of Sir Thomas Bullen, the father of Anne Bullen, or Boleyn, of Henry VIII's reign.

Another English comedy actress on the liner was Miss Millicent H. R. Sim, a cousin of Miss Mackay, who has come over for a two months' rest in America.

MENTAL HYGIENE LECTURES.

Six Speakers Will Discuss Topic in the Harlem Y. M. C. A.

Six free lectures on mental hygiene have been arranged for Wednesday evenings in October and November at the Y. M. C. A. hall in Harlem, 5 West 125th Street, by Dr. Henry M. Leipziger, supervisor of lectures of the City Department of Education. Dr. Leipziger hopes to extend the service to Brooklyn and the Bronx in the second term of the lecture season.

The course has been arranged in co-operation with the Mental Hygiene Committee of the State Charities' Aid Association.

The first lecture will be given on Oct. 11, when Dr. Homer Folks will be heard on "Why Should So Many Go Insane?" On Act. 18 George A. Hastings will talk on "The Social Cost of Mental Disease." Dr. Stewart Paton, lecturer on neuro-biology at Princeton, will talk on Oct. 25 on "Preventable Mental Diseases and How to Prevent Them," and on Nov. 1 Dr. Ira S. Wile of the Board of Education will talk on "Social Hygiene as an Aid to Mental Health." Dr. William Mabon, superintendent of the Ward's Island Hospital, will tell "How the Empire State Cares for 34,000 Insane" on Nov. 8, and the immigration problem will be the subject of the last lecture, on Nov. 15, by Dr. Henry Smith Williams.

"La Paix" Goes Back to France.

Albert Besnard's decorative painting of "La Paix," painted on the order of the French Government for presentation to the Peace Palace at The Hague, will be returned to France today by W. Francklyn Paris, at whose instance it was allowed to be brought here as an aid in raising funds for the dependents of French soldier-artists. The painting was first shown here in January, under the auspices of the Museum of French Art, the American Artists' Committee of One Hundred, the Beaux Arts Society of Architects, the Société des Architects des Beaux Arts Diplomes par le Gouvernement Française, and the Alliance Française. The painting was afterward shown in many cities as far west as San Francisco.

Sheridan Statue to be Unveiled.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 1.—Albany is preparing for a celebration on Saturday next for the dedication of the Sheridan Memorial on the wide plaza in front of the eastern approach to the Capitol. It is a joint gift by individual subscribers and the State. A heroic-size bronze equestrian statue of General Philip H. Sheridan rests on a granite base designed by Henry Bacon, architect, of New York. The statue was completed by Daniel C. French, the sculptor, from a model prepared by the late John Quincy Adams Ward. The unveiling strings will be pulled by Olive Whitman, daughter of Governor and Mrs. Whitman, and Sallie Davis.

State Department Official Returns.

Among the passengers who arrived here yesterday from England on the American liner Finland was Manton M. Wyvell, special representative of the Department of State, who was sent to London to negotiate with the Foreign Office for the release of a large amount of merchandise, detained by the British embargo at Rotterdam. Mr. Wyvell admitted having had business dealings with the British Foreign Office, but would not give any particulars regarding his mission until he had made his report to the department at Washington.

THE SEASON'S OPERA.

Metropolitan to Produce de Koven's 'Canterbury Pilgrims'—New Artists

The prospectus of the Metropolitan Opera Company, which is just out, assures the public that war conditions have not been allowed to effect the quality or the quantity of the productions that will be given in the ninth year under Giulia Gatti-Casazza. The booklet recounts various items of the repertoire and the personnel, which have already been published individually in THE TIMES.

The new operas include "The Canterbury Pilgrims," by Reginald de Koven, with a libretto by Percy Mackaye, which will be the fifth American opera produced under the present management. Other additions to the repertoire are Zandonai's "Francesca da Rimini," with a libretto by d'Annunzio; Gluck's "Iphigenia in Tauris," which has never been sung in America; Bizet's "Des êcheurs des Perles," Massenet's "Thais," and Delibes's "Lakme."

Among the new artists are Alice Eversman, Odette Le Fontenay, and Marie Sundelius, sopranos; Kathleen Howard, contralto; Fernando Carpi, tenor, and Paul Bender, baritone. Among those who were in the list last season and do not reappear are Emma Zarska, Ida Cajatti, Julia Heinrich, and Giacomo Damacco.

The place of Bavagnoli as third conductor to Bolacco and Bodanzky is taken by Gennaro Papi. Giulio Setti will continue in charge of the chorus, Mme. Verhoeven of the ballet. Rosina Galli will remain as premiere danseuse, Giuseppe Bonfiglio as first male dancer, Jules Speck and Jan Heythekker as stage directors, and Edward Siedle in charge of the mise-en-scene. The season begins Nov. 13 and subscription books close Oct. 28.

SAFETY CRY TO BALTIMORE.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 1.—Boys and girls of the schools and young folks generally are having the gospel of safety preached to them this week through the co-operation of the school authorities and the street railway company of this city. The company has devoted the current issue of one of its publications to a safety talk to children, and the schools and colleges are distributing the leaflet to every one of their pupils and students.

Johns Hopkins University was one of the foremost to indicate its inclination to co-operate in the safety campaign, and was followed by Goucher College, Loyola College, Friends' School, and others. The Board of Education of Baltimore City and that of Baltimore County and the authorities of the parochial schools ordered the leaflet distributed to all their pupils. The circulation managers of all the newspapers in the city distributed the little manual to their newsboys.

With more than 100,000 copies placed in the street cars for the general public the circulation of the leaflet reached approximately 250,000.

MORE GERMAN SEIZURES.

BERLIN, Oct. 1, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—The Admiralty made the following announcement today:

"German sea forces on the night of Sept. 27-28 brought in from the southern part of the North Sea the Norwegian steamer Sport Lea, with contraband, and two Dutch tugboats, the Zuider Zee and the Gouw Zee, each with two lighters, which apparently were intended for military purposes. All the vessels were bound for England."

INTERNED SHIPS IN PORT.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—Conveyed by the battleships Minnesota and Vermont, the interned German cruisers Kronprinz Wilhelm and Prinz Eitel Friedrich arrived at the Philadelphia Navy Yard tonight from Norfolk. A convoy of twelve warships escorted the interned cruisers up the coast because it was necessary to go outside the three-mile limit. Ten of the American warships came only as far as the Delaware Capes.

The cruisers were sent to the local yard because the space at the Norfolk Yard was needed for new shops. They have complements of 744 officers and men, and, although the Germans will be kept in close confinement, navy officials said facilities at the Philadelphia Yard would give them more freedom than they enjoyed at Norfolk

BINGHAMTON, Oct. 1.—A fire that broke out early this evening in the livery stable of W. J. Clark at Norwich spread quickly to a row of eight large brick business structures adjoining. Among the important places burned are Burr Hall and the Exchange Hotel. Several retail concerns were damaged. The fire was under control at 10:30 o'clock, when the total damage was estimated at $75,000.

Mrs. Havemeyer Ill in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer of New York was unable to attend the meeting of the Congressional Unionists at the Chicago Beach Hotel tonight where the first gun for Hughes for President was fired in the women's speaking campaign. She was taken ill on the train and was hurried to the home of Mrs. Arthur Meeker. Mrs. Havemeyer's speedy recovery is expected, and it was announced that she would attend the Hamilton Club luncheon tomorrow and fill her other speaking dates.

Dr. Herbert M. Howe.

BRISTOL, R. I., Oct. 1.—Dr. Herbert M. Howe, a coal operator in Philadelphia for the last forty years, Trustee of the Academy of Fine Arts of Philadelphia, and former member of the sugar refining firm of Harrison & Havemeyer of Philadelphia, died suddenly at his Summer home, Ferry Cliff, this afternoon from heart disease. Dr. Howe was born in Roxbury, Mass., seventy-two years ago. He was a son of the late Bishop Mark A. De W. Howe of the Episcopal Diocese of Central Pennsylvania, and was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania Medical College. He was widely known as a breeder of Jersey cattle. He leaves a wife, Mrs. Mary W. Fell Howe, and four daughters, one of whom is Mrs. William G. Low, Jr., of New York.

Justice Anderson Dies in Denver.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 1.—Justice Thomas Henry Anderson of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, died early today at a hospital in this city following an operation. He came to Colorado last May to regain his health. Justice Anderson was 68 years old and a native of Ohio. He had been on the Supreme bench of the District of Columbia since 1901. The body will be sent to Washington tomorrow for burial.

OUTING OF BOSTON ANCIENTS

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 1.—Three hundred members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, the oldest military organization in the country, arrived today for their two hundred and seventy-ninth encampment.

The organization, which was founded in 1638, has furnished officers for all the wars, and at present has five on the border. Officers will enjoy a five-day program at the Hotel Traymore. Local military organizations have outlined an elaborate round of entertainment, one of the features of which will be a banquet Wednesday night. Former Governor Walsh of Massachusetts, Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, and several speakers from the navy yard at Philadelphia will be guests of honor.

DR. NEEDHAM DROPS DEAD.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—The Rev. Dr. Thomas C. Needham, a noted evangelist and Baptist clergyman, who during his career as a sailor narrowly escaped death many times, died this morning ten minutes after he had preached to his congregation in Bethlehem Church.

He had just closed a sermon on "The Bible and Its Uses," and had stepped into the vestry to don robes in preparation for a baptismal ceremony when he suddenly clasped his hand to his heart and without a word sank back into the arms of John H. Dooley, a deacon, who was assisting him. Death came almost instantly, according to several physicians who were called. Heart disease was the cause.

Dr. Needham was a personal friend and strong supporter of Billy Sunday, and had been a co-worker in evangelism with Dwight L. Moody and Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman.

LOYALL FARRAGUT DEAD.

Only Son of the Great Admiral Served as Father's Secretary.

Loyall Farragut, son of Admiral Farragut, died yesterday morning at his Summer home at Ashfield, Mass. Death was due to heart disease. He was the only son of the great naval commander of the civil war, and left no children. Mr. Farragut was 72 years old. He was born in Norfolk, Va., and at the beginning of the civil war served as secretary to his father. He saw service during the civil war on the flagship Hartford, and was under fire at Port Hudson.

He entered West Point in 1863, graduated in 1868, and served three years in the Fifth Artillery, retiring to go into civil life in the offices of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, of which his wife's uncle, J. Taylor Jackson, was President. He retired several years ago. His city home was at 113 East Thirty-sixth Street.

Mr. Farragut was the author of "The Life of David Glasgow Farragut, First Admiral of the United States Navy." In 1869 he married Miss Gertrude Metcalf, daughter of the late Dr. John T. Metcalf. She died about twenty years ago.

Mr. Farragut was a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, the Cincinnati, the Association of Graduates of West Point Military Academy, and of the American Geographical Society. His clubs were the University and Century.

The funeral will take place tomorrow from the Church of the Incarnation.

Gen. Galusha Pennypacker.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—General Galusha Pennypacker, U. S. A., retired, died here today in the Jefferson Hospital from a complication of diseases, brought on by wounds suffered in the civil war. He was in his seventy-third year, and was the youngest officer in either the Union or Confederate Armies to win the brevet of Brigadier. General Pennypacker was born in Chester County, and entered the army as a noncommissioned officer of the Ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers in April, 1861. He fought in many of the greatest battles of the war, and received the Congressional Medal for "distinguished bravery in battle." General Pennypacker was one of the officers mentioned in "Grant's Memoirs," and was a member of the Union League Club, the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, and the Pennsylvania Historical Society.

Obituary Notes.

WANTED---OPPONENT FOR THE RED SOX

Boston Clinches American Pennant, but National Scramble Is Very Much in Doubt.

Giants Will Face Dodgers in Four Games While Phillies Are Wrestling Six Times with Braves.

After a nerve-racking, blood-tingling fight which extended over the greater part of three months, with Chicago and Detroit ever close on their trail, the Boston Red Sox are once more champions of the American League. It became a dead certainty yesterday that the 1916 pennant would fly over Fenway Park when the White Sox were beaten in the first game of a double header with Cleveland, which completed the Western season in the American League. The one setback cost the White Sox what little physical and mathematical chance they had of gaining the title, for Boston can now drop its three remaining games without losing the pennant.

Chicago's record for the year shows that they won eighty-nine games and lost sixty-five. Boston has a record of ninety won and sixty-one lost, with three games still to be played with the Athletics. Therefore, if they lose three they will have a total of ninety victories and sixty-four defeats, which will give them the flag with an advantage of one full game.

Bill Carrigan has accomplished a feat which seemed improbable after he let Tris Speaker go last Spring. He has guided an evenly balanced team through a tempestuous season. Except for the injury to Jack Barry, he has been blessed with unusual good fortune, and he has shown excellent judgment in the handling of his pitchers. He now has a staff composed of Ruth, Shore, Foster, Mays and Leonard which is ready to tear through any team the National League may send against them.

Tener Race Still Undecided.

In the Tener circuit a situation has arisen which may keep the outcome of the pennant battle in total doubt until the very last putout is made in the games on Thursday at Ebbets Field between Brooklyn and New York, and in Philadelphia between the Phillies and the Boston Braves. With the end only four days ahead, and with a race that has made followers of the national pastime almost breathless with suspense, Brooklyn and Philadelphia both face the most trying series of the season. Brooklyn has four games to be played with the Giants, while Philadelphia must dispose of six in four days with the Braves.

Which team will break under the strain? Will it be the Phillies, who have proved themselves exceptionally game under the most adverse conditions? Or will it be Brooklyn, which seems to be faltering in the stretch?

It is a question for a prophet, and prophets have been batting something like .000 all season.

The Red Sox have nearly a week to put themselves into the best possible condition before the opening of the all-important series, but for the contenders in the National League every minute from now until next Thursday afternoon about 5 o'clock will be replete with a tense eagerness, almost anxiety.

The temperament of the Quakers seems to be more suited to such a nerve-wearing situation than does the Robins'. But whereas it seems probable that they may be able to take four out of six games from the Braves, the Phillies are entering this crucial stage of their long fight, uncertain about Alexander, their brightest star and their mainstay of the season, and with Bancroft, the crack shortstop, out for a week at least with an injured hip. Alexander is worrying every one connected with the Phillies, including Manager Moran.

They are afraid that the tremendous strain under which the great hurler has been working all season has at last begun to tell on him. His work in the box in the games in Brooklyn on last Thursday and Saturday were very unsatisfactory, though he won on Thursday. In the game on Saturday he was literally driven from the mound under fire of eleven hits and four runs in eight innings. It is true that he had only one day's rest between the games of Thursday and Saturday, but all season Alexander has been subjected to the same treatment. The severity of the task imposed on Alexander might break down even a mastodon. Should it be that Alexander has gone bad, Philadelphia would be in a bad plight, for he is sorely needed to stem the Braves.

Philadelphia must win at least four games in this series with the Braves, which starts today with a double-header, to be at all certain of victory, provided Brooklyn can muster enough strength to take two out of four games with New York. Should the Giants take three out of the four, Philadelphia could win by breaking even with Boston, for the totals at the end of the season would be Brooklyn, won 92; lost, 62, for a percentage of .59740. If Philadelphia took three from Boston its total would be 92 won and 61 lost, for a percentage of .60130.

If Philadelphia wins five out of six from Boston the Robins would have to take all four games from New York, and if Philadelphia swept the series Brooklyn would not have a chance to win.

Marquard May Loom Up.

In the matter of pitchers, the Giants seem to have the edge on Brooklyn on present form, and Boston may have a little the better of Philadelphia. The sensational pitching of Marquard on Saturday may have a substantial bearing on the outcome of the race. Rube has beaten the Giants three times this season and is now going better than ever. He may stop them again in the impending series. Jack Coombs has four times this season suppressed McGraw's record-wreckers. Nap Rucker, in whose honor today will be called "Rucker Day" at Ebbets Field, has also beaten New York twice and been beaten once in return. Rucker may be sent against the Giants today, but such an undertaking would be dangerous and perhaps costly for Robby. Pfeffer has been effective against New York, and Sherrod Smith is going good. But against this array McGraw has to offer Perritt, Schupp, and Benton, who were unbeatable during the team's record-breaking run.

The Phillies have Alexander, Demaree, and Rixey, and the Braves have Ragan, Rudolph, Tyler, Ruelbach, Hughes, and Nehf.

WHITE SOX TAKE THE COUNT

Divide Double Bill with Indians and Threaten Boston No Longer.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—Cleveland eliminated Chicago as a possible American League pennant winner today by winning the first game of a double header, 2 to 0. By this achievement Cleveland maintained a percentage of .500 for the season.

Coumbe pitched brilliantly for Cleveland, allowing only two hits, one by a recruit, the other by a pinch hitter. He walked two, only twenty-nine men facing him in the nine innings. Each of the two Cleveland runs was scored by a batsman who started the inning by being hit, an error helping each on his way to the plate. Each run was scored by a sacrifice fly.

The second game was a farcical contest, and was won easily by Chicago, 8 to 4. The scores:

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

If you stood Larry Gardner, Mike Mowrey, and Milton Stock on an auction block and called for bids on them, half the teams in baseball would be offering double for Gardner what they would for Stock, and more for Stock than for Mowrey. Yet, when we come to analyze the work of these three men—two comebacks and a cast-off—we again are compelled to wonder at the inconsistencies of baseball, and the freaks you find in the dope.

One cannot but award the palm to Gardner, for he outfigures his National League rivals by a considerable margin on his past performances and more on his work this season. Yet Stock is up close to him on comparative figures, and old Mike doesn't get shown up by any means.

You fans must know that you, (and I,) at times go way off on our dope on ball players, because sometimes they change almost over night. I have seen great ball players become third-raters in a month, and have watched fellows, who never promised to be anything much come with a spurt and become really great players.

In comparing third basemen of the Red Sox, Phillies, and Brooklyns, we find three different types of players—and it makes pretty tough work for anyone to figure out their comparative worths.

Let us start with Milton Stock. This fellow looked good when he came to the Giants. He stacked up as a rather heady, unpretentious sort of fellow, and dead in earnest about his work. He did not make good. It is current opinion among the Giants that McGraw broke Stock as a ball player. Some of them declare he was not game. Gameness is an odd quality. They accuse him of lacking gameness because he could not stand it to be spurred and ridden as McGraw spurs and rides his players. He was a young fellow, rather high strung, high bred, and a bit sensitive. One thing is certain, and that is he could not play ball well under McGraw, and he constantly muddled plays and made himself look worse than he really was. McGraw is a great handler of men, but even he, at times, makes a blunder, and it is evident now he made one with Stock. He saw it and traded Stock to Philadelphia.

Stock Improved Under Moran.

Under Moran Stock began to play his real game, and last year he had his chance. Bobby Byrne, a grand little big leaguer, suffered injury, and Stock got the regular job, and performed so well that Byrne never got it back again. He improved as the year went on, and in the world's series last Fall looked to be a neat and capable, but not great, ball player. This season his improvement has been as steady as it was last year, and he has suddenly developed as a hitter. He has improved his batting wonderfully, and, while some of the alleged sluggers of his team have been slumping, he has kept on getting his blows. He has hit the good pitching fairly well. I am surprised to find, and has busted the left handers with much effectiveness. His fielding is steady, and he plays the position intelligently, and, at times, with a flash of brilliancy.

Gardner is an altogether different type of man—and of player. Quiet, intelligent, a thinker, and a worker, Gardner has stood in the front ranks of the American Leaguers for years. He was a second baseman, thrown into the third base job at a moment's notice, and, while rated only as a fair second baseman, he at once became a star third sacker. He is a cracking good hitter, and always has been.

Last year Gardner fell into the slumps. He picked up weight. He was logy on the bases, and sluggish in his fielding at third. He was slow starting forward for bunts, and did not cover much ground. His friends were afraid that weight and age were telling on him.

This season Gardner came back to life with a spurt and began hitting at his best gait. He has kept it up. He has hit better, played the bag better, and played more ball in attack than he has done for three years. He is not as speedy as he was, and has some faults as a fielding third baseman, but he still is the ranking third sacker among the candidates for the premier honors in this coming championship.

Last we have Mike Mowrey.

Mowrey Is a Steady-Going Player.

Mowrey is an old-timer—one of those quiet, efficient ball players who know the game inside and out and go at it for the finer points. You never heard of Mike pulling many bone plays, and you—like the rest of us—are too liable to take it for granted that Mike will always do the job right. You roast him if he fails, and seldom applaud him when he succeeds, because there is little of the showy about him, and he has been doing it so long that you expect him to do it all the time.

Mike once promised to be a star—that was when he first bloomed out in Cincinnati. His legs went bad one Spring from playing on that cold mud after the river subsided and Mike's chances of becoming a great star went with his legs. For years it was a fight between Mowrey and his bad pins as to whether or not he could stick to the big show. Then Mike attended Spring training one year at a mineral spring resort and discovered to his surprise that the trouble with his legs could be reached through his stomach. Finding this out, he paid a lot of attention to his stomach after that, and his legs improved. Still, a lot of managers thought that he had bum gambs and refused to believe that rheumatism of the legs could be cured by internal methods. Brooklyn needed a third baseman. It had several corking youngsters, but what it really required was an old head. Mike went to the job and began to show the flashy youngsters that a wise old head, even when working with only a fair arm, a fair batting average, and a pair of ex-bum legs can beat many of these strong-arm boys playing the game only with their arms and dead from the neck up.

As to substitutes for third base, all three teams are suitably fortified. Brooklyn has a shade the better of the subs, although if Moran is called upon in a pinch he could send Bobby Byrne to the front with assurances that he would not weaken his team much. A grand ball player is Byrne, and more useful, perhaps, in a world's series than in a regular season, as is often the case with the wise ones who are aging.

Tomorrow we will tackle the catchers—one of the real problems of the series.

BROWNS PASS THE YANKS.

Victory Over Detroit Moves St. Louis Into First Division.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 1.—James was wild today and St. Louis beat Detroit 6 to 3, and moved into fourth place. It was the last game of the season here. James gave ten bases on balls and hit two batsmen.

St. Louis got only five hits, but these, two doubles and three singles, combined with bases on balls and stolen bases in the first and fourth, netted three runs. In the sixth, two passes and errors by James and Young, after two were out, gave the local men three more. St. Louis stole eight bases, and Detroit stole seven.

Detroit got thirteen hits, but Plank kept them well scattered. Cobb got a double and two singles. The score:

Comment on Current Events in Sports

Exciting Days in Baseball.

During the past week countless New York inhabitants have been subjected to a severe mental strain, which has been checked just in time to prevent perilous results. People who ordinarily have little use for mathematics suddenly took it upon themselves to brush up their calculus and endeavor to figure out how the Giants could win the National League pennant. Higher mathematics have not been carried to such extremes in years as in the intricate calculations which aimed to show in bald, indisputable figures that the wonderfully speedy troupe of McGraw could and would eventually land the coveted streamer.

No problem in higher algebra ever received more attention. Because the Giants were winning so many straight games and breaking all known major league records to bits, ardent Giant fans could not understand why such a fierce drive of victory would not eventually win the pennant. The quest of the fourth dimension was a mere two-times-two affair compared with the Giants' problem.

It will be a great rest for many feverish mentalities now that the Giants' winning streak has been terminated at twenty-six victories. It is a record that will stand for years, and is a greater honor to Manager McGraw and his players than if they won the pennant in the manner in which either Brooklyn or Philadelphia will win it.

With the last hope for the Giants laid at rest, the mathematical brains of the baseball fans now turn to Brooklyn and Philadelphia. When you meet a friend on the street now the question first asked isn't "How are you?" or "How are the folks?" or "Is the baby well?" or "How do you like my new hat?" No, indeed, none of these questions are asked. The universal query is, "Who's going to win the pennant?"

Well, there is one consolation—there will be only a couple more days of mental anguish, and then every Dick, Tom, and Harry will know. Brooklyn starts the rush to the wire at Ebbets Field this afternoon with the first of a four-game series with the Giants. Philadelphia likewise tackles a tough proposition in a six-game series with the Boston Braves. Wilbert Robinson's lads are in the lead by half a game. In the present condition of the pennant race, that half a game is just as safe as hanging off the edge of a precipice with one finger.

It is a knotty question to say which club has the tougher job this week. Brooklyn is in the lead, and that's an advantage right there. But they are going up against the fastest club in the National League this afternoon, and they will have to travel at championship gait to match McGraw's men if they play anything like they have during the past three weeks. The Philadelphia Club has a better chance of getting a majority of the six games from the Boston Braves than Brooklyn has of taking a majority of the games from the Giants. You can use up pads of paper and bundles of pencils figuring out the various angles of the race between the two clubs, but the better way is to sit back quietly and wait until you see the scores from day to day. But a baseball fan wouldn't be happy unless he could fret and argue with some one. It would take a full representation of the Supreme Court to decide an argument at the present time between a Brooklyn and a Philadelphia fan.

Although Squire Ebbets has brought down a lot of unpopularity upon himself by pushing the commercial side of the game too prominently to the front, it would undoubtedly be a more satisfactory outcome to the majority of fans if Brooklyn would take the flag. If the Phillies win again the world's series will be the same as it was last year, and that affair was so easy for the Red Sox that there was never a question as to the outcome. It would be a good thing for the game to see a new club battling in the world's series. Brooklyn hasn't won a championship in sixteen years. The Boston Red Sox are now certain of the American League flag. The American League this year looks like a stronger league than the National, outside of the Giants. If McGraw's team could battle with the Red Sox this month instead of Brooklyn or Philadelphia, the clash would be well worth going miles to see.

But whether it is Brooklyn or the Phillies which faces the Boston Red Sox, victory for the American League seems almost a certainty.

The Astor Cup Race.

Automobile racing does not hold the interest with the New York public it did in the days of the Vanderbilt Cup race, when that event was run over the Long Island roads. Saturday's big racing special at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway for the Astor Cup marks a new standard for speed events. Over a two-mile course which is, perhaps, the fastest in the world, with racing cars which are the last word in mechanical construction, with all arrangements and facilities so perfect that the spectator can see every move and every moment of the 250-mile race, it is difficult to understand why the event does not attract a gathering which would tax the capacity of the Speedway.

In the Middle West, automobile racing over speedway tracks has become noticeably popular. In Indianapolis, Chicago, and Cincinnati the racing machines have attracted big crowds during the past season, while here in the East, where the game was at one time extremely popular, the combat of daring drivers has lost some of its appeal.

It is evident that New Yorkers do not like races over tracks as well as they did the road races on Long Island. There was a picturesqueness about the old Vanderbilt Cup race which is missing in the present races like the Astor Cup. Nowadays the cars go faster and attain speed which was not dreamed of a few years ago. On Saturday, Aiken, in his Peugeot, traveled 250 miles at a rate better than 104 miles an hour. He did this without a break in his machine, without even a tire change.

How different was the Vanderbilt Cup race. On the Long Island course were perilous corners, and many smash-ups. The race in those times was an event which people anticipated many days in advance. It meant starting for the course the night before the race and camping along the roads all night so as to see the machines as they came along the roads, phantom-like, in the gray dawn. The grandstand at the start and finish was small compared with the grandstand at Sheepshead Bay. But along the course, thousands and thousands of people saw the race for nothing. They got points of vantage at the dangerous turns. At Hicksville, Massapequa, at Krug's Corner, at Westbury, and at many other places along the course there was always the scent of danger in the air as the cars took these turns at full speed and sent a spray of dirt over the spectators.

Automobile racing over a speedway develops into a monotonous grind. The very perfection of the cars and the course leaves little of the unexpected to happen. It takes no difficult feat of steering to negotiate the track as it did to take the turn at Massapequa.

Aitken's feat in the Astor Cup race wasn't fully appreciated by the crowd which looked on. His driving of his car was perfection itself, and he brought out every bit of speed in the racer. His judgment was at all times the best. He knew just what his car was capable of, and was never lured into hitting up a clip which would weaken the power of his engine at any time in the race. Automobile racers say that it will be a long time before Aitken's record for the 250 miles will be beaten on any speedway.

American Athletes in Scandinavia.

Track and field athletics have done much to stimulate the warm feeling which exists in Scandinavian countries for the people of the United States, and the forthcoming invasion of Sweden, Norway and Denmark by Jo Loomis, Ted Meredith, Fred Murray, Bob Simpson and Andy Ward, who are now on their way across the Atlantic, should increase it. The people of Sweden have not yet forgotten the high class of sportsmanship and the friendly spirit of the Americans who competed in the Olympic Games at Stockholm in 1912, nor are they ever likely to forget them. When the present American team arrives on the other side, there will undoubtedly be a royal greeting awaiting it.

It is slightly more than four years since the American international shield was carried in competition in Europe by track and field men, but had it not been for the war a team capable of beating the world could have been sent by the United States to Berlin for the 1916 Olympic Games. These sports have been canceled, and it may be many years before they are renewed, but the invasion of Scandinavia by five of the greatest athletes in the country will be partial recompense for the loss of this year's games, so far as the United States is concerned.

Sweden is the country the United States probably would have had to beat at Berlin, for the Northmen have been coming along fast in athletics and now can claim some of the finest of athletes. But, great as are the Swedes, they should receive a lesson or two in the art of track and field competition from the five men who left these shores last Thursday, risking the present dangers of transatlantic traveling that they might let Sweden know that the United States is not retrograding in the calibre of its athletics. Ernie Hjertberg, the American who for five years has been governmental trainer of Sweden's athletes, will probably himself marvel when he sees these men in action.

What a thrill the Swedes should receive when they see Bob Simpson, the elongated Missourian, racing under 15 seconds. At Stockholm in 1912 the Swedes saw Fred Kelly establish a world's record of 15 seconds, but they never saw anybody like Simpson. And Murray will show them a few things about timber topping. Then there will be Jo Loomis, one of the world's most versatile athletes, who cannot do a thing outside of sprint, hurdle, high jump and broad jump. Not forgetting little Andy Ward, who narrowly missed making the trip. Ward, on his form at Newark when he won two senior national titles, should beat anybody in Sweden or Denmark.

Lastly, there is Ted Meredith, the Pennsylvania boy who gained lasting fame when he broke the world's record for a half-mile and 800 meters at the Stockholm Olympics. Meredith will show nothing like his 1912 form on this visit, for he left here far out of condition, but, even out of shape, Meredith should beat all who face him, unless Sweden has a surprise in store.

The Stayers Cup.

With a laudable effort to revive interest in long-distance races, the Stayers Cup, an event at two miles and a quarter on the flat, was the feature of the program on Saturday, the final day of racing held under the auspices of the United Hunts Association for the season of 1916.

This race was suggested several weeks ago, and a number of horsemen who favored the idea were asked to subscribe to the $1,000 gold cup which went to the winner with the purse. Over 100 of the most prominent turfmen in the country responded to the call for funds, many of them offering to buy the trophy outright and place it in competition. The response was so liberal that it would appear all these men are heartily in favor of these tests, and it is almost a certainty that the race will become a fixture of the Autumn racing at the terminal course.

Subscribed to by most of the sportsmen interested in that phase of racing which makes for the future of the breeding industry, this race, the longest event of the type decided in the metropolitan district, will do much in the future to prove that American horses can carry their speed over such a distance and show themselves possessed of that stamina and courage which, when transmitted, must aid in the improvement of the breed.

Only six horses faced the starter, but there were an even dozen entered, all of which were capable of traveling the distance. The field was not a high-class one, but it was of sufficient merit to warrant the prediction that these races will before many years be one of the season's chief attractions, and may lead to the revival of such events as the Brighton Cup race, which is at the same distance, and has been won by such wonderful thoroughbreds as Gold Heels, Hermis, Africander, Salvidere, and others.

The Stayers Cup had not been extensively advertised, and its first running was more of an experiment than anything else, but it is safe to say that in 1917 and in future years there will be animals running in this event which will add lustre to the American turf and go a long way toward once more making the American race horse an animal of stamina and speed instead of a sprinter, which the popular demand for short races is helping to develop.

BANCROFT OUT FOR A WEEK.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Oct. 1.—The Phillies must play the Braves without the assistance of their shortstop. Dave Bancroft, Moran's star infielder, who was injured at Brooklyn yesterday, will be unable to get into the game for at least a week.

According to a statement given out today by Dr. Noeling, the little shortstop is suffering from a rotation of the hip-bone, commonly known as "out of joint." The dislocation was adjusted quickly, but the limb will be too weak to play for some days.

Bancroft is suffering considerable pain, but is recuperating rapidly. He is insistent that he will be back in the game before the end of the series with the Braves. It is thought doubtful, however, that Moran will permit him to play.

YANKS DEFEAT COLONIALS.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 1.—Bunched hits in the ninth inning enabled the New York Yankees to defeat the semi-professional Colonials in an exhibition game here today, 2 to 1. Keating, a former Yankee, pitched excellent ball for the locals. The score by innings:

Columbia-Yale Crew Race Off.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 1.—Hopes that the Yale and Columbia 'Varsity eights might race again this Fall, as was the case a year ago, were shattered when Coach Guy Nickalls of the Blue navy announced that there would be no special races outside of the usual Fall regatta.

SPEARS AND EGG VICTORS.

Divide Cycling Honors at the Newark Velodrome.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 1.—Bob Spears and Oscar Egg shared honors at the local bicycle track this afternoon. Spears won the Velodrome championship, a one-mile open race, in which all of the professionals started, and also beat Marcel Dupuy, the French rider, in the Brassard race, a one-mile match. Egg was the popular hero of the day because of his victory over Reggie McNamara in the ten-mile tandem-paced race. He secured revenge on McNamara for his defeat of last Sunday.

In the Velodrome championship, Spears took two straight heats from Reggie McNamara and Hans Ohrt. In the first heat he rode around McNamara, and in the second one easily passed Ohrt on the last lap, carrying McNamara into second place. Dupuy was no match for the speedy Australian in the Brassard race, and Spears won without much trouble by two lengths.

I.-A.A.C. GETS KOLEHMAINEN

Willie Will Coach Winged Fist Cross-Country Men.

Willie Kolehmainen, the world's professional long distance champion, whose teachings have assisted his brother Hannes in becoming noted as a foot runner, was engaged yesterday by the Irish-American A. C. to coach the Winged Fist cross-country teams. Kolehmainen will take the place of Lawson Robertson, who is now at the University of Pennsylvania, and his task will begin immediately. A call for the cross-country candidates was issued yesterday by Captain Jack Eller, and nearly a score of men are expected to respond this week.

LITTLE DIPPER WINS TWICE.

Leads Star Class Sloops on Manhasset Bay.

Two races were sailed on Manhasset Bay yesterday by the Star Class sloops. The first race, sailed in the forenoon in a light breeze, was a novelty in these waters. The feature was that all the competing yachts were anchored with sails furled when they got the starting signal. The prize went to the boat that, after sailing the course, had her anchor down first and all sails furled snugly. The winner was George Corry's Little Dipper, which completed the course and complied with the conditions in 1 hour, 14 minutes.

The summary:

Most folks know we test our cloths but we wonder if they know we make our clothes.

Perhaps our advertising has been at fault, because every so often some one asks that very question.

Fact is, if we were not just as great manufacturers as we are retailers we never could turn out the good clothes we do at the moderate prices we ask.

YALE AND TIGERS FAST ON GRIDIRON

Both Elevens Show Speed and Promise in Opening Contests of the Season.

IMPROVEMENT OF CRIMSON

Work Against Bates Creditable, Despite Losses by Penalties—Cadets and Middies Not Ready.

Interest in Saturday's football results centres in the initial accomplishments of the Yale and Princeton elevens. Both came quite up to expectations. The Blue had no difficulty in running up a score of 25 points against Carnegie with four touchdowns. The game not only showed a back field of first string men of promise, but also a number of substitutes which will give the Elis a reserve force which will be of tremendous value before the season is over.

It was feared that on account of the great weight of Tad Jones's charges this year's Yale team would lack the speed of a lighter team, but on Saturday the blue line of giants showed a speed which gave the coaching staff much satisfaction. The power of the Yale team on attack is not revealed in the score because on three occasions they were within inches of touchdowns only to lose them either because of penalties or fumbles. Weaknesses of this sort can be cured.

The relative driving power of Yale and Carnegie is shown in the fact that Yale rushed the ball during the game 304 yards to her opponents 117. The coaches found satisfaction in the work of Legore. His punts on Saturday, aided, of course, by the wind, averaged 48 yards. Harvard has no kicker to match that sort of booting, while Driggs, Princeton's best kicker, can hardly hope to do as well. Yale showed flashes of a stubborn defense, for Carnegie's line had plenty of beef. At critical times the Blue line folded the Pittsburghers back in the most approved fashion.

Princeton Has Good Prospects.

Princeton's work against Holy Cross gave evidence that this season the Tigers will have an eleven of unusual speed. The back field on Saturday showed a lot of activity against the inferior defense of the Purple, and there is no denying the fact that for the first game of the season the work of Coach Rush's men was encouraging. The few weeks' work in the country has shown good results. There is every indication that it will be a faster and a better eleven than last year's.

Holy Cross outweighed Holy Cross decisively and until the substitutes went in during the last two periods, found no difficulty in gaining. The tackling was good, and the line played low and charged well for so early in the season.

There was a decided improvement in the playing of the Harvard team. While Bates was a much lighter aggregation than Colby, Harvard's opponent of the opening game, the Maine lads provided formidable opposition at times, at least, strong enough to give the Crimson line a thorough test. Harvard's second string backs and linemen did as good work as the regulars, and one of the encouraging features of the Crimson's game was a forward pass which gives indication that this versatile play will be used to even greater extent than it was last season.

Harvard rushed the ball 258 yards to Bates's 135, and the Crimson line was always on the job when a stubborn defense was necessary. Harvard offended often with illegal use of the hands, and this transgression of the rules will have to be eradicated. In one period Harvard was penalized fifty yards for violations of this rule, which shows that the eleven was overanxious. Harvard still lacks a good punter, and the coaches are worrying more or less because the crop of talent shows no one who can boot the ball like Mahan.

Quakers' Are Still Unschooled.

Pennsylvania's eleven had a close call with West Virginia, and Folwell's warriors are still crude and lack harmony. Individually the work of the players was encouraging, but they still have much to learn. Opportunities for the Penn players came often, but they did not convert them into results. They lost one touchdown through a violation of the rules. One of the tasks of all the coaches this season will be to school their players to stay within the limits of the code, because the constant improvement in the work of the officials means that the rules will be enforced more and more rigidly

The start of the Army and the Navy elevens showed both teams to be still in the preliminary stages of development, and they are, if anything, somewhat behind last season. The Cadets were saved from a no-score tie by a field goal. Oliphant in the back field and McEwan at centre stood out among the soldiers, but the Cadets were much chagrined at their inability to match the strength of the Lebanon Valley line. The Army's work was ragged, and there are indications that it will not develop with the smoothness shown in former years under Charley Daly.

The Navy got a big surprise from Dickinson and was unable to score. The game, however, revealed much talent of great promise. The punting of Perry and the ground gaining of Roberts at half back, both plebes, were the most encouraging features of the Middies' first game.

Dartmouth Looks Very Strong.

Dartmouth's problem at quarter back seems to have been solved, for in Saturday's game against Boston College, which is coached by Charley Brickley, McDonough, who weighs only 130 pounds, played a good game for the Green and showed much ability in tossing the forward pass. Outside of quarter back, the New Hampshire lads are better equipped with sterling material than had been supposed. Boston was no match for the Dartmouth eleven, and the former's six points were not due to any successful attack on the Dartmouth line, but were made on a blocked kick. The back field, made up of Gerrish at full back, and Thielscher and Duhamel at the half positions, gives promise of ranking with Dartmouth's crack back fields of the past. All these players did effect've work yesterday.

Fordham gave Lafayette a surprise, and held the Easton eleven to a scoreless tie. The Fordham team showed a great defense against the forward pass, and although Lafayette tried it sixteen times, it was successful only once.

Rutgers ran away with the Villanova game and showed much speed and team play for so early in the season. Coach Sanford expects great things of the Rutgers eleven this season, and its first endeavor seems to justify his hopes.

FOUR FIRSTS FOR WASTRUM.

Finnish Athletes Show Good Results of Willie Kolehmainen's Training.

The clever work of Willie Kolehmainen, brother of Hannes, in the training of athletes, was seen yesterday in the performances of members of the Finnish American A. C. who competed in their annual championship games at Macomb's Dam Park. Kolehmainen was only recently engaged by the club as its coach, but the Finns yesterday showed better form than ever before in their titular sports.

Paul Wastrum won a major portion of the honors by annexing four events on track and field. He won the 100-yard dash in 11 seconds; captured the running broad jump with a leap of 17 feet 10 inches; triumphed in the hop, step and jump with 36 feet, and cleared the bar in the high jump at 4 feet 6 inches, which was enough to win.

FIGHT ENDS SOCCER MATCH.

Umpire Is Maltreated at Hedley Field and He Calls the Game.

The I. R. T. Strollers and Brooklyn Celtics clashed in their first division New York State League soccer game yesterday at Hedley Field. When the Celtics equaled the score some of the players who had been threatening trouble came to blows, and some of the spectators joined in the scene. One excited I. R. T. supporter got a grip on the referee's throat, from which he was released with difficulty. The referee, W. Caldwell, promptly took the only course open and called the game off ten minutes from time.

The Strollers opened the scoring through Longbottom ten minutes after the kick-off, but O'Halloran soon made the score even. Duffy put the Strollers ahead and the play became exciting as the Celtics made desperate efforts to equal the count. McGreevy soon scored for the Brooklyn team and directly afterward the game was abandoned with the score at 2 to 2.

BIG SCORE FOR N. Y. TEAM.

Making a disappointing showing in their first game in the annual championship series of the National Football League, the soccer players of the Brooklyn Field Club succumbed to the newly organized team of the New York Football Club, which scored 11 goals to 0 at Harlem Field yesterday afternoon. Throughout the second half the New Yorkers were opposed by only nine men.

Carver, inside right on the New York team, was successful in getting past Haughie, goal for Brooklyn. Four points were the net result of Carver's efforts. The line-up:

Porter	G.	Haughie
McWilliams	R. B.	Hynd
Post	L. B.	Stewart
Vandeweghe	R. H.	Weir
Van den Eynden	C. H.	McMahon
Gallow	L. H.	Nichols
Cooper	O. R.	Walsh
Carver	I. R.	Sherlock
Heminsley	C.	Hill
Hayes	I. L.	Bartskill
Puxty	O. L.	Meresca

Referee—R. T. French, A. R. A. Linesmen—Messrs. Burroughs and Simmons. Goals—Carver (4), Cooper (2), Hayes (2), Puxty (2), Vandeweghe. Time of halves—Forty-five minutes each.

By defeating the Camerons by the score of 6 goals to 1 at Woodside, L. I., yesterday, the Continentals of New York made an auspicious start in the first division of the New York State Football League.

MICHIGAN GAINS STRENGTH.

Special to The New York Times.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 1.—Michigan's come-back football team, headed by Bullet Maulbetsch, is going to be an eleven to be reckoned with on the gridiron this Fall. The opening game with Marietta on Wednesday will give Yost his first opportunity to see his men under fire, and if they show the form displayed in practice scrimmages the Wolverines are destined to cut a wide swath in their games with the East.

Maulbetsch has been picking holes through the reserve forwards with all of his 1914 ability, and Yost is predicting the greatest season of his whole career this Fall.

The presence of Sparks at quarter makes the Yost attack 20 per cent. stronger than it was last Fall. This youngster has the snap and dash which marked Hughitt's work, and his versatile ability on the offensive makes him an unusually valuable man. Sparks can run the ends, forward pass, and is a fair punter, and his stocky build makes him a hard man to injure.

BOWMAN KEEPS NET TITLE.

Herbert L. Bowman, the Cornell tennis star, retained his title as champion of the New York A. C. when in the final round of the Mercury Foot titular tournament on the Travers Island courts yesterday, he defeated Chapman Ropes in straight sets, 6—3, 6—1, 6—3. The former Long Island title holder also gained the doubles bracket. With R. Black as his running mate he triumphed over Dr. A. G. Keane and B. S Dennis, 6—2, 6—1, 6—2.

P. M. Crandall had a difficult time gaining the chief honors in the final of the Class B singles competition. He defeated R. Hurstel, 9—11, 6—4, 6—4, 6—3.

Bowman was entirely too fast for Ropes in the championship event. His driving was hard and steady throughout. The summaries:

WEST SIDE FINALS PLAYED.

The Class B doubles championship of the West Side Lawn Tennis Club was won by E. W. Mecabe and A. C. Worth yesterday at Forest Hills, defeating C. G. Heylmun and M. T. Ackerland, 6—1, 6—4, 2—6, 4—6, 7—5. The Class C doubles title went to N. T. Kenyon and L. J. Carruthers, who defeated Dr. J. S. Gignoux and M. Shoop, 6—2, 6—1, 3—6, 1—6, 6—3. The summaries:

CLASS B SINGLES.—Fourth Round—C. G. Heylmun defeated A. C. Hunter, 6—3, 4—6, 7—5; R. G. Gatcomb won be default. Semi-Final Round—R. G. Gatcomb defeated H. C. Worth, 6—1, 3—6, 6—2.

CLASS C SINGLES.—Semi-Final Round—H. T. Warren defeated C. S. Roome, 5—7, 7—5; E. L. Keyes, Jr., defeated Dr. Forbes Hawkes, 7—5, 4—6, 6—4.

Final Round—E. W. Mecabe and A. C. Worth defeated C. G. Heylmun and M. T. Ackerland, 6—1, 6—4, 2—6, 4—6, 7—5.

CLASS C DOUBLES.—Final Round—L. J. Carruthers and N. T. Kenyon defeated Dr. J. S. Gignoux and M. Shoop, 6—2, 6—1, 3—6, 1—6, 6—3.

Tennis Aggregation Defeats Harlem Club Members in Match Tourney.

Making a clean sweep of the four singles, and annexing one of the three doubles matches, players of the Kings County Lawn Tennis Club defeated representatives of the Harlem Lawn Tennis Club in their annual inter-club tournament on the Kings County courts yesterday. Charles C. Chambers again won the Kings County Club championship by defeating John T. Allen, 7—5, 4—6, 6—0, 6—1. The summaries:

SINGLES.—Charles C. Chambers, Kings County, defeated H. H. Manchester, Harlem, 6—2, 9—7; C. Burroughs, Kings County, defeated Dr. G. Faber, Harlem, 6—2, 6—4; Frederick G. Anderson, Kings County, defeated Benjamin Phillips, Harlem, 6—0, 6—1; John T. Allen, Kings County, defeated Edmund J. Fixman, Harlem, 6—2, 6—4.

DOUBLES.—R. V. Lake and P. C. Trask, Kings County, defeated H. H. Galbraith and J. S. McDermott, Harlem, 4—6, 6—4, 6—2; Remson Schenck and L. Brey, Harlem, defeated Frederick Anderson and E. B. Hunt, Kings County, 4—6, 6—4, 6—2; Paul Goold and Ell M. Behar, Harlem, defeated W. H. Ross and C. W. Bates, Kings County, 6—0, 12—10.

Woodrow Wins Malba Golf Title.

In the finals for the club championship on the links of the Malba Field and Marine Club yesterday, C. B. Woodrow beat G. W. Stanley by 6 up and 5 to play.

WOMEN BEGIN GOLF TITLE FRAY TODAY

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—Never was a pre-championship day passed so quietly as today at Belmont Springs, where the women will tee up at 9:30 tomorrow morning in the eighteen-hole qualifying round of the tournament for the women's national golf championship. No course records were broken by fair golfers never heard of before, no 600-yard hole was made in three strokes, no player got a clear carry from the tee of over 200 yards, and all together, had it not been for the notices of the tournament and the posting of the starting times, the day would have passed as the quietest Sunday of a peaceful Indian Summer.

All the favorites for the title have been playing the course in the high 80's, with now and then an extra low score by Miss Alexa Stirling or Miss Marion Hollins to vary the monotony. Both the Southern champion and the New Yorker have been playing the course well in the last few days, and a noticeable increase in the distance of her long shots has increased Miss Hollins's chances of success in the tournament.

The course is baked a little through lack of rain, giving added distance to every shot, but demanding greater accuracy on approach shots than under ordinary conditions. The Belmont Springs course is on high ground, and lately a troublesome wind has bothered the golfers considerably. With the hard conditions of the course a high wind will play havoc with the qualifying scores.

There will be sixty-two starters tomorrow morning, as two names have been added to the official list given out last week. The post entries are Mrs. F. W. Batcheider of Brae Burn, and Miss Wilhelmina Tenney of Honolulu.

Although Miss Stirling is the general favorite for the title now held by Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck of the Philadelphia Cricket Club, the form displayed by other prominent contenders in the practice rounds has made the outcome uncertain. Mrs. W. A. Gavin, women's Eastern champion, who is now playing from the Taconic Golf Club, has been playing very steady golf in her preliminary rounds, and her command of the short game will give her an advantage under present conditions.

Other well-known players who have shown up well in practice rounds are Mrs. J. V. Hurd of Pittsburgh, former national Canadian and British champion; Miss Fanny Osgood of Brookline, another former champion; Mrs. F. C. Letts of Cincinnati, Western champion; Miss Mildred Caverly of the Philadelphia Cricket Club; Miss Elaine Rosenthal of Ravisloe, former Western champion, and Miss Georgianna M. Bishop of Brooklawn, runner-up to Mrs. Feitner in the women's metropolitan championship competition at Baltusrol and also a former national champion.

Hole	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	Out

Tie in Mixed Foursome at Oakland.

P. H. Moore and Mrs. Moore and T. Cassabeer and Mrs. Cassabeer tied in a mixed Scotch foursome on the links of the Oakland Golf Club yesterday with scores of 115, 18—87, and 96, 9—87, respectively. R. S. Courtney and Mrs. G. L. Shearer were third with 123, 18—105, and J. V. Davies and Miss Margaret Davies, fourth, with 137, 24—113.

NEW YORKERS MAKE PACE.

Remer, Morse and Bennis Win Firsts at Singer Meet.

Track stars of New York clubs shone with exceptional brilliancy in the annual Fall games of the Singer's Employes A. A. at Elizabethport, N. J., yesterday, and carried away nearly all the first places in the open handicap events.

C. A. Walsha of the Knights of St. Antony, junior and senior Metropolitan quarter-mile hurdle champion, failed by less than two feet of coming through in the 440-yard timber topping contest, being beaten by Frank Bennis of the New York A. C., who had two yards handicap. Walsha cleared the last hurdle before Bennis, but in the run to the tape he slowed up slightly and Bennis passed him.

Roy F. Morse, former national furlong champion, broke through a big field in the hundred to win in 10 1-5 seconds. Morse competed unattached, having severed his relations with the Salem Crescent A. C. It is said that he is about to become affiliated with the Irish-American A. C.

A "ringer" was discovered in the 600-yard novice handicap after it had been announced that John Green of the Newark A. C. was the winner. Handicapper Herman Obertubessing's eagle eye recalled a mental photograph of a boy named Stanley Coleman of the Newark A. C. who won a medal in the national relay championships two weeks ago.

The "Green" who finished first yesterday bore a strong resemblance to Coleman, and Obertubessing started an investigation, which resulted in first prize going to J. J. Gillen of the Long Island A. C. and charges being preferred to the Registration Committee against Coleman.

100-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by Roy F. Morse, unattached,* (scratch;) Alexander Smith, Mohawk A. C., (6 yards,) second, G. Hutchins, Mohawk A. C., (7 yards,) third. Time—0:10 1-5.

600-Yard Run, Novice.—Won by J. J. Gillen, Long Island A. C.; C. M. Finch, Newark A. C., second; C. Bogart, Mohawk A. C., third. Time—1:20 2-5.

Throwing the Discus, Handicap.—Won by Emil Muller, New York A. C., (scratch,) with 142 feet ¼ inch; W. Bartels, unattached, (22 feet,) second, with 115 feet 6 inches; Nich Yiahnes, Pastime A. C., (12 feet,) third, with 123 feet 3 inches.

Two-Mile Walk, Handicap.—Won by Richard F. Remer, New York A. C., (scratch;) William Plant, Long Island A. C., (scratch,) second; F. Keiser, Morningside A. C., (45 seconds,) third. Time—15:39 1-5.

220-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by Ramon F. Georgi, New York A. C., (2 yards;) Tom Purtell Mohawk A. C., (7 yards,) second; Charles Mock, Salem Crescent A. C., (10 yards,) third. Time—0:22 4-5.

Five-Mile Bicycle Race, Handicap.—Won by N. Johnson, Unione Sportiva Italiana, (scratch;) W. White, Bay View Wheelmen, (100 yards,) second; Jerry Nunziata, Unione Sportiva Italiana, (scratch,) third. Time—14:01.

440-Yard Low Hurdle Race, Handicap.—Won by Frank Bennis New York A. C., (2 yards;) C. A. Walsha, Knights of St. Antony, (scratch,) second; D. C. Young, Long Island A. C., (5 yards,) third. Time—0:58.

880-Yard Relay, Handicap.—Won by Salem Crescent A. C., (Foster, Verwayen, Goreham, and White,) 12 yards; Mohawk A. C., (Washington, Griscom, Smith, and Dolan,) 19 yards, second; Long Island A. C., (Bowman, Reimerth, Wentworth, and Hall,) 28 yards, third. Time—1:34 1-5.

LEWIS LEADS GOLF FIELD.

The qualifying round for the championship of the Flushing Country Club was played yesterday. Twelve of the members qualified. Morel P. Lewis, with a card of 38, 39—77, led the field. Gardiner W. White was eight strokes behind. White played in rather nonchalant fashion, and his 85 is one of the worst scores that he has made over the links in many months.

FLIERS OF FANCY GAITS SHOW SPEED

Favored with a strong southerly wind and an ideal track, the horses which competed at the second Fall matinée of the Road Drivers' Association of New York, held yesterday afternoon on the Harlem Speedway, were enabled to make exceptionally fast time.

Gunboat Smith, who is the latest living example of a heavyweight boxer who can "come back," will get into action again tomorrow night at the Broadway Sporting Club in Brooklyn, when he will tackle Joe Cox, the Springfield, Ohio, heavyweight. It is the intention of Smith to take on all the big fellows and dispose of them so that he can get another chance at Champion Jess Willard.

The Pioneer Sporting Club will offer for its main attraction on Thursday night a ten-round bout between Jack Denning and the new Al McCoy, with a semi-final between Artie McGovern and Dave Medar. On Tuesday night, at the Hunts Point Sporting Club, the main bout will bring together Harry Pierce and Johnny Harvey. The Empire A. C. will hold a show on Thursday night with the main attraction a ten-round bout, between Willie Jackson and Allie Nack. Marty Cross and Paul Doyle will also mingle at the same show.

At the Olympic A. C. tonight the attraction will be a ten-round bout between Tommy Toughey and Jack Reed. Silent Martin and Jack McCarron will box at the weekly show of the Clermont A. C. on Thursday night.

MONDAY.

Vanderbilt A. C.—George Ash vs. John Lester Johnson.

TUESDAY.

Broadway S. C.—Joe Cox vs. Gunboat Smith.

Pioneer S. C.—Jack Denning vs. New Al McCoy; Artie McGovern vs. Dave Medar.
Clermont A. C.—Silent Martin vs. Jack McCarron.

FRIDAY.

"THE HIGHEST TESTIMONIAL WE CAN GIVE YOU IS TO SAY THAT WE ARE USING YOUR VARIOUS TYPES OF MACHINES WHEREVER MACHINING IS FEASIBLE IN CONNECTION WITH OUR ACCOUNTING AND GENERAL OFFICE WORK."

W. C. Durant
PRESIDENT

The Master Genius of the Automobile Industry Points Out the Direct Way to Accounting Efficiency

Mr. Durant, as President of Chevrolet Motor Company and of General Motors Company, knows every vital fact connected with the yearly output, which is valued at nearly 200 million dollars for 1916.

Efficiency is his motto. It had to be—for nothing less than the efficient use of every minute and every penny in every department of all the various enterprises with which he has been connected would have enabled him to pilot them to success—a success which is simply a reflection of the really marvelous efficiency of the man himself.

Mr. Durant knew that the average pen-and-ink bookkeeper wastes 50% of his time guarding against errors, hunting errors, and making several motions where only one was needed. He demanded on-time figures.

And so it is not to be wondered that Elliott-Fisher Bookkeeping Machines are used not only in the main office, but also in the big parts plants at Flint and other points in Michigan, and at various assembly factories throughout the United States and Canada.

The Chevrolet plant alone will turn out 96,000 cars this year and is planning for 194,000 cars in 1917. With an output of this magnitude, accounting accuracy and accounting speed are absolutely necessary.

You know as well as Mr. Durant that a bookkeeping department must measure up to 100% accuracy, speed and economy on an on-time schedule. Do, then, as he first did—investigate Elliott-Fisher. Get the facts that have taken us years to collect. No charge, no obligation. Telephone "Cortland 7382" for an immediate interview, or write to Elliott-Fisher Co., Room 404-5-6 Astor House Bldg., 217 Broadway.

There is a temporary shortage of milk in New York City, due to a demand on the part of certain factors for an excessive price for raw product at the source of supply.

For sixty years The Borden Company has bought milk direct from the producer at what we believed to be a fair price, and in turn delivered it to the consumer at a price based on the same conception of equity.

That we have delivered a better, cleaner bottle of milk, that we have rendered more efficient service at a smaller profit we believe is a conceded fact.

Recognizing the existence of a situation that made an increase advisable, at this time, we have offered our farmers an advance of twenty cents per hundred pounds, or nearly one-half cent per quart.

This price, we have reason to believe, is satisfactory to the majority of the individual farmers, who are now ready to sell their milk to us but for the intimidation and restraint from sources beyond our control.

The function of The Borden Company for sixty years has been that of a clearing house for an ever increasing clientele of producers. It has at the same time acted as the representative of the consumer, taking orders direct and sending agents into the dairying districts to procure a suitable supply for the consumers' requirements. The company has established stations in the country for the convenient delivery by the farmer and has built up a system through which each day's production could be marketed in good condition.

Fruits and vegetables often lay on the ground and rot for want of a market, but through the system established by this company every drop of milk produced by the farmer is converted into cash every day in the year. There is no waste to the producer. We take all he makes, even when his production is far in excess of our customers' requirements.

The relations between the producer and Borden Company have been uniformly pleasant. The Borden check to the farmer has been as infallible as the interest on a U. S. Government Bond.

These equitable relations have wrought to the advantage of both producer and consumer and have been uninterrupted until disturbed by a campaign in the public press and through speakers in the dairying districts for the purpose of creating, in the minds of the producers, distrust in the distributors.

It has taken sixty years of hard work to build up the Borden organization. It is proposed overnight to undertake the work now accomplished by an army of over 6,000 employees with a plant representing an investment of over $13,000,000 in the division handling fluid milk.

We know that any effort to usurp the functions we now perform cannot help but be fraught with danger to the health of two million people we serve.

Therefore we ask our customers that they adjust themselves to the temporary shortage, giving you our assurance that whatever the result of the present situation may be, that we are actuated by an attitude of fairness to every factor concerned—Producer, Consumer, and Employee.

STATE.

Court of Appeals.

The Court of Appeals will resume its sittings, after the Summer recess, in the Assembly Chamber, the Capitol, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The work of remodeling the old State Hall into a home for the Court of Appeals will not be completed for at least a month to come, so the Assembly Chamber has been fitted up as a temporary courtroom. The court will first dispose of the appeals from orders, of which there are 63. The arguments in these, it is expected will consume the first two weeks of the court's session.

The calendar for today is:

RAW HIDE IMPORTS MAKE NEW RECORD

TRADE INCREASED BY WAR

Value of 11,318,201 Pounds Received at This Port in Week Reaches Total of $2,685,912.

All records for raw hide imports are being broken at the Port of New York at the present time. South America and every part of the world are being scoured for hides to meet the demands of American manufacturers of boots, shoes, and other finished leather products. The extraordinary war orders placed here by the Allies for footwear, finished leather, and leather articles generally, including saddlery, coupled with the requirements of domestic and neutral trade, have had the effect of enormously expanding the American manufacturing industry in the shoe, leather, and kindred lines. This development, in turn, has forced manufacturers to look for correspondingly heavy supplies of raw material.

Basing their opinion on study of importers' invoices now passing through the Custom House, officials said they were of the belief that about everything that could possibly pass classification as "hides" was being brought in. Not only have the entries of green and dry cattle hides grown enormously, but goat and sheepskins have been arriving in increased volume.

Another unusual feature of the present importations is the extent to which hides of the kangaroo, horse, dog, and other animals are being utilized. In short, the official statistics appear to prove that almost any animal's skin even remotely approaching what is generally accepted in the trade as a hide is in demand in the existing crisis. So great is the demand of the domestic manufacturing trade that a good import business is being transacted in hide cuttings, or scrap.

South America is leading in the shipments of cattle hides to this port, Argentina and Brazil predominating in this respect, although the other countries of the continent, as well as the Central American States, are contributing. The American demand for hides has apparently greatly stimulated the goat-raising business in Spain, Italy, Argentina, Africa, and elsewhere. Practically all of the kangaroo hides or skins come from Australia.

In the Custom House report covering imports in the week ending Sept. 23, just issued, it was shown that total importations of hides of all kinds here in the period amounted to 11,318,201 pounds, valued at $2,685,912. Of the foregoing total green cattle hides had a value of $954,009, representing 5,680,421 pounds, while dry cattle hides were returned at 2,397,631 pounds, entered at a valuation of $649,866. The customs authorities put down the week's entries of horse hides as 734,253 pounds, having a certified value of $189,669. Argentina led with hides of this kind, worth $174,775, the other two sources of supply being Uruguay and France.

General merchandise imports entered for consumption for the week were reported as having a value of $19,093,573; warehouse entries, $1,939,171, and withdrawals from bonded warehouses, $5,491,614 Total merchandise imports here for the year to date amount to $1,039,164,970, compared with $707,617,617 in the corresponding period last year.

BUYS OIL PROPERTIES.

Syndicate Acquires Control of Texas and Oklahoma Companies.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 1.—A sale of Oklahoma and Texas oil and refining property, valued at $6,000,000, to the Henry L. Doherty syndicate of New York, was announced here today by F. H. Thwing and H. M. Evans and associates, who owned the property. The deal was completed last week in New York, it was announced.

The companies sold are the Ponca Refining Company and the Lub Oil Company of Ponca, Okla., the Cushing Refining Company of Cushing, Okla., and the Producers Refining Company of Gainesville, Texas.

The sale of oil properties reported from Kansas City was presumably put through by Henry L. Doherty & Co., bankers, 60 Wall Street, and associated companies, these latter being the Doherty Operating Company and the Doherty Securities Company, also with offices at 60 Wall Street.

According to the Co-partnership Directory, the banking firm of Henry L. Doherty & Co. is composed of Henry L. Doherty, Frank W. Frueauff, and Charles T. Brown. The Doherty Operating Company has as its officers, President, Henry L. Doherty; Vice Presidents, Frank W. Frueauff and Holton H. Scott, and Treasurer, Louis F. Musil. The Directors are the officers just named, together with Charles T. Brown. It is a New York corporation capitalized at $100,000.

The Doherty Securities Company, incorporated in Maine with a capital of $3,000,000, has officers and Directors identical with the Doherty operating concern, except that Mr. Scott's name does not appear as a Vice President, although he is a Director in the Securities Company.

THIS IS A FACTORY CITY.

Census Figures Show New York Leads the Country.

Figures gathered in the 1914 Federal Census of Manufactures, and just made public by the Merchants' Association, show that approximately one-tenth of all the manufactured products of the country are made in New York City. Out of a total of products manufactured in the United States and valued at $24,000,000,000, the City of New York produced goods worth more than $2,000,000,000.

Nearly 11 per cent. of the factories in the United States are in this city, and 7 per cent. of the total capital used in manufacturing is invested in New York plants. The rate at which manufacturing has increased in this city since the last previous census in 1909 is remarkable. While the number of manufacturing plants in the United States has increased only 2.7 per cent., the factories in New York have increased 14.2 per cent.

The city has more than 29,000 manufacturing establishments, which employ more than $1,626,000,000 capital, and turn out annually products valued at nearly $2,293,000,000.

SAVING THE STREET TREES.

Fine Hereafter for Those Owners Whose Horses Eat Them.

Park Commissioner Ward issued a warning to drivers and horse owners yesterday with a request that they restrain their animals from causing injury to park and street trees, an offense which will be punished hereafter by arrest and a fine of $50 in each case. The Commissioner, who has undertaken a campaign to increase the number of street trees in Manhattan, has found that many newly planted and young trees have been injured by horses eating the leaves, bark, and branches. Police Commissioner Woods and the Bureau of Penalties in the Corporation Counsel's Office are to co-operate with the Park Commissioner to prevent further free horse dinners at the expense of the city's trees.

Some of the oldest and most valuable of the park trees are now undergoing surgical and "medical" treatment to prolong their life and beauty. The Department of Parks' aerial corps of climbers are at work on the tall poplars in Stuyvesant Square Park. These trees are more than two centuries in age, and most of them rise 200 feet.

These trees and some of the elms on the Central Park Mall have decayed spots in the upper stems, a few at a height of 100 to 125 feet above the ground. The decayed wood is being cut out, the cavities washed with antiseptic solution, composed of copper sulphate, after which the interiors are painted with tar and the cavities further supported against storms with small steel beams and concrete filling. This treatment is expected to result in the growth of new wood and work over the defective places.

This work is supervised by Jacob Kaplen, the new City Forester, whose aid was obtained by Commissioner Ward by permission of the United States Government Forestry Service. He has performed a similar work for the parks of Chicago, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

FEDERAL BANK SEES FINE TRADE OUTLOOK

FINDS CONFIDENCE GAINING

The Federal Reserve Bank's monthly bulletin, to be issued today, says it is apparent that confidence in the general business outlook has grown considerably of late. "This is evidenced," the bulletin continues, "by the increasing activity of practically all mercantile lines in the face of a strong upturn in prices, which has raised the average price of commodities to the highest level ever recorded.

"Producers of goods are working under pressure to fill Winter and Spring orders. The industrial situation is unchanged save for a slightly better supply of raw materials. Most reports still emphasize the shortage of help in factories and mills.

"All the metal trades are active. Production of pig iron fell off from the high records of recent months, but equals the large tonnage of early months of the year and greatly exceeds that of a year ago.

"Manufacturers of automobiles and parts report business better than ever. Agricultural staples, stoves, and heating appliances are in good demand. Furniture manufacturing is increasing, with prices reported to be 15 per cent. higher than a year ago.

"A great volume of business continues in textile lines. Shoe manufacturers report an exceptionally heavy demand for Winter goods. Importations of raw hides during the last fiscal year were the largest on record, but the domestic and foreign demand for finished leather and leather goods increased in even greater ratio, so that stocks have not accumulated.

"Wholesale and jobbing houses report an expanding trade on Fall and Winter goods. Department stores, mail order houses, and chain stores are doing an active and improving business. One of the latter published figures of August sales showing an increase of 14 per cent. over last year.

"Freight carriers on the Great Lakes are promised ample cargoes for the remainder of the season.

"Collections are good in most lines, but some of the provision dealers and suppliers of building materials find payments overdue, and in several of the country districts, as usual at this time of the year, there are complaints of slow payments. The labor situation has been more unsettled during the last month, particularly among leather goods workers and employes on the traction lines in New York City.

"New York State savings banks reported on July 1, 1916, an increase in deposits of $91,717,602 over July 1, 1915, and a gain of 6.2 per cent. over 1914, 9.1 over 1915, and 35 per cent. over 1907.

"The New York Stock Exchange business has been exceedingly active recently, with sharp advances in the general list. Compared with the corresponding period last year the August figures show large increases in New York City bank clearings, exports and imports, new incorporations and postal receipts. Building permits decreased in New York and there were fewer failures in this district.

"Authorities state that the real estate conditions in New York City have improved considerably. Offices and apartments are easily rented. While there are but few sales of property, prices are firm.

"Call money rates ruled from 2 to 2½ per cent. in August, but have been firmer at about 3 per cent. since early in September. Time loans on collateral are also firmer than last month. Rates for bankers acceptances are practically unchanged. Commercial paper declined about one-half of 1 per cent. in August to a ruling rate of 3¾, which continues at present, with a small volume of short paper selling at lower rates.

"In the foreign exchanges there was a sharp advance in rubles, more strength in francs, a slight decline in guilders, a new low price for marks and practically no change in sterling. Imports of gold are continuing in large amounts, which have reached the total of $307,000,000 since May 11 last."

Modish Ostrich Feather Fans.

While new ostrich feather fans have the feathers clipped, smart and also ugly, others of them show all of the beautiful curl that is natural to the ostrich and are extra deep, having two rows of feathers one above the other.

Motor Boots for Women.

Motor boots for women are made like the street boot with plain pointed toe and high heel, but the upper part has a deep flange strapped over to keep out the wind. They come in tan, gray, and white, and retail at $15. While authorities say that the only smart shoe for dress wear is a plain one in quiet color, never was there put on the market a wider variety of fancy styles. The hand painted shoe caps the climax. One of these in white is of the extra high top, is laced, has an inch or more of open work on either side of the opening and over the toe, while up the sides are painted pale yellow roses. Realistic dragon flies, in color tones to match, adorn the very top. These will also retail at $15.

Rose Color in Jersey Suits.

Warm colors will please the eye in urban and suburban landscapes this coming Winter. One of these which goes out to be worn by either blond or brunette is the wool jersey suit, coat and skirt, of rose color. It has a straight band seal collar with cuffs and buttons to match. A broad rimmed straight sailor hat of velvet shown with it in rose to match makes a smart suit.

Knit Wear for Children.

Knit jersey suits for the children are selling in many colors and are increasingly popular. They come with short jersey jackets with pockets and belts, and long trousers which may or may not cover the feet. Long wristed mittens are attached to the sleeves of the coats and there are peaked caps. They come in both bright and dull color tones. They sell in many qualities to suit purses of different capacity.

Novel Effects in Foxskins.

To meet the demand for broad collar and cape effects in women's wear, the fur man is making up some of his fox skins in different form. Instead of being brought together in a round, fluffy neck piece, the skin is made up its full width. This gives quite a different effect not only in the shape but in the color. At the top and lower edge of the broad collar there is a line of the white or lighter shade of the fur according to the color of the fox, which is on the under side of the animal and is next the neck of the wearer when the skin is made up in the usual way.

Novelties for Holiday Trade.

Clothes for the Little Ones.

Manufacturers show vivid and warm colors in the clothes for the little tots as well as for their elders. Nothing is prettier for a little girl than a rough cloth coat of deep orange. This will have a belt and pockets of similar style to those worn by grownups. Corduroys are useful coats that are sold for the children, and a covert color broadcloth coat with a narrow seal collar that makes a little girl look like a miniature of her mamma, is smart and becoming. Hats for the children match the coats. A soft hat of orange velvet is shown to match the orange coat and like the hats for older people it is ornamented with embroidery. The soft velvet tam which is not always good on grownups is sold in goodly numbers for the children and is always suitable and becoming.

New Dolls from China.

Quite new in the way of dolls are a lot from China. The usual Oriental doll which has been familiar from many years, and which comes in all prices, from a few cents up, is Japanese. The new Oriental dolls are entirely different and have an artistic value not only in the costumes but in the faces which have human characteristics. A Chinese bride has a lovable expression as if she were a real little woman. These little brides wear a typical Chinese bridal dress of bright scarlet silk beautifully embroidered and with little shoes to match. Though only dolls, they are dressed with correctness and wear three coats, two under the outer one, not seen, but with costume value. Other dolls, little men and women, wear short coats and trousers, the former of blue silk and the latter of pink. The brides cost $9, and the other dolls, a boy student included, cost $2.70 each at retail.

Designs in Glassware.

Materials for glass making are so high that, with the scarcity of importations, the dealers catering to the cheaper class of trade in glassware are buying little. The five and ten cent stores are among those which cannot afford to buy glassware at the present prices. There is little that is new shown in the domestic glass, but among the newest is the blue bird design which has been out for some time on pottery and porcelain, but is a more recent arrival on glass. There are tea sets in this glass, sugar bowl, creamer and pitcher, and a butter dish, which sell at wholesale for prices making it possible to retail them at about $1.25 the set. A berry or fruit set, with bowl and six small dishes, would retail for about $1.50. Twilight wisteria glass is new this season. It is a soft, peculiar shade, really more of a wine color. It comes in vases of simple lines, baskets for flowers, lemonade pitchers and glasses, etc. A plain ewer and wash basin, which are sold for homes where there is no running water in the sleeping rooms, are plain white glass. They have not a large sale.

Wamsutta Sheetings Again Go Up.

	Wamsutta.	New Bedford.	Percale.
5-4	.24	.25	.28
48 inch	.26	.27	.30
50 inch	.27	.28	.31
6-4	.30	.32	.35
65 inch	.36	.38	.46
8-4	.42½	.45	.55

10-4	.47½	.50	.60
11-4	.52½	.55	.65
12-4	.62½	..	..

The last price list issued on these goods was sent out on Sept. 14. Compared with it, the above figures in several instances show advances ranging from 1 cent to 2½ cents a yard.

PLANS TRADE WITH CHINA.

New Company to Operate from Atlantic, Pacific, and Gulf Ports.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Organization of the Chinese-American Exchange Company, a shipping corporation which proposes to inaugurate a general mercantile trade between China and American ports on the Pacific, Gulf, and Atlantic, was announced here tonight. It is headed by Dr. Clarence J. Owens, managing director of the Southern Commercial Congress, and is understood to have the active backing of that organization.

Those interested contemplate the establishment of regular sailings between Norfolk, Charleston, Wilmington, Savannah, Jacksonville, Mobile, and Galveston on the East Coast, and San Pedro, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Portland on the West Coast. At Portland connection will be made with another fleet plying to and from the Chinese treaty ports.

The company's Chinese correspondent will be Kai Fu Shah.

GASOLINE OUTPUT GROWS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Vast increase in the production of raw gasoline from natural gas resulted from expansion of the casing head gasoline industry the last calendar year.

The Geological Survey announced today that 65,364,665 gallons of raw gasoline were extracted and sold in the year. That was a gain of 22,712,033 gallons, or 53 per cent., over 1914. An average price of 7.9 cents a gallon for the unblended product was received at sources of production, and the entire market value of the year's output was $5,150,823, a gain of $2,044,914, or 66 per cent., over 1914.

It is estimated 24,000,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas was utilized in the manufacture, with the average recovery 2.57 gallons of gasoline a thousand feet.

Oklahoma led in production with more than 45 per cent. of the total. California, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Illinois were next in order of production.

Help Wanted!
This is the cry that is going up all over the United States. Newspapers are filled with advertisements for help, employment agencies are sending out into the highways and byways for men, labor is at a premium throughout the country, and its share of the profits of industry is greater than ever before.
How great this increase has been, and what the general labor situation is at the present time, are strikingly told in this week's issue of The Annalist.
The Hon. Paul M. Warburg of the Federal Reserve Board discusses the means that should be employed by the business interests of the United States to conserve the enormous store of gold in this country against the time when the nations of Europe will inaugurate and carry out their plans to replenish their gold reserves.
The Open Market with its bids and offers for unlisted securities, Annalist Barometrics, the monetary situation and Stock Exchange transactions of the week are regular weekly features.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION IN AMERICA AND EUROPE

At the beginning of last week and again at its close, after a reaction, the general level of prices on the Stock Exchange established a new high record. The reaction came on Monday after a violent up-rush of prices particularly in a few of the most favored stocks, including United States Steel. The setback was very sharp, but owing to the extent of the preceding advance the average price of fifty leading issues showed a net gain on Monday as on all the other days of the week up to Saturday.

This fact in itself furnishes convincing proof of the confident spirit which has animated public buying. That, however, is not all that it shows. Even widespread public confidence would hardly have sufficed to carry prices on upward with but a momentary halt after the sharp decline encountered on Monday were it not that the stock market itself, as well as business at large, was in an unusually strong position. That is much to be able to say of a stock market after it had established a succession of new high prices and after it had attained a volume of trading exceeding any recorded in over nine years. That combination of circumstances might have indicated the culmination of the rise, but actually it did not.

The upward movement was resumed and prices carried to still higher levels, and this despite the fact that the belief was widely held, more in Wall Street apparently than outside of it, that the time had come for the market to move more quietly and for prices to settle down for a time. The latter did not happen and the former occurred only to slight extent, for after falling from 2,300,000 shares to about 1,500,000 shares the dealings before the close of the week had again gotten up to 1,750,000 shares. That is very great activity.

Such a volume of business sustained over a considerable period is possible only when the public rather than Wall Street itself controls the stock market. That sort of control of the market almost inevitably carries with it the hazard of expanding the market excessively with the usual sequel of either violent or prolonged reaction and sometimes a combination of both. But the signs of excess such as lead to the wearisome decline after wild speculation have not shown themselves. And the speculation itself, apart from a few exceptional instances, has not so far in this movement assumed the reckless aspect which in the past has indicated and very soon brought retribution in the shape of severe reaction.

The speculation this September was much less wild than the speculation in September a year ago. The wild movements in the war stocks, the unbridled dissemination and acceptance of every prediction, however wild, whether in respect to earnings or in respect to prices, and the clogging of loan accounts with an excess of unseasoned stocks have not so far reoccurred. There can be no doubt that taking the market as a whole high prices, if prices be high, are better warranted now than they were a year ago. There can be no doubt of this for the simple reason that there is no doubt that earnings in many directions are larger now than they were a year ago, and securities have back of them the great additions which have been made to property, to working capital and to surpluses through the exceptionally favorable results which have attended this record year in American trade both domestic and foreign.

Moreover, money neither at present nor in immediate prospect, is imposing any handicap upon speculative operations. On the contrary inflationary forces are at work which in themselves would go far toward explaining the rise in prices of securities as it would the rise of commodities, though, fortunately, one can point to the solid accomplishments of industry in the shape of profits actually realized as the main explanation of a movement in the stock market which has already attained noteworthy proportion.

The sharp reaction last Monday, even though it almost immediately yielded to a renewed rise, did a great deal of good. It is unlikely that the market would have moved into new high ground at the close of the week, as it did, had a forward movement as violent as that of Monday morning been carried on for a day or two more. The break in United States Steel and in some other leading stocks performed the salutory service of showing speculators that even the sort of stock market we have had during the past month can react. They had almost come to believe that it could not, and if that belief had very long gone undisillusioned it would have been fatal to the security of the market. Prices did break and very many people took profits on the break or on the subsequent recovery, and the market was all the better off for that profit taking.

Those who took profits, however, were for the most part those who held stocks for speculation rather than for investment. There was no indication that stock owned outright outside of Wall Street came into the market. Had it done so in any great volume the floating supply would have been increased to an extent which would have compelled a longer process of digestion which would have precluded the speedy and substantial upturn in prices which took place later in the week.

Investors seem content with their investments and are apparently more inclined to add to them than to liquidate any part of what they have owned. This seems true of railroad stocks as well as of the seasoned industrials, for despite the emphasis laid upon railroad handicaps the market has easily taken all the railroad stocks sold, advancing prices the meanwhile. There are railroads which are in weak position, as there are industrials and other classes of stocks in weak position, but the results of operation in recent months have greatly strengthened the railroads as a whole and have put many of the stronger properties in a position in which it is not at all strange that investors are interested in them.

One of the very interesting questions bearing on the technical position of the market has to do with the extent to which the floating supply of stocks, compared with a year or two years ago, has been increased by the very heavy selling by Europe. Most of the foreign liquidation was in bonds, which in ordinary course go more quickly as well as more directly into the hands of investors than do stocks, but the amount of the stocks brought back to this market was very large. Of railroad stocks alone no less than $218,000,000 par value of an estimated market value of $132,000,000 were brought back in the year ended July 31 last. And to this must be added a very large amount of industrial stocks.

A broad market requires a larger supply of stocks than a narrower market, and the market of late has been broad enough to hold, in the shape of a floating supply, a very considerable increase in the volume of stocks. It is highly improbable, however, that even the bulk of the stock sold by Europe has been added to the floating supply, by which chiefly is meant the stocks held on margin as distinguished from the stocks held outright by those who have bought without any present purpose to resell. Particularly is it unlikely that railroad stocks bought back from Europe were added mostly to the floating supply, for this European liquidation went on during a time when there was no large speculative buying of railroad securities. No doubt the floating supply of stocks has been increased, but it does not appear to have been increased in proportion to the increase in the speculative demand for stocks. That is another reason why prices have been advancing. The setback which the market encountered on Saturday, the second of the week and the only one which resulted in a net decline for the day, was prompted in large measure by the news from Germany concerning the agitation there for a resumption of unrestrained submarine warfare. It is true that the rise in prices to a new high level had invited profit-taking sales, but the fall on Saturday was more than could readily be attributed to week-end profit-taking, considering the temper which the market had shown throughout the week. Here in miniature is an illustration of the danger to which the market, after a period of expansion, is exposed through the receipt of some unpleasant and unexpected news. Traders should so order their accounts as to reduce the ill results of this danger to a minimum.

PARIS MARKET IS FIRM.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 1.—The month-end settlement passed satisfactorily, but money was dearer, daily loans bringing 4 per cent. Profit-taking in American coppers developed during the week, and there was a further fall in Russian industrials, but both recovered toward the close. Rubber shares were firm, in sympathy with London quotations on the commodity. Renewed demand for certain French war stocks was in evidence. Transactions in Spanish external funds were limited in volume, but the general tone was firmer than in the previous week.

Rentes sold at 62 yesterday, but the war loan was unchanged. Military successes promise to help the new issue, the demand for which is already very large. The issuance of defense obligations has been suspended until further notice. The moratorium has again been extended for three months.

Finance Minister Ribot says that heavy increases in taxation, both direct and indirect, are inevitable next year, and that this foreshadows a complete revision of the present fiscal system. A decision by the Chamber of Deputies on a new fiscal policy is imperative before the end of this year.

The exchanges are easy. The official quotation on sterling is 27.84, but there were dealings early today at 27.79. Dollar cables closed at 5.84, the Treasury Department intervening to prevent too rapid a fall.

LONDON MARKET YIELDS.

Fresh Government Borrowing Depresses Prices for Stocks.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The continued splendid war news gave the markets great encouragement early in the week, but in the latter part, although news was as good as ever, prices fell sharply owing to the belief that fresh British Government borrowing was imminent. This belief was confirmed by the offer this morning of 6 per cent. three-year Exchequer bonds at par. The bonds will be on sale daily until further notice, like previous issues, and will be free of tax to foreigners.

It is believed that the bonds will be well taken, the Government having reduced the rate offered on yearly Treasury bills to 5½ per cent. Much money hitherto subscribed to these bills should flow to the new issue of Exchequers, while by not making a longer dated issue the necessity is avoided of raising the rate on the old 4½ per cent. war loan, which retains the privilege of conversion into any new long loan.

The decision to borrow for a short period again indicates strong official belief that with the coming of peace short loans could be funded on a basis well below present rates. Nevertheless, the rate of interest now offered displeases holders of the old war loan who naturally are disappointed at again missing the opportunity to convert their holdings into a new long loan. The depressing effect of the new issue on existing security values is generally regretted. However, despite this week's falls, irredeemable securities are still valued higher than short issues. The best British railway bonds, for instance, are obtainable only on a basis to yield less than 5 per cent.

Apart from this new issue the week was uneventful. Reduction of dividends by British-owned Argentine railroads did not disappoint the market.

The money market was firm owing to the keen demand for December Treasury bills from the Bank of England. With the turn of the month money market prospects are easier. It is not expected that bankers' balances will be quickly depleted by the new Exchequer issue.

TAX EXEMPT IN NEW YORK
Improvement & Refunding Mtge. Gold 5s
DUE JAN. 1, 1962

The $1,500,000 bonds secured by this mortgage have a closed first lien, subject to the prior lien, if any, of $250,000 First Mtge. Bonds which matured in 1909, on the entire property of the Company.

They are guaranteed, principal and interest, by the New York Railways Company, under the terms of a lease which also provides for dividends of 18% per annum on the $600,000 Capital Stock of the 23rd Street Railway Company.

This rental was promptly paid throughout the receivership of the Metropolitan Street Railway System, and the lease was assumed by the New York Railways Company in 1912, after a year's trial operation, and with the consent of the Public Service Commission.

Investigating for Many Years

That is what we have been doing with public utility properties and public utility securities. Our organization is trained to do that one thing.

You can, we believe, receive a fair rate of return, and be amply protected; for example, we suggest for your consideration, the

The dividend is amply protected.

Send for a Descriptive Circular Today.

PRESERVING PROFITS

In bull markets such as we are now experiencing there is an insistent demand for investment issues into which to place profits, in order that they may be preserved. For the same reason, safe investments are sought out for all forms of surplus funds.

An investment in the preferred stock of Cities Service Company, one of the largest and strongest gas, electric light, power and electric railway organizations in the United States, not only insures the holder the safety of his principal, but also pays him an attractive monthly income.

Personal or written inquiry invited.

Tax Exempt 5½% Bonds
Issued and safeguarded under the Straus Plan
Each bond is a direct first mortgage—each issue secured by a Trust Deed on high grade real estate in New York or some other large city.
Each property securing a bond issue is a new, high grade, well located building and land, valued at 50% to 100% more than the total loan.
Each bond issue is amortized, about one-twentieth of the entire number of bonds being paid off each year without releasing the mortgage.
Each property earns a sufficient net rental income to meet the interest on the bonds and the serial principal requirements, with an ample surplus.
Each issue of bonds is purchased outright by us, with our own funds, and thoroughly safeguarded, before being offered to the public.
Each investor purchasing securities of us has found them to be completely satisfactory, and no one has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any investment sold by this House.
You will be interested in our current investment list, describing well diversified bonds—most of them tax free in New York State—and yielding 5½%.

Railway Investors' League

Mr. Howard Elliott, in his annual report to stockholders of the New York, Ontario & Western Railroad, makes this appeal:—

"Your assistance is needed in adjusting the relations of the company to the public authorities both State and National."

After dwelling on rates and regulations and the enactment of the Eight-Hour Railroad Law recently passed by Congress, Mr. Elliott says:—

"These men in common with a large number of men engaged in similar work on other railroads, or about 350,000 in all, were able to obtain from Congress this law because they worked together. There are more stockholders of all railroads in the country than of all these men, and yet their influence is not exercised. The Managers of railway property are trying to do their full duty to the public, to the employees and to the stockholders, but they cannot do so successfully if one party, the employees, are to exercise such large powers, and the two other parties possessing equal, if not greater powers, sit idly by and do nothing."

The Railway Investors' League has been formed to supply the co-operation which Mr. Elliott and other railway executives have called for. Prospectus and membership blanks will be sent on request to 61 Broadway, New York City.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL GAINS.

Record earnings are reported by the Illinois Central Railroad for the fiscal year ended June 30. Gross earnings were $69,077,342, an increase of $6,965,790, and net earnings $17,903,615, an increase of $3,767,259. There was an increase of $4,948,403 in non-operating income, and the income balance was $11,654,633, which is $4,949,374 more than in the previous year.

President C. H. Markham says: "The volume of freight traffic handled and the revenue derived therefrom were the largest in the company's history. A large portion of the increased revenue this year was undoubtedly due to a recovery from the depression in business existing last year. There was, however, a substantial increase in both the volume of tonnage and revenue over the year ended June 30, 1914, during which year the company moved a larger volume of freight and received greater freight revenue than in any previous like period."

N. Y. U. to Open Wall St. Class.

Classes in the Wall Street Branch of New York University, room 519, Broad Exchange Building, will begin this afternoon at 5:15 o'clock. The subjects for each day are: Monday, contracts, commercial Spanish, fire insurance, and brokerage and accounting; Tuesday, law of banking and commercial paper, investments and business English; Wednesday, railroad bonds, money and banking, elementary foreign exchange, and accounting, I. and II.; Thursday, corporation finance, advanced foreign exchange, preparatory accounting, and banking practice; Friday, accounting practice, economics, financial investigation, and public utility investments.

THE PENNSYLVANIA COMPANY FOR INSURANCES ON LIVES AND GRANTING ANNUITIES, PHILADELPHIA—TRUSTEE

Free of Pennsylvania State Tax

Interest payable without deduction of normal Federal Income Tax

COMPANY was incorporated in Pennsylvania in 1899 and is engaged in the manufacture and sale of commercial automobile trucks of 1½-2 tons capacity. Its trucks are owned and operated by over 4,000 different concerns, comprising firms of the highest business standing in the United States. The Adams Express Co. owns and operates over 400 Autocars.

PROPERTY—The general offices and plant of the Company are located on the Main Line of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Ardmore, Pennsylvania. The Manufacturers' Appraisal Company, under date of September 26, 1916, states that the replacement value of the Company's property at present prices is in excess of $1,400,000.

SECURITY—The bonds will be secured by a first closed mortgage on all the property of the Company.

From October 1, 1916, to April 1, 1918, the Company will covenant to maintain quick assets in excess of all liabilities (other than this issue), of not less than $1,250,000, of which not less than 50% shall consist of cash and accounts and notes receivable in the Company's hand not discounted, and from April 1, 1918, to October 1, 1921, the Company will covenant to maintain said net quick assets in an amount not less than $250,000 in excess of the total amount of bonds of this issue outstanding at any time.

EARNINGS—The books of the Company, as audited by Messrs. Lybrand, Ross Brothers & Montgomery, show net earnings for the past two years and eight months of over $500,000 per annum after making ample allowances for depreciation.

CAPITAL STOCK—Outstanding $2,000,000.

LEGALITIES subject to the approval of George Wharton Pepper, Esq., and Messrs. Roberts, Montgomery & McKeehan.

DELIVERY, IF, WHEN AND AS ISSUED TO US

PRICE—100 AND INTEREST, YIELDING 5 PER CENT.

Pending the conclusion of necessary legal work and the delivery of the definitive bonds, we are prepared to deliver temporary receipts of The Pennsylvania Company for Insurances on Lives and Granting Annuities, Trustee, bearing interest at the rate of 5%.

NOTICE OF SALE.
In the Matter of the Sale of Trust Property Under Deed of Trust of Western Canada Public Utilities, Limited, to Montreal Trust Company, Trustee.
DATED MARCH 1ST, 1913.

Default having taken place on September 1st, 1915, in the payment of the interest due and payable on that day of the Six Per Cent. Three-year Collateral Gold Notes of Western Canada Public Utilities, Limited, dated March 1, 1913, secured by Deed of Trust of said Company to the undersigned Trustee, dated March 1, 1913, and such default having continued for a period of thirty clear days, and still continuing, and default having taken place on March 1, 1916, in the payment of the principal moneys secured by said notes, and still continuing, and the whole amount of the principal of said outstanding notes, to wit, $3,195,000, face value thereof with interest thereon being overdue and unpaid.

Now, Montreal Trust Company, as Trustee under said Deed of Trust, and pursuant to the terms and provisions thereof, and having been thereunto duly requested in writing by the holders of more than fifty per cent. in amount of all said notes issued and outstanding, hereby gives notice that it will on the 17th day of October, 1916, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, sell at public auction to the highest and last bidder at its office, No. 142 Notre Dame Street West, in the City of Montreal, Province of Quebec, Canada, all and singular the following bonds and shares of stock held by it as Trustee under said Deed of Trust, and all the estate, right, title and interest, claim, demand and benefit and equity of redemption of said Western Canada Public Utilities, Limited, its successors and assigns, of, in and to the same, viz.:

$4,000,000 principal face amount of five per cent. thirty-five-year first refunding mortgage bonds of Western Canada Power Company, Limited, together with all unpaid interest thereon, secured by a certain deed of trust and mortgage made by Western Canada Power Company, Limited, to The Royal Trust Company, Trustee, of the City of Montreal, dated March 1st, 1913, and represented by The Royal Trust Company's interim certificates.

Also 25,050 shares of the capital stock of Western Canada Power Company, Limited, of the par value of $100 each, said shares being ordinary shares, and which have now been reduced to 5,010 shares of the par value of $100 each in accordance with the provisions of by-law No. 56 of said Western Canada Power Company, Limited, approved by the shareholders of said Company at a meeting held July 15th, 1916, and confirmed by Supplementary Letters Patent dated the 21st day of July, 1916.

The said sale will be made in the following manner and upon the following terms and conditions:

All of said securities so to be sold will be offered in one lot and as an entirety. On acceptance of any bid the successful bidder shall pay to the undersigned an amount equal to ten per cent. of the bid, either in cash or in cheque certified by a National or State Bank or Trust Company situate in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, or by a chartered bank carrying on business in the City of Montreal, Province of Quebec, and shall also forthwith enter into an agreement in writing with the undersigned in appropriate form whereby he shall bind himself to pay the balance of his bid at the office of the undersigned, No. 142 Notre Dame Street West, in the City of Montreal, within twenty days after such acceptance or such additional time as the undersigned upon request may in writing allow.

Any successful bidder, upon payment in full of the purchase price in the manner and within the period herein limited, shall be entitled to receive delivery of the securities in negotiable form.

In case any successful bidder shall fail promptly and fully to perform any of the obligations provided in this notice to be performed by him, the sum deposited by said bidder, whether paid in cash or represented by cheque, shall forthwith be and become absolutely the property of Montreal Trust Company as Trustee under said Deed of Trust, not as a penalty imposed upon such bidder but as liquidated damages suffered by such Trustee; it being expressly agreed by each and every bidder that in such event the damages suffered by such Trustee would be substantial but incapable of measurement.

The purchaser or purchasers shall have the right to make payments in whole or in part of the balance of the purchase price by delivery of notes in negotiable form secured by said Deed of Trust, said notes to be received in whole or part payment of said balance of purchase price at an amount equal to the sum which would be received in respect of such notes upon the distribution of the proceeds of said sale, as in said Deed of Trust provided.

The undersigned reserves the right to adjourn such sale and to sell upon such adjourned day upon announcement of such adjournment at the sale and without further or other notice thereof.

Said sale will be made subject to all the terms and conditions contained in this notice.
Dated September 22nd, 1916.

FORECLOSURE SALES.

In pursuance of an interlocutory judgment of partition and sale duly made and entered in the office of the Clerk of the County of New York in the above entitled action on the 20th day of July, 1916, I, the undersigned referee in said judgment named, will sell at public auction at the Exchange Salesroom, Nos. 14 and 16 Vesey Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, County of New York, on the 9th day of October, 1916, at 12 o'clock on that day by Samuel Goldsticker, Auctioneer, that portion of the premises situated in the County of New York, directed by said judgment to be sold and herein described as follows:

"ALL that certain lot, piece or parcel of land with the building thereon erected, situate, lying and being in the City of New York, bounded and described as follows:

"BEGINNING at a point on the southerly side of 158th Street, distant westerly, 730 feet and 2 inches from the southwesterly corner of 158th Street and the Boulevard (11th Avenue,) and running thence southerly, parallel with the Boulevard, part of the way through a party wall 100 feet; thence westerly, parallel with 158th Street, 18 feet and 8 inches; thence northerly, again parallel with the Boulevard, part of the way through another party wall, 100 feet, to the southerly side of 158th Street, and thence easterly along the said southerly side of 158th Street, 18 feet and 8 inches, to the point or place of beginning, said land lying in Sections 8, Block 2134, on the Land Map of the City of New York, subject, however, to the covenant and restrictions contained in a deed recorded in the office of the Register of the City and County of New York in Section 8, Block Series of Conveyances Liber 7, page 304, and in two agreements recorded in the same Liber, pages 302 and 414."

The approximate amount of taxes, assessments and water rates which are to be allowed to the purchaser out of the purchase money, or paid by the referee is $1,050.

CITATION.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

United States of America, Southern District of New York, ss.:

Whereas, a petition was filed in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York on the 19th day of September, 1916, by The Cunard Steamship Company, Limited, owner of the steamship "Lusitania" and her pending freight, for limitation of its liability for all loss, damage or injury caused by or resulting from the sinking and total loss of the said steamship "Lusitania" on May 7, 1915; and

Whereas, the said petitioner filed with the Clerk of the said Court on the 19th day of September, 1916, an ad interim stipulation in the sum of $100,000, duly approved, undertaking to pay into the Court within ten days after the entry of an order confirming the report of the Commissioner to be appointed to appraise the amount or value of the said petitioner's interest in the said steamship "Lusitania," and her pending freight, the amount or value of such interest as thus ascertained, or to file in this proceeding a bond or stipulation for value in the usual form with approved surety in said amount;

Now, therefore, in pursuance of a monition issued by the said Court to me directed and delivered, I do hereby cite all persons claiming damages for any and all loss, damage or injury caused by or resulting from the said sinking and loss of the steamship "Lusitania," to file and make due proof of their respective claims before Alex Gilchrist, Jr., Commissioner, at his office at Room 347, U. S. Court House and Post Office Building, New York City, on or before the 26th day of December, 1916, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, and also to appear before the said Court at the Court Rooms thereof in the Post Office Building, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on the 26th day of December, 1916, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, and answer the petition herein; otherwise they will be defaulted and debarred from participation in the said proceedings.

Dated, New York, September 19, 1916.

LORD, DAY & LORD, Esqs., Proctors for Petitioner, 49 Wall Street, New York City.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—At the suit of the United States demanding forfeiture thereof under the provisions of the Pure Food and Drug Act of June 30, 1906, Sec. 10. I have seized and hold 80 cases of condensed milk.

Notice is hereby given that the cause is appointed for trial at the U. S. Court and Post Office Building, Manhattan, New York, on October 16th, 1916, at the opening of Court. All persons are notified then and there to appear and defend their interest, if any, in said goods. All not appearing will be defaulted.

Dated Sept. 27th, 1916.

THOS. D. McCARTHY, U. S. Marshal.
H. S. MARSHALL, U. S. Attorney.

BANKRUPTCY NOTICES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—In the Matter of J. E. Manix Company, Alleged Bankrupt.—In Bankruptcy.—No. 21,810.

Upon the annexed petition of Josef Frenkel, verified the 23rd day of September, 1916, and upon the affidavit of Burnett O. Weekes, verified the 13th day of September, 1916, and upon the affidavit of Melvin H. Greenhall, verified the 28th day of October, 1915, and upon the affidavit of Charles T. Letson, verified the 28th day of October, 1915, and upon all the papers and proceedings had herein,

Let all the creditors of the J. E. Manix Company whose names and addresses are hereto annexed and all others whose names and addresses are unknown who may have any claims, show cause before me or one of the Judges of this Court at a Term thereof to be held in the Post Office Building, in the City and County of New York, on the 6th day of November, 1916, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon of that day or as soon thereafter as counsel may be heard, why an order should not be made herein forever barring the claims of the said creditors from any further participation in the above estate, in the event that said creditors fail on said day to prove a valid claim against the above estate, and further let John J. Morris, as Receiver, show cause why an order should not be made directing him to turn over to Josef Frenkel such moneys as may be found in his possession after the payment of all debts which may be proven herein.

Let service of a copy of this application together with the annexed petition by mail upon all the creditors whose names and addresses are hereto annexed on or before the 10th day of October, 1916, be deemed good and sufficient service.

Let service of a copy of the within papers if made upon John J. Morris as receiver on or before the 3d day of October, 1916, be deemed good and sufficient.

Dated, New York, September 27, 1916.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Frosts, mostly heavy, were general Sunday morning in the Middle Mississippi and Ohio Valleys, Tennessee, the lower lake region, and the interior of the Middle Atlantic States and New England, with killing frost as far south as Southwest Virginia. General high pressure prevailed over this area and extended through the Southern States, with fair weather except in the Florida Peninsula. Temperatures have risen somewhat in the East, but have again fallen decidedly throughout the Northwest and the extreme West. Generally fair weather Monday over the districts east of the Mississippi River will be followed by rain Tuesday in the upper lake region and the Lower Ohio Valley.

FORECAST FOR TODAY AND TUESDAY.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

$246,000 FOR STATE IN SULPHUR SHARES

Reappraisal of Frasch Estate Increases Its Value by Nearly Five Million Dollars.

INVENTED A NEW PROCESS

By Using Hot Water He Succeeded in Making Fortune Out of Mines Where Others Had Failed.

A reappraisal of the estate of Herman Frasch, President of the Union Sulphur Company, who died May 1, 1914, has been signed by Transfer Tax Appraiser John J. Lyons. He increases the value of the estate $4,925,265 over the amount fixed in an appraisal filed in December, 1914, which will bring the State of New York an additional tax of $240,000. William W. Wingate, counsel for State Controller Travis, got an order for a reappraisal of the Frasch estate in the Surrogates' Court just two days before the State's right to appeal from the previous appraisal would have expired.

The increase is due to a valuation of $12,003 each for the 505 shares of Union Sulphur stock held by the estate out of a total of 2,000 shares. The par value of each share is $100. The total value of the Frasch holdings is now fixed at $6,061,515, while in the previous report the valuation was only $1,136,250, or $2,250 for each share. This sum was fixed largely on the testimony of Henry D. Whiton, son-in-law of Mr. Frasch and now President of the sulphur company.

In the supplemental appraisal the gross value of the Frasch estate is now fixed at $10,485,828, subject to deductions of $307,300, which make the net estate $10,088,526. This fortune was accumulated by a man who came here in 1868 as a poor student of chemistry, and later, at the age of 22, set up a chemical laboratory in Philadelphia. He soon attracted the attention of John D. Rockefeller, and through his wonderful ingenuity became chief chemist for the Standard Oil Company. He has been accredited with earning more money for the corporation than Mr. Rockefeller himself.

The increase in value of the Union Sulphur stock from practically nothing to $12,003 a share is due almost entirely to Mr. Frasch's inventive mind and his ability to solve problems believed to be unconquerable. His work in this respect is described by Mr. Whiton in his testimony attached to Appraiser Lyons's report.

Could Not Get Sulphur Out.

The land which has been acquired by the Union Sulphur Company occupies 4,210 acres, located twelve miles from Lake Charles, La. For many years it has been the only source of the sulphur supply in this country, but recently the Freeport Sulphur Company of Freeport, Texas, which can produce 800 tons a day, has developed into a rival. Other sulphur mines in Sicily and Japan supply the foreign market and also ship to the Pacific Coast.

Describing the problem which beset Mr. Frasch when he began to study the Louisiana mines, Mr. Whiton said that the country is a swamp region lying originally eighteen feet above the Gulf of Mexico. About 800 feet below the surface are encountered limestone deposits impregnated with sulphur. They were discovered in 1868 by prospectors seeking oil. Before the Union Sulphur Company took over the mines the land had been in the hands of four different companies, which tried to bring the sulphur to the surface. All were failures because they tried to mine the sulphur as in Sicily, thinking that the formation was the same.

The unsuccessful companies sank their shafts into quicksand and lost everything they put into it. Poisonous gases were released from the sulphur deposit and killed a great many men. The last unsuccessful attempt to mine the sulphur was made by sinking a shaft lined with cast-iron rings. An attempt to freeze the ground so as to hold the shafts also failed.

Mr. Frasch began experimenting in the early 90's. He devised a method of conveying superheated water from a tremendous battery of boilers through pipes into the mine, thereby melting the sulphur. Wells similar to oil wells were drilled into the sulphur deposits and heated water sent into them through pipes. The sulphur was then melted from the limestone and then pumped through an inner pipe by compressed air.

"The whole deposit came originally from a giant geyser such as are in Yellowstone Park," said Mr. Whiton, "which have since become covered with clay and sulphur put there by water coming there from the bowels of the earth and bringing sulphur to the top with it. In these limestone deposits we have encountered enormous caverns similar to the Mammoth Cave. In one case we put in hundreds of carloads of brickbats and debris to fill the cavern without result. Then we dumped in 100,000 cubic yards of clay by means of a hydraulic dredge. Finally we abandoned it."

Failed by Subterranean River.

The entire deposit is pierced by a subterranean river, Mr. Whiton said, and when a drill enters this water it rises several feet above the ground. The removal of the sulphur has caused the land to sink from eighteen feet above the gulf to seventy-five feet below it. In 1911 the production ceased entirely and no one at the mine could solve the difficulty. It was thought that the superheated water had melted the ancient chimney of the geyser and that all the sulphur had run back into the bowels of the earth. Mr. Frasch was then in Europe and was in poor health, but he responded to an appeal to hurry to the mine.

"With his wonderful ingenuity," said Mr. Whiton, "he discovered the difficulty. He found that the physical culture which had taken place throughout the deposit due to the removal of the sulphur had shifted the paths of the subterranean river, which is cold water, to such an extent that it was taking all the heat units out of our superheated water and reducing the temperature so low that we couldn't melt the sulphur.

"He developed a method which he patented, of sinking wells into the deposit and taking off the enormous quantities of cold water. We took off as much as 9,000,000 gallons a day and finally succeeded in bringing enough cold water up to let the hot water do its work. We have kept at it ever since and hope we can keep ahead of it."

The testimony showed that the sulphur taken out is 99 per cent. pure, and that at the time of Mr. Frasch's death there were 900,405,657 tons in stock, while the world's annual requirement is only 400,000 tons and the amount needed here is 200,000 tons.

The report shows that not long before Mr. Frasch's death he transferred his Union Sulphur holdings to his daughter, Mrs. Frieda Frasch Whiton, but she made an affidavit that the stock really belonged to him and should be appraised as part of his estate. In appraising the value of the sulphur stock the balance sheets of the Union Sulphur Company were examined. They showed that the net assets, exclusive of the surplus sulphur, were $5,480,732, and that the present value of the sulphur on hand was $8,127,225. The appraiser estimated that the potential value of the sulphur ready to be sold as soon as required was $11,704,771. The net assets of the sulphur company were appraised at $24,007,096, or $12,003 a share for the 2,000 shares.

The report does not disclose the holders of the remaining stock in the company, but it is understood that the Rockefellers have a large holding, and that the late H. McK. Twombly was a stockholder. Frederick W. Whitridge, President of the Third Avenue Railway, who is Vice President of the Union Sulphur Company, has a valuable block of the stock.

Mr. Frasch left a life interest in $50,000 to his son, George H. Frasch, and gave a life interest in $5,019,263 to his wife, Elizabeth Ilies Frasch. All the remainder of the estate went to the daughter, Frieda Frasch Whiton.

NEW NEGRO TROOPS PARADE IN FIFTH AV.

ADDRESSED BY GOVERNOR

Whitman Presents Colors to the Fifteenth Infantry — Col. Hayward Commands Regiment.

The Fifteenth Regiment of Infantry, New York National Guard, the first negro regiment to be organized in the State, yesterday at noon received its colors from Governor Whitman, and passed in review before him in front of the Union League Club, at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street. Thousands of negroes lined the Avenue above and below the club, and applauded the marching of the soldiers, the addresses of the Governor and Colonel William Hayward, the incidents of the ceremony of presenting the colors—and Bert Williams's impromptu equestrian act.

Williams, the darky comedian, is also inspector of small arms in the regiment, with the rank of Captain. He is on the staff of Colonel Hayward, the Public Service Commissioner, who is commander of the regiment, and, as such, he was privileged to ride behind the Colonel at the head of the marching men.

The regiment came down from its armory at 132d Street and Seventh Avenue, to the Grand Central on the subway, and there formed in line, the staff officers mounting horses to lead the regiment west in Forty-second Street. Bert's horse, a light gray charger, began to waltz about the street the moment the Captain-comedian got into the saddle.

Colonel Hayward gave the command to march. The band struck up "Onward, Christian Soldiers." The long column moved—and Williams's horse, ears straight back, tail out, and feet flying, dashed ahead. The rider was taken by surprise, but clung to his saddle and succeeded in stopping his ... as soon as the animal had put a satisfactory distance between himself and the band. The horse even consented to wait, though rather impatiently, at Fifth Avenue until the regiment had caught up, and Bert was in his place when his line turned south in the avenue.

Colonel Hayward and his staff, as they turned into Fifth Avenue, were applauded by thousands in front of the Union League Club—and Captain Bert's temperamental mount once more abandoned the parade. Down the avenue the animal rushed, Bert staying in his seat, but apparently his self-confidence had been left with the regiment. He did not even notice that the runaway was dashing straight at four active motion picture cameras set to record the approach of the regiment, and eagerly putting on film every one of the multitudinous movements and expressions registered by himself and the horse.

Two mounted policemen at Thirty-ninth Street stopped the runaway and saved Bert—the whole action also occurring in the focus of the cameras. The policemen held the animal's bridle until he seemed quiet and then let go. The rescue accomplished, the applause broke out again, and Bert's horse made another dash. But a traffic policeman at the corner caught him at his fourth leap—and Bert didn't stay to continue his act any longer. He slid from his saddle to the ground and planted the well-known Williams feet on the pavement with more emphasis than he ever waved them over the footlights.

Governor Whitman, in presenting the colors to the regiment, spoke to the men on their duty as members of the National Guard. The regiment was authorized by recent legislation. Most of its staff officers are white men, but its line officers are negroes.

GILLENDER ESTATE GROWS.

Is Worth $2,000,000, Will Contestants' Attorney Believes.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 1.—Charles W. Cobb of San Francisco, former Federal Assistant Attorney General, said tonight that evidence which might break the will of Miss Jessie Gillender had been obtained here in a will made in 1912. Miss Gillender, whose home was in New York, left an estate, valued at approximately $1,000,000, to New York charities. Several weeks ago a contest was started in New York courts by relatives, and in support of this litigation Mr. Cobb has been questioning those who knew the woman in this city.

Before leaving for San Francisco tonight Mr. Cobb said that a number of Miss Gillender's relatives lived in Los Angeles and San Francisco. Among these are Fred Harkness, a ball player. The contestants living in this city are Mrs. Edward Molster, Katherine and Susan Harkness, Mrs. Mollie Plough, William Harkness and Mrs. Alice Barcellas. In San Francisco the relatives are Fred D. Harkness and two brothers.

Shortly after the will was filed the contest was brought by Mr. Cobb and Charles O'Sullivan of Wall Street. They set forth two complaints, charging undue influence and mental incompetency.

"It is in support of the claim that Miss Gillender was unbalanced that I have questioned witnesses in Los Angeles," Mr. Cobb said. "She imagined that she was penniless and she lived at times as if she had nothing. There will be many sensations when the case is tried and it is likely that it will be shown that Miss Gillender left an estate worth $2,000,000 instead of half that amount.

REVALUE DOELGER ESTATE.

New Appraisal of Brewer's Holdings Is $7,316,365.

A reappraisal of the estate of Peter Doelger, the brewer who died Dec. 15, 1912, will be filed in the Surrogates' Court today by Deputy Controller Boardman. The net value of the estate has been increased $200,179. The new total value is $7,986,152, and the net value under the new appraisal is $7,-816,365.

The increases are due to a higher valuation for the large realty holdings which were estimated at $5,396,022 in the original appraisal and at $5,496,557 in the reappraisal. The chattel mortgages on saloons which the brewer held have a face value of $833,773, but in the original appraisal the actual value was fixed at only 15 per cent., or $125,161, while in the reappraisal the percentage is 25 per cent., or $208,694. The brewing business was originally appraised at $416,853, but the value is now fixed at $519,842.

Sakatani Busy in Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—Baron Yoshiro Sakatani, who was formerly Japanese Minister of Finance, and recently Mayor of Tokio, took luncheon as the guest of John Wanamaker, visited Independence Hall and addressed the Sunday School of Bethany Presbyterian Church today. At Independence Hall the glass case in which the Liberty Bell stands was opened and the Baron was permitted to touch the relic.

$400,000 IN 10 DAYS FOR JEWISH CHARITY

100 COMMITTEES AT WORK

Business Men Support Movement Heartily — 100,000 Members Expected.

The Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of New York City, which has for its purpose the centralization of the collection of funds for Jewish philanthropic institutions, has announced that the first ten days of its campaign for subscriptions for next year's work brought in pledges for more than $400,000. At this rate the minimum estimate of $2,000,000 for next year's needs will be reached before Dec. 1. One hundred trade Chairmen are canvassing every trade in the city. It is expected that the federation will reach for the first time thousands of individuals who have hitherto not been touched by the appeals of particular institutions.

Jacob Wertheim, Chairman of the Committee on Canvass, said yesterday that the increased contributions from business men were the most gratifying feature of the campaign.

"It is they," he said, "who have most frequently been annoyed by the recurrent appeals for contributions, first from one institution and then from another. With the assurance that the federation, when fully organized, will do away with charity balls, entertainments, bazaars, and separate appeals from individual societies, they are making generous increases. The business man realizes also that the economy resulting from one collection department for a hundred or more institutions, replacing the individual collecting department in each, will result in providing each institution a larger fund with which to carry out the objects for which each has been primarily established.

"Every Jew in New York who can give $10 or more to charity may become a member, and the federation will apportion all moneys received in accordance with the wishes of the contributors. We hope before the campaign is over to have more than 100,000 contributors.

The Committee on Trades is being assisted by a committee of women, including Mrs. William Einstein, Mrs. Sidney C. Borg, Mrs. Samuel Elkeles, Mrs. Alexander Kohut, Mrs. Israel Unterberg, and Mrs. Henry Goldman.

Fireman Killed by Fall from Truck.

Thrown from a fire truck yesterday, Raphael Fox, 31 years old, a fireman, of 737 Crotona Parkway, the Bronx, suffered injuries from which he died in Red Cross Hospital. The truck, which is stationed at Amsterdam Avenue and 101st Street, was responding to a false alarm sent from West 101st Street. As the machine turned out of Amsterdam Avenue into 101st Street, Fox was thrown from the running board, falling on his head. He died before he could be placed on an operating table.

PLANS ANTI-CATHOLIC TOUR.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—The Rev. Dr. Augustus E. Barnett announced his resignation today as rector of the Reformed Episcopal Church of Our Redeemer, at Sixteenth and Oxford Streets, and his intention of going on a lecture tour of the country for the next two years for the purpose of spreading the propaganda of "God, Home and Country." The purpose of the organization which he represents is the complete elimination of Catholics from public office.

Dr. Barnett admitted that he was National Registrar of the secret organization known as the Order of P's. He intimated strongly when questioned that his lecturing would be directed along the lines of increasing the membership of that order.

When he was asked whether his lectures would be political he said that they would be patriotic in character, and that he would not take any partisan stand in the present campaign.

While the Order of P's have not indorsed either Hughes or Wilson, The American Citizen, with which Dr. Barnett is closely associated, recently attacked the Wilson Administration savagely for the appointment of Catholics to Federal positions, winding up an editorial article with the statement that Hughes was the more acceptable of the two candidates.

GREEK LINER FUMIGATED.

Case of Smallpox Keeps Themistocles a Day in Quarantine.

The Greek liner Themistocles, which arrived yesterday morning from Piraeus, was detained all day in Quarantine because a steward died of smallpox on the voyage and was buried at sea. The 587 passengers in the steerage were removed to Hoffman Island for observation, and the ninety-three cabin passengers and crew were vaccinated.

As the former were not quartered near the steerage they were permitted to land later in the day, after the vessel had been fumigated. The crew will not be permitted to go on shore for three days. A second-cabin passenger died of typhoid fever, and was also buried at sea.

Same HUDSON SUPER-SIX Again Breaks Ocean to Ocean Record

On Return Trip Across America It Beats Best Previous Time and Establishes World's Endurance Record

The same Hudson Super-Six Touring Car which ran from San Francisco to New York in 5 days, 3 hours and 31 minutes, started back from New York on its arrival there and again made the trans-continental trip in shorter time than any other car ever made it.

Last Spring the wonder record for the one-way trip made by a famous eight was 2½ days longer than the time required by the Super-Six.

No other automobile ever made the round-trip against time. Yet in both the going and return trips the Hudson Super-Six lowered the best previous one-way record.

In a little more than 10 days the Super-Six covered 6,952 miles.

Counting all stops, and slowing down to the speed restrictions of 350 cities, towns and villages each way, the average time from San Francisco to New York and back to San Francisco was almost 700 miles a day.

In the last leg of the return trip, between Elko, Nevada, and San Francisco, heavy mountain rains were encountered. In the going trip that distance was covered in 20½ hours. On account of the rain and mud, 35 hours were required on the return. Under similar road conditions as were met in the going trip the return would have been under 5 days.

Hudson Holds Every Worth While Record

There are no important world's records which refer to a stock car that the Hudson Super-Six hasn't won. The best former records are too easy for the Super-Six. The events are too easily won. For instance, in the 24-hour record, 1,819 miles, it exceeded the best former record by 52%.

And the Super-Six made the best time in the world's greatest hill-climb up Pike's Peak. The best time for 100 miles. The greatest distance covered in one hour and the fastest time for a stock chassis at the rate of 102½ miles an hour.

Such Endurance Is Convincing

Here we prove again that the Hudson Super-Six has more endurance than we have ever claimed for it.

What can be more convincing than that round trip across the continent made with a Hudson Super-Six light weight 7-passenger phaeton? Previous records were made with roadsters and stripped cars, but the Hudson at all times carried three, and sometimes four, passengers, and with its baggage weighed in excess of 5,000 pounds.

No Engineer Hopes to Excel It

A hundred cars have motors of like cylinder capacity. Many cars have more cylinders. But in the Super-Six vibration has been reduced to almost nothing. That adds 80% to efficiency.

The Super-Six is not one of the passing sensations. Ours is not one of those claims to motor supremacy which yields in a year or two to another. Mark what these records mean. There is plenty of evidence now to convince you that it cannot be superseded.

Save $175 Now

In the first place you can get delivery now. Last Summer thousands had to wait, and thousands must wait next Spring.

Then by buying now you can save $175. The price will be advanced December 1. The models will not be changed. You get the same Super-Six motor, the same wonderful chassis, and the same beautiful body. Your car you get now will be identical with those we shall sell after December 1, except for some minor details.
